Mere non-payment of rent is not evidence of abandonment but non-payment of rent coupled with non-occupation of land is evidence of an intention to abandon it. GOHER SHEIKH v. ALIFUDDIN SHEIKH.

——— Of appeal in toto where one of the respondents in whose favour a decree was passed jointly with others had died and her legal representatives had not been brought on the record—Civil Procedure Code, Act V of 1908, Order XXII, rule 4. In the present case the three plaintiffs claimed to be the heirs and in possession of the property of one D. M. who was the original mortgagee. The plaintiffs claimed jointly a sum of Rs. 7,284 as due under the mortgage. The defendant admitted that plaintiffs were the heirs of the mortgagor. The Lower Court passed a joint decree in favour of the plaintiffs for Rs. 6,670. Against this decree the defendant preferred this appeal on 1st October 1915. It was admitted that Musammat H., one of the three plaintiff-respondents, died in 1915 and that appellant knew of it but took no steps to bring her legal representatives, i.e., her daughters, on the record. Held, that the decree being a joint one the appeal, having abated against Musammat H., abates in its entirety, vide Order XXII, rule 4, of the Code of Civil Procedure. Bijoy Gopal v. Umesh Chandra Bose, 6 C. (2), (4), 109, 116 and 161. The words "when the abetment of an offence is an offence" do not mean "when an abetment of an offence is actually committed," but that, when the abetment of an offence is by definition or description an offence under the Penal Code, that is, when an abetment of an offence is punishable under s. 109 or s. 116 or other provision of the Code, then the abetment of such abetment is also an offence. 1. ———— Illegal cess—Rent—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 74—Regulation VIII of 1793, ss. 54 and 55—Contract. If, upon a fair interpretation of the terms of the contract, the sum claimed can be deemed part of the actual rent, the tenant is bound to pay it; if, on the other hand, the sum claimed can only be regarded as an imposition in addition to the actual rent, the stipulation for its payment is void. Under a lease of certain lands the yearly rent was specified as assessed at a certain rate, and at the and of the lease, in a clause entirely distinct from the one wherein the rent was assessed, a provision was made for the delivery of husk, which was not expressly or by implication made part of the rent. The plaintiffs brought a suit for arrears of rent on the basis of this lease, claiming a deduction of a certain sum of money for unculturable lands, and seeking to recover arrears of rent besides husk. They further claimed cesses upon the amount stated to be rent, and not upon the amount claimed as price of the husk: Held, that the sum claimed as the value of the husk did not form part of the consolidated rent, but was an independent item falling within the description of an imposition in addition to the actual rent. Sonnum Sookul v. *Shaikh Elahee Buksh, 7 W. If I fail to pay the aforesaid sum amicably then you shall deduct the same from the money remitted to me as the rent, or sue for the amount along with, or separately from, the arrears of rent. I shall not take objections thereto." Held, on the construction of the kabuliyat, that the sum of Rs. 15 was not intended by the parties to be part of the consideration for the use and occupation of the land or as part of the rent, and being an abwab was irrecoverable. Per SANDERSON, C. J.—The rule that has been followed in this Court is that each case must depend upon the proper construction of the contract before the Court and if upon a fair interpretation of the contract it can be seen that a particular sum is specified in the contract or agreed to be paid as the lawful consideration for the use and occupation of the land, i.e., if it is really part of the rent although not described as such, the landlord can recover it. The opinion of the majority in Radha Prosad Singh v. *Bal Kowar Koeri, I. L. 3. ———————— Accomplice, Testimony of—Corroboration. Under s. 133 of the Evidence Act, a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. To justify the High Court in setting aside the conviction it is necessary to show not only that there is no corroboration, but that the Judge, taking all the evidence together, was wrong in acting on it. Where, immediately after a dacoity and before the arrival of the police, one of the accused who had been caught made a confession to a private person, naming the other persons concerned in it except two, one of whom he named two days after in his confession to the Magistrate, which agreed with the evidence subsequently given by the informer, both the confessions being afterwards retracted, and another accused made a confession naming all the persons mentioned by the approvers, the two accused and the latter having been arrested at different times and places, and there was evidence that some of the dacoits were seen in company together shortly before the dacoity and that they were absent from their homes shortly after it: Held, that the confessions of the two accused and the other facts were sufficient corroboration of an approver, who had been believed by the Judge and assessor, as against the co-accused who had not made confessions. The goods clerk was further charged with having committed an offence under s. 477A, and the Appellant with abetment thereof. The facts appeared to be that G, the servant of a firm of merchants, loaded a consignment of goods on behalf of the firm at the Appellant's station but less than the actual weight was entered in the books of the Railway Company and the freight credited to the Company was based on the false weight, and a sum of Rs. 2 more was alleged to have been paid by G and appropriated by the accused. Held, per NEWBOULD, J. That G was not an accomplice within the meaning of that word as used in ss. 114 (b) and 133 of the Indian Evidence Act even if he was a party to a conspiracy to defraud the Railway Company in as much as he was not concerned in the offence under enquiry and the Sessions Judge did not misdirect the Jury when he told them that they should hold the Appellant to [illegible] G's evidence be [illegible] that it was unsafe [illegible] it was corroborated in material particulars. III of 1899), ss. 449, 580.* Where after the passing of an order of demolition under s. 449 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, negotiations have been going on between the person directed to demolish an unauthorised erection and the Corporation, the receipt of rates and taxes by the latter on re-assessment of the whole premises including the portions objected to, during the period of such negotiations, is not an acquiescence on their part in the continued disobedience to the order so as to disentitle them from proceeding with the prosecution for such disobedience after the failure of the negotiations. 3. ———— when knowledge comes after act. There can be no acquiescence without full knowledge both of the right infringed and the acts which constitute the infringement. There is a distinction between acquiescence occurring while the act acquiesced in is in progress and acquiescence taking place after the act has been completed, for a mere delay to take legal proceedings cannot by itself constitute a bar to such proceedings unless the delay on his part, after he has acquired full knowledge, has affected or altered the position of his opponent. 4. ———— what amounts to—Doctrine not to be invoked in favour of party taking possession of land by wrongful means. The plaintiff sued for recovery of possession of land on declaration that it was included within his tenancy under the defendants landlords who had induced him to give up possession of the land upon a promise to pay consideration for it or in exchange to give lands situated elsewhere, neither of which, however, was given to the plaintiff. Held, that the plaintiff did not stand by in such a manner as to induce the defendants to believe that he assented to the acts of the defendants and the doctrine of acquiescence had no application in the circumstances of the case. That the defendants acquired no title to the land and the Court should not assist them in disregard of the principles of justice, equity and good conscience to retain possession of land which they had seized by questionable methods. That a Court of Equity will not have recourse to the doctrine of estoppel or acquiescence for the benefit of a party who does not come into Court with clean hands. 5. ———— Estoppel—Joint property sold by one of three brothers—other brothers standing by for years and allowing bendee to spend large sums on building operations. One A. C. died in 1907, leaving to his three sons a business and immovable property including an ahata and some kucha buildings in Lyallpur which he had purchased for Rs. 125. In July 1909 S. M., his second son, sold this ahata and kucha buildings to one G. M. for Rs. 2,600. G. M. immediately began to build and spent some Rs. 3,000 on erecting a two-storeyed house on the site. In 1913 he sold this house to the Punjab National Bank and they spent Rs. 207 on alterations. In July 1916 the youngest brother and the sons of the eldest brother (then deceased) sued for possession of the property on the ground that S. M. had no right to see it without their consent. Held, that the plaintiff's long silence coupled with the fact that they knew all along of the building operations and abstained from asserting their own rights, showed that they acquiesced in the sale and that they were consequently estopped from asserting those rights. Gopi Chand v. Ram Chand (*177 P. ACT OF STATE.

——— Acts done by Government in exercise of its sovereign rights—Status of non-feudatory zamindars in Central Provinces—Withdrawal from non-feudatory zamindars, the Police, Excise, and Cattle-pounds administration—Withdrawal of other rights in wajib-ul-arz or administration paper—Police Act (V of 1861)—Excise Act (X of 1871)—Cattle Trespass Acts (III of 1857 and I of 1871)—Central Provinces Land Revenue Act (XVIII of 1881). The plaintiffs in these appeals were members of a group of non-feudatory zamindars in the Central Provinces whose status was in 1864 determined by the Government to be that of ordinary British subjects. When they first came by conquest or cession under British rule, the management of their estates and the judicial and administrative powers exercised by them were left in their hands as a matter of convenience or economy of administration; and in no case were they recognised as entitled to independent powers or as possessing any sovereign rights. In 1874 sanads giving them proprietary rights in the soil were granted; but subsequently at various times the Government withdrew from them the Police and Excise administration, and also the rights they had exercised in respect of cattle pounds; and in 1903 they were required by the settlement officials to execute (which they did under protest) wajib-ul-arzes containing provisions restricting their rights in various ways which they considered prejudicial to their interests and prestige. In suits brought by them against the Secretary of State in which they complained that they had been illegally deprived of rights to which they [illegible] privileges: Held, that in the exercise of the Police and Excise functions, the plaintiffs were acting not as of right, but either by sufferance or by delegation, and that the resumption of those functions by the Government was an act done by the Government in the exercise of its sovereign powers, and consequently the suits were not maintainable in the Civil Courts. The maintenance of private cattle-pounds was incompatible with the provisions of the Cattle Trespass Act and their establishment under the superintendence and control of Government, as being under the circumstances essential for the maintenance of law and order and the peace and

——— Maxim applies to actions in tort—No application to actions where contractual obligation implied by law—Government—Employment of shroff to accept Babashai coins—Shroff accepting Shikkai coins instead—The coins accepted by Mint officers—Loss to Government—Measure of damages—Acquiescence or ratification by Government. On the occasion of calling in the Babashai coins from the British villages in the Kaira District, the plaintiff was employed by Government as a shroff to examine and accept the Babashai coins only. The plaintiff worked for about a month during which period he passed 12,170 Shikkai coins as Babashai coins. At that date the Shikkai coins were not current and had only bullion value. The coins were finally sent to H. M.'s Mint, where they were melted. Government alleged that by the shroff's neglect in accepting Shikkai coins they suffered a loss of R1,758-15-1, which they asked the shroff to pay. The shroff paid R1,095. To recover the remaining R663-15-1 Government filed a suit against the shroff. The shroff also filed a counter suit against Government to recover R1,095 which he alleged were wrongfully recovered from him. Both suits were heard together. The District Judge dismissed both suits holding that Government had suffered a loss by the shroff's action, but it was compensated by the money already paid by the shroff. Against this decision both parties appealed. While the appeals were pending in the High Court, the shroff died and his son was brought on the record as his legal representative:—Held, that the maxim actio personalis moritur cum persona did not apply to the case, as there was an obligation implied by law. The shroff undertook to pass only Babashai coins; and it was an implied term of that contract that if he passed any other, and Government suffered loss, he should make it good (s. 211 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872). Held, further, that the fact that Government had kept and had the benefit of Shikkai coins was not sufficient by itself to raise any presumption of either estoppel or acquiescence or ratification on the part of Government. Held, also, that the action of the Mint officers in accepting the Shikkai coins could bind Government only so far as they had derived benefit from the action of the Mint officers; that that benefit made them liable only so far that it was to be taken into account in measuring the damages for the loss sustained by Government in consequence of the shroff's deviation from the directions given to him and the purpose of this employment. Held, therefore, that in estimating the loss suffered by Government owing to the shroff's action, the bullion value of the Shikkai coins must be taken into account, for they had, on the date they were accepted, ceased to be current coin. It is a principle that nominal damages are awarded only where there is failure to prove any appreciable damage in fact. CHUNI LAL v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1910) I. L. R. 35 Bom. 12

(c) and (d) —Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887), s. 8—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 551—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115 —Valuation for the purposes of Court-fees and jurisdiction—Suit for declaration and injunction—Rejection of plaint as not properly stamped—Appeal—Application to state a case to High Court—Summary dismissal of appeal—Application for revision—Jurisdiction.* The plaintiff brought a suit in the Court of the Assistant Resident at Aden for a declaration of heirship and an injunction with reference to certain property of the value of upwards R50,000. The claim being for declaration and injunction was, under the provisions of the Court-fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 7, sub-s. 4, cls. (c) and (d) valued by the plaintiff at R130 upon which the prescribed Court-fee stamp was R10 only. The Assistant Resident rejected the plaint on the ground that it was not properly stamped. Against the order of the Assistant Resident the plaintiff appealed to the Resident at Aden and on the 23rd September 1908 presented an application under s. 8 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) to state a case to the High Court upon certain questions specified in the application. The Resident, however, on the next day, that is, on the 24th September summarily dismissed the appeal under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The judgment dismissing the appeal was read out to the plaintiff on the 7th October following, when she attended the Court. The plaintiff, thereupon, to state a case. A question having arisen as to whether the High Court had jurisdiction to interfere in revision with any order passed by the Resident in the exercise of his Civil jurisdiction under the Aden Act (II of 1864): Held, that with regard to questions which might arise regarding cases to be stated by the Resident for the decision of the High Court under the provisions of s. 8 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) the Resident's Court is subordinate to the High Court. Under s. 15 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) as the Court of the Resident is to be guided by the spirit and principle of the laws and regulations in force in the Presidency of Bombay and that Presidency n

and in the High Co
tion as a Court of Appeal from those Courts, the provisions of the Suits Valuation Act (VII of 1887) are 'the law for the time being for the valuation of claims' in the Courts of the Resident of Aden. Held, further, that the plaintiff's claim being valued at R130 according to the law for the valuation of claims for the time being in force and according to the rulings of the Bombay High Court, it did not fulfil the requirements of s. 8 of the Aden Act (II of 1864) so as to give the plaintiff a right to demand the statement of the case upon any question of fact or law arising in the suit. The rules so made provided, inter alia, for the preparation of an assessment list containing "the annual letting value or other valuation on which the property is assessed," for complaints to the Executive Committee where any property was for the time being entered in the list or in which the entered rateable value had been increased, and for appeals against any rateable value to the Judge of the Resident's Court. Rule 12 provided that held, on a construction of the above rule, that it made the decision of the Judge of the Resident's Court in a rating appeal conclusive, and that the aggrieved party could not question it by a civil suit. Held, that the rule 12, read as it had been by the lower Courts, was ultra vires, inasmuch as a distinct unequivocal enactment was required for the purpose of either adding to or taking away the jurisdiction of a Court. See ADMINISTRATORS—

———— Suit against administrator of minor's father's estate—Limitation, date from which runs—Trustee, whether administrator is —Acquisition of property with trust funds—right beneficiary—Mis-joinder of causes of action. The period of limitation for a suit against an administrator whose administration is limited by the letters of administration to the minority of the beneficiary, begins to run from the day on which the beneficiary attains his majority. An Administrator in whom no special trust is vested for a specific purpose is not trustee within the meaning of S. 10 of the Limitation Act, 1908. Where, in one suit, the plaintiff prayed for an order directing the administrator of his father's estate to render an account of his administration, and also for recovery of immoveable property in the hands of third parties, held, that the suit was in contravention or O. II, r. 4, of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. Where a trustee makes a profit by the improper employment of trust money he is liable to make good to the beneficiary the amount of that profit in addition to the money improperly employed. But the beneficiary is not entitled to claim a title in the property acquired by the trustee by the improper use of trust funds. Even if the beneficiary in such a case is entitled to claim either the money used with interest or the property acquired with the money, limitation for the exercise of such an option would be the limitation prescribed for recovery of the money used. 1. ——— What constitutes—Admission. To constitute an admission, the document needs not to be written by the party against whom it is used: it is sufficient if it is found in his possession, and his conduct thereto creates an inference that he was aware of its contents and admitted their accuracy; but, unless this is done the document cannot be used against him as proof of its contents. What conduct would properly gives rise to such inference depends on the facts of each case. The mere fact of possession of letters is not of much value, unless it is shown that their contents were recognized and adopted by the replies elicited or the conduct inspired by them. 2. ——— By a defendant—A plaintiff may rely on the admissions of defendant as to his title in proof of his claim just as much as on any other evidence, and if a defendant goes into the witness box and admits his title there is no further onus upon him to prove it, at least as against such defendant. An erroneous statement made without knowledge in an affidavit filed as a matter of routine by a person whose authority to make it was not proved, could not bind a party to a proceeding, nor affect the character of a sale held in such proceeding under the provisions of s. 124 (Beng. Act I of 1879), so as to confer upon the auction-purchaser a right which he could not obtain by the sale itself. Janardan Singh v. *Maharajah Pertap Udai Nath Sahi Deo, R. A. There is a distinction between mere admissions and confessions which are statements either directly admitting guilt or suggesting the inference of guilt of the crime charged. The general rule in the section is further subject to that which admits statements leading to discovery whether they amount to confessions or not. Statements by an accused to police officers pointing out the places where the offence was committed by others or where he concealed himself thereafter, and the houses to which he went for assistance, whether regarded as information leading to discovery, or as statements made by him as part of his defence, are admissible in evidence as admissions. Exculpatory statements by an accused to the police as to what, according to his case, actually happened on the occasion of the commission of the offence and put forward by way of defence, are admissible as admissions, notwithstanding that they are shown by other evidence to be untruthful. So where the accused told the police that certain other persons had killed the deceased, described the occurrence, and stated that he was seized by them but escaped and concealed himself in a paddy field, that he went to the houses of several people for assistance against the murderers but was turned away as a mad man, and that he then went and slept at the house of another person: Held, that the statements were admissible in evidence. A useful test as to the admissibility of statements made to the police is to ascertain the purpose to which they are put by the prosecution. If the prosecution relies on the statements as true they may, and probably in many cases will be found to, amount to confessions. If they are relied on not because of their truth but of their falsity and as a circumstance thereby tending to prove the guilt of the accused, they are admissible as admissions. But a statement by the accused to the police that a mark found in the dhoti, which he was wearing at the time of the occurrence, was a blood stain, was held, under the circumstances (viz., the distance he was from the place of the murder and his prevarication as to the nature of the mark), to be of an incriminating character from which an inference might possibly though not necessarily, be drawn. Where the only evidence that a witness could not be found was the statement of a police officer that search had been made for him to summon him but he could not be found, that a warrant was also issued and that he was a man of another district, but no warrant was produced and there was no evidence of any attempt to serve it, or, if so, of what was done for the purpose: Held, that sufficient ground had not been established for the admission of the

the accused and incapable of explanation on any other reasonable hypothesis than that of guilt. EMPEROR v. KANGAL MALL (1905).

5. ———— Retracted confession—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 21, 30—Relevancy. For a conspiracy to wage war, no act or illegal omission is necessary; the agreement of two or more will suffice. While admissions, which include confessions, are by s. 21 of the Evidence Act, 1872, declared relevant and may be proved as against the persons making them, all that s. 30 of the Evidence Act provides is that the Court may take them into consideration as against other persons. This distinction of language is significant, co-accused alone would be bad in law. Moreover, under s. 30, that only can be taken into consideration which is a confession in the true sense of the term, so that to place any reliance on a retracted confession against a co-accused would be most unsafe. Yasin v. Emperor, I. L. R. 28 Calc. 689, referred to. A retracted confession cannot ordinarily take the place of legal proof. EMPEROR v. LALIT MOHAN CHUCKERBUTTY (1911).

The suit was contested by the adopted son and it was decided by the Court in India, on the ground of estoppel. It was however held by the Privy Council that the adoption was valid and that the adoptive mother had authority from her husband to adopt. After the death of the widow, the present suit was brought by an alleged reversioner to the estate of her husband for a declaration that the adoption was invalid and for possession of the estate. Held, per BANERJI and CHAMIER, JJ. (RICHARDS, C.J., dissenting) that widow represented the estate and the interest of the reversioners to her husband, and as the Privy Council had held in the previous suit that the widow had full authority to make the adoption that decision was binding on the reversioners and the present suit was not maintainable. Per RICHARDS, C.J. 129—Adverse possession in widow's life-time, plea of—Gift of orphan boy to be adopted by elder brother—Validity—Factum valet—Will—Construction—Authority to adopt son—Successive adoptions if valid—Gift to widow, if absolute. When a plaintiff, a Hindu, seeks to recover possession as revervided by Art. 141 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act of 1877, and not Art. 118. The limitation runs from the death of the widow when the cause of action arises entitling the plaintiff to sue for possession. Art. 118 could not be applied to this case where the reversioner had brought a suit during life-time of the widow, praying amongst other reliefs, for a decree declaring the adoption void (as contemplated by Art. 129 of Act IX of 1871 and within the period provided therein), but the Court virtually decided that the plaintiff had no cause of action for such a suit until the succession opened to him and his alleged right to recover possession of the property accrued. The alleged adopted son could not claim to have acquired title by adverse possession during the widow's life-time. A will confering on the widow power "to adopt son" and containing no special words restricting that power to one adoption, authorised the widow to adopt a second son on the death during minority of the first adopted son. Where an adoption made 48 years ago was attacked on the ground that the gift of the boy was not properly made in that it was made by his brother, both his parents being then dead: Held, that the doctrine of factum valet applied, and the adoption, the setting aside of which would deprive the adopted child of his status after it had been accepted for 48 years, should be upheld. Wooma Daee v. *Gokoolanund Dass, I. 6. ———— Custom—Agarwal Banias of Zira, Punjab—Custom—Adopted person, an orphan and married—Adoption by declaration of adoption and subsequent treatment of adoptee as adopted son—Privy Council, practice of—Concurrent decisions on fact. In this case in which the plaintiff sued for a declaration of his adoption the parties were Agarwal Banias of Zira in the Punjab and the plaintiff being an orphan and married, the validity of the adoption, if made depended upon whether they were governed by custom or by the Hindu law. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee considered that the Courts below had concurrently

ing father that a boy had been adopted and the subsequent treatment of that boy as the adopted son, was sufficient to constitute a valid adoption; and that, in fact, the defendant had so adopted the plaintiff and treated him as his adopted son. In accordance, therefore, with the usual practice as to such concurrent decisions: Held, that the adoption had been established. Owing, however, to the limited nature of the evidence as to custom among the Agarwal Banias of Zira, the effect of the decision should be confined to the particular circumstances of the case. In 1888 the plaintiff, an infant of 4 years of age, succeeded as ghatwal on the relinquishment of the office by his father. Thereafter, by an agreement between the young ghatwal, the Maharajah of Burdwan, who was the superior zemindar, and the Government, the young ghatwal relinquished the office on condition that the property should be treated as resumed by the State to be settled permanently with the Maharajah, by whom it would be [illegible]

Madho Kumari, I. L. R. 12 Calc. 484; L. R. 12 I. A., 188*, referred to. Held, further that the plaintiff, when he succeeded as ghatwal, was an infant, and as he commenced the present suit within three years from the attainment of majority, the plea of limitation could not be sustained. Held, further, that no title by estoppel accrued in favour of the purchase at the certificate sale. There was no estoppel in this case as against the decree-holder, and the appellants, as representatives of the purchaser at the certificate sale, could not avail themselves of any possible estoppel against the Secretary of State or against the plaintiff as grantee from him through the Maharajah of Burdwan. Held, further, that even if there had been any estoppel available against the Secretary of State, there could have been none against the plaintiff; none was created by reason of what happened in 1888, because the estate did not then vest in the Crown to be granted afresh to the plaintiff, nor was any created by reason of what happened in 1895, because the so-called after-acquired title of the Secretary of State was acquired by him on condition that a clear title would be granted to the Maharajah of Burdwan as zemindar and to the plaintiff as mokararidar under him. The doctrine of estoppel does not apply where an after-acquired title is taken by the grantor under a conveyance made to him as a conduit and for the purpose of vesting the title in a third person. It is otherwise where large sums are spent on tanks by mirasidars in clearing silt and in constructing masonry dams. Such acts are indicative of ownership and when they are proved to have been done for 30 or 40 years, the presumption will be that they have been done for more than the statutory period and the burden will be on the Crown to explain such acts and prove possession within the statutory period. Mere entry as poramboke in the pymash and settlement-registers is insufficient to prove the title of Government, without proof of acts of ownership. In 1890 the Secretary of State sued the then occupant for a declaration of title and assessment of ground rent, or, in the event of the defendant refusing to pay rent, for possession. Held, that the circumstances of the case warranted the presumption that the title to the land in suit was vested in the Crown, and that the possession thereof could not be regarded as adverse until at the earliest the year 1874, when the land in suit ceased to be a part of the cantonment. Secretary of State for India v. *Jagan Prasad, I. The plaintiff's father claiming to be the trustee of a temple demised temple lands in 1866 on kanom to the first defendant, and the second defendant was the ultimate assignee of the kanom interest at the date of suit. The plaintiff's claim to the trusteeship was negatived by decree of Court in 1894 when a third party was declared to be the trustee. It was found that the plaintiff was not the trustee at the date of the present suit instituted by the plaintiff for recovery of possession of the kanom lands from the second defendant: Held, that the suit must fail, as the plaintiff was not the trustee. Held, further, that the second defendant was not estopped from denying the plaintiff's right on the ground that he was no longer the trustee, though he would be estopped from denying the title of the temple. An unregistered agreement between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, that the mortgagee shall hold possession as owner will not confer an immediate title on the mortgagee, but is valid in so far as it has the effect of changing the legal character of the possession of a mortgagee into possession as owner. 18(a). ———————— The question of adverse possession is a mixed question of fact and law. The facts found by the Judge must be accepted but the conclusion drawn from them, namely, whether the possession was adverse or not, is a question of law.

To prove dispossession of one co-sharer by another, it must be shewn that there was exclusion or ouster to the knowledge of the former and this principle is applicable to all cases of co-owners and is not confined to cases where the co-owners were persons who at one time had formed members of a family.

The possession of one co-owner is the possession of all for the purpose of limitation.

There can be no dispossession by one joint tenant in the absence of an assertion of a hostile title by him to the knowledge of the other joint tenants sought to be excluded from the joint tenancy and if no notice is given to the co-sharer of of the denial of his right, the occupant must make his possession so visibly hostile and notorious and so apparently exclusive and adverse as to justify the inference of knowledge on the part of the co-owner sought to be ousted and of laches if he fails to discover and assert his rights. II, Arts. 134 and 144.* The plaintiff and the third defendant were the reversionary heirs of one C who had mortgaged the suit properties to one P. The third defendant's father purchased the properties from P in 1893 without notice of the mortgage and has been in possession of the same ever since. The widow of C died on the 6th September 1900. The plaintiff brought this suit on the 2nd Sepember 1912 to redeem the properties. The third defendant pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation: Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation. Possession held by one of the co-owners will not be adverse to the others until they have notice of the hostile claim. Though possession was hostile when it commenced, still such possession will not continue to be hostile on the accrual of a peaceful title before the completion of the adverse possession. It was found that the tank in question was not included in the putni of the plaintiffs' lessors but in the other putni as alleged by the defendant but since the date of their lease the plaintiffs had been in occupation of the tank on the basis of their lease and had in assertion of their right let it out to subtenants from time to time, mortgaged it and re-excavated it: Held, that the acts exercised by the plaintiffs in respect of the disputed tank constituted adverse possession and were sufficient to extinguish the title of the defendant's vendors on the date of the purchase by the defendant who consequently did not by his purchase acquire any title to the tank in dispute and could not successfully resist the claim of the plaintiffs for declaration of title and recovery of possession. 2. ———— Attempt to evade the provisions of the law as to the alienation of sir land—Mortgage and relinquishment of ex-proprietary rights executed by two separate documents of even date. Certain zamindars, appurtenant to whose proprietary share was a considerable area of sir land, executed on the same day in favour of creditors to whom they were indebted to the extent of Rs. 9,000, two documents. By one of these the proprietors covenanted to mortgage with possession 30 bighas of land forming part of their sir lands. They recited that they had put the mortgagee in actual possession of the land in question, surrendering all their rights in the sir and khudkasht. They further covenanted that if the mortgagees should fail to obtain possession, or if the mortgagors should after all not give up the sir land from their own cultivation, or should set up any claim to hold it as ex-proprietary tenants, then the mortgagees should be entitled to sue for their mortgage money with heavy interest and to enforce the same by sale of the proprietary rights of the mortgagors, not merely in the 30 bighas of sir land, but in a total area of 63 bighas and odd belonging to the mortgagors. The consideration of this document was stated at a sum of Rs. 8,000. A further attempt was made to safeguard the mortgagees by the insertion of a covenant that they should, further, be entitled at any time to sue for the [illegible] as security for the debt. The other document was a deed of relinquishment, by which the mortgagors under the former deed purported to surrender or to relinquish in favour of the mortgagees in return for a consideration of Rs. 1,000, their rights as ex-proprietary tenants in the 30 bighas of sir land in question. Held, that the whole transaction was but a single one effected under cover of two deeds, and was nothing more than an attempt to evade by an ingenious device the provisions of sections 10 and 20 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901. Moti Chand v. *Ikram-ullah Khan, I. rule 2. On a partition of certain revenue-paying property some land which fell to the plaintiff's share remained in possession of the defendant, who refused to vacate it. The plaintiff sued the defendant for ejectment in the Revenue Court. The defendant pleaded that he was an ex-proprietary tenant, but the Court held him to be a non-occupancy tenant and ejected him. The plaintiff had been ejected more than two years before suit. Held, that although so far as the first relief claimed was concerned the suit might be cognizable by a Civil Court, so far as the second relief was concerned the plaintiff's remedy was by suit under s. 79 of the Agra Tenancy Act, and, inasmuch as the time for filing such a suit had long since expired, there was no object to be gained by granting the first relief. An issue was framed—"Is the suit under s. 95, Act II of 1901, maintainable and cognizable by this Court"—upon which the decision was—"S. 95 of the Tenancy Act is the only section under which suits can be brought. Subsequently the lessor distrained for rent due under the lease. The lessees instituted a suit under section 142 of the Agra Tenancy Act, disputing the validity of the distraint on the ground that the mortgage debt had been discharged and the lease had therefore come to an end. In this suit the Court of Revenue found that the mortgage had been discharged. Thereupon the mortgagee instituted the present suit in a Civil Court against the mortgagors claiming possession of the mortgaged property upon the ground that the mortgage still subsisted. Held, that the decision of the Court of Revenue could not operate as res judicata. The Court of first instance (Assistant Collector), holding that the land was resumable, passed a decree for ejectment. The defendants appealed to the Commissioner, before whom it was pleaded, inter alia, that the lower Court should have proceeded under s. 158 of the Tenancy Act, but it did not appear that any finding was arrived at or any evidence given or arguments addressed upon this question before the Commissioner: Held, that in the circumstances, it did not appear that a question of proprietary title was in issue in the Court of first instance and also in the Court of Appeal so as to give appellate jurisdiction to the Civil Court and oust the jurisdiction of the Courts of Revenue. —Appeal—Estoppel. The plaintiff came into court alleging that on a partition between the defendant and himself certain plots of land had been allotted to him, but that the defendant had taken possession of them. He claimed that, under s. 34 of the Agra Tenancy Act he was entitled to treat the defendant as a tenant-at-will and he asked for a decree for his ejectment. The defendant pleaded that he was the occupancy tenant of the plots in suit; but he had never put forward the plea in the partition proceedings. He also pleaded that "having regard to the plaintiff's own allegations, the suit was not cognizable by the Revenue Court, and on that ground the suit should be dismissed." The Court of Revenue held that the suit was properly triable by it, but dismissed it upon the ground that the defendant was an occupancy tenant. The plaintiff appealed to the Commissioner, who returned the memorandum of appeal to the plaintiff, holding that the appeal lay to the District Judge. The District Judge entertained the appeal and gave a decree in favour of plaintiff. Held (1) that a question of jurisdiction had been decided within the meaning of s. 177 (f) of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901, and the District Judge, therefore, had jurisdiction to hear the appeal, and (2) that the defendant, not having raised the question of his occupancy rights in the partition proceedings could not afterwards be permitted to raise it as a defence to the plaintiff's suit for ejectment. Deo Narain Singh v. *Sitla Bakhsh Singh, I. It then added that "the suit be remanded to the lower Court for determination of the revenue payable by the plaintiff appellant." Held, that the order being one of remand no second appeal lay to the High Court; and as there was provision in the Tenancy Act about preliminary or final decrees, the order could not be appealed against as a preliminary decree. decision not relating to whole of the rights of the parties—Amendment of entry in the revenue papers after institution of suit for profits. In a suit for profits in a Revenue Court respecting an interest in a share amounting in all to 7 biswas, it appeared that the plaintiff had been during the period for which profits were claimed, and was at the date of the institution of the suit, recorded as having an interest in the whole 7 biswas. On the other hand, the Civil Court had previously decided that the plaintiff owned a one-sixth interest in half the 7 biswas, though it came to no decision in respect of her interest in the remaining half, which was wayf property. During the pendency of the suit for profits the entries in the revenue papers were amended by the revenue authorities and the plaintiff recorded as having an interest in half of the 7 biswas only. Held, that the alteration of the revenue records pending the plaintiff's suit for profits could not affect the plaintiff's rights, as they stood when the suit was filed, prejudicially. Hargu Lal v. Med Singh, 29 Indian Cases, 509, distinguished. Lachman Prasad v. *Shitabo Kunwar I. to W. & Co., a jote settlement of the land, the subject of suit 72. In a suit by the respondents for specific performance of the agreement:—Held, that the compromise was not an "agreement to lease" within the meaning of s. 17 of the Registration Act (XVI of 1908), and was therefore admissible in evidence under s. 49 of that Act, though not registered. The phrase "agreement to lease" in that section relates to some document that creates a present and immediate interest in the land, and not a document like that in the present case, from which it was impossible to say whether there would be a lease or not. Panchanan Bose v. Chandi Charan Misra, I. L. R. 37 Calc. 808, approved. Held, also, that if the agreement was regarded as being a "decree," it is exempted from registration by s. 17, sub-s. (2) (vi), and on the true construction of s. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is none the less a decree under s. 17, sub-s. (2) (vi), because, though the whole of the agreement or compromise is recorded in it, the operation of the decree is limited only to so much of the subject-matter of the suit as is dealt with by the agreement. As a decree it may be incapable of being executed outside the land of the suit compromised, but can still be received in evidence of its contents, though unregistered. Pranal Anni v. *Lakshmi Anni, I. ———— Agreement by defendants 1 and 2 to sell property to plaintiff—Subsequent sale by the same defendants to defendants 3 and 4—Suit by the plaintiff for an order to execute a registered sale-deed and for possession—Burden of proof. Defendants 1 and 2 having agreed to sell their property to the plaintiff, they subsequently sold the same property to defendants 3 and 4. In a suit brought by the plaintiff for an order to execute a deed of sale and also for recovery of possession of the property: Held, confirming the decree awarding the claim, that defendants 3 and 4 having contracted to purchase the property from the same defendants who had contracted to sell it previously to the plaintiff, defendants 3 and 4 were bound to show three things, namely, that (i) they were purchasers for value and (ii) bonâ fide, and (iii) without notice. The plaintiff under his contract having a prior equity was entitled to succeed. One who owns property subject to a charge can, in general, convey no title higher or more free than his own and it lies always on a succeeding owner to make out a case to defeat such a prior charge. AGREEMENT TO SELL—contd.

———— The purpose of earnest money. The defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff an immoveable property for R4,400 of which R700 was paid by the plaintiff as earnest money. It was further agreed that in case the plaintiff failed to pay the balance of the consideration money within the time fixed he would forfeit the earnest money. The plaintiffs failed to pay the balance and brought a suit for the refund of R700: Held, that the primary purpose of the deposit being a guarantee for the performance of the contract, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the money. Soper v. *Arnold, 14 A. relaxed in cases where the consent of the whole body of persons constituting the next reversion has been obtained. The reason for the relaxation is referred to the principle that the consent of the person who would be interested in disputing the transfer affords good evidence that the transfer was in fact made for justifying cause, that is, for legal necessity. Bajrangi Singh v. Manokarnika Bakhsh Singh, I. L. R. 30 All. 1, and Vinayak v. Govind, I. L. R. 25 Bom. 129, followed. 2. ——— Separate maintenance, grounds for—What are proper grounds. A member of the Aliyasantana or Marumakkathayam tarwad will be entitled to separate maintenance from the tarwad if there are good grounds for such allotment. What are proper grounds will depend upon the circumstances of each case. The cases show that where there is substantial inconvenience in living in the family house either on account of want of room there or because there are quarrels which make it uncomfortable to a member to live there and where there are several houses belonging to the tarwad and a member lives in one of them and where the karnavan's conduct has afforded a valid excuse for a member living away from the tarwad house, separate maintenance may be awarded. There may be other grounds which on social or economical reasons may be considered proper. Though a member of an Aliyasantana or Marumakkathayam tarwad may not be entitled to a partition or a specific portion of the income which may be an indirect method of enforcing a partition, he is still a co-owner with the karnavan of the tarwad property, and he may in a proper case be entitled to separate maintenance. Waiver (arising from conduct, etc.) is a good plea to a claim for past maintenance. Raja Yerlagadda Mallikarjuna Prasada Nayudu v. Raja Yerlagadda Durga Prasada Nayudu, I. L. R. 24 Mad. 147 followed. Considering the special and common expenses which a yejman or karnavan has to incur out of the income of the family it is wrong to award a numerically proportionate share of the income to any particular member. The law as to the respective rights of a yejman or karnavan and the junior member of the tarwad, discussed with reference to decided cases. MARADEVI v. PAMMAKKA (1913) . . I. L. R. 36 Mad. 203

3. ——— Inheritance—Woman's self-acquisition—All the members of her branch, and not her nearest blood relation alone, heirs. A female member of an Aliyasantana family died issueless leaving self-acquired property. There was no issue of her mother then living, and the only relations the deceased left behind her were her own deceased mother's sister and the issue of another sister of her mother. It being contended that the sole heir was the deceased's mother's sister as being the nearest relation to her, to the exclusion of the other members of the branch to which the deceased belonged at the time of her death:
Held, that under the Aliyasantana law all the members of the nearest non-extinct branch to which the issueless deceased belonged at the time of her death (viz., her maternal grandmother's descendants), were entitled to succeed and not only one of them, viz., her mother's sister, who is nearer in degree than others. Antamma v. *Kaveri, I. ——— Gradual accretion to an already existing lanka.—Slow and imperceptible, meaning of—Land added in the bed of the river by slow, imperceptible, and gradual river action to a known extent of land, applicability of law of accretion to. The plaintiff-respondent sued for a declaration against Government that a certain lanka or alluvial island formed in the bed of the Godavari at a place where it was both tidal and navigable, belonged to him as an accretion to his adjoining lanka. It was found by the Court below, with which finding the High Court agreed, that the suit lanka was originally formed in contiguity with the plaintiff's land, that it was formed very rapidly, and in some years, during the annual rise of the river, large additions were made, which could not but be perceptible as soon as the water subsided, that portion of the alluvial land was separated from the rest by a channel a few years before the suit and that it was not possible to say that the accretion was slow or imperceptible. Held, that the suit land was an accretion to the plaintiff's land, that in applying the rule of English law as to accretions, local physical conditions must be taken into consideration and that in the case of large rivers in India like the Godavari which on occasions leave large and sudden deposits, it is not necessary that the accretion should be slow or perceptible. Rex (nom-Gifford) v. *Yarborough, 2 Bligh (N. ———— by Court which granted it—after a revision to the High Court has been rejected. The plaintiff-petitioner applied to the Judge of the Small Cause Court, Lahore, for amendment of a decree passed in his favour. The Court held that it had no power to grant the application inasmuch as the defendant had presented a petition for revision to the High Court, which, although rejected in limine, had the effect of merging its decree in that of the High Court. Held, that a decree of a Small Cause Court is final and not appealable, and although in certain circumstances it may be set aside or modified by a High Court in virtue of its revisional powers, it must remain the decree of the Court which originally passed it when the High Court declines to interfere with it on the revision side and that the Lower Court accordingly was competent to entertain the application for amendment. O. for acquisition of immoveable property under s. 10 of the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act (VII of 1904). If not so made the appeal must abate against such respondent. ——— Consolidation of appeals—Plaint, amendment of, when allowable—Practice. The Code of Civil Procedure contains no provisions for consolidating proceedings in India. Whether the Court has jurisdiction to consolidate proceedings or not, it would only do so where the consolidation is asked for before the trial of the suits begins or where the evidence given in the two cases is common in both of them. No amendment of plaint can be allowed where the proposed amendment would take away from the defendants, if allowed, a right that they would have if the plaintiffs had proceeded against them by way of original suit. (b)—Bengal, North-Western and Assam Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887)—Second Appeal, if it lies to High Court when original appeal decided by the wrong Court.* Section 136 H (i) introduced into the Central Provinces Land-Revenue Act of 1881 by Act XVI of 1889, qualifies s. 22, cl. (b) of the original Act, with the result that under it, read with s. 3 of the Sambalpur Civil Courts Act, 1906 (Beng. Act IV of 1906), an appeal against a decree or order passed by the Deputy Commissioner acting as Civil Court lies to the District Judge. Where, in such a case, an appeal was wrongfully preferred before the Commissioner, no second appeal from the Commissioner's decision lies to the High Court. ——— Appeal, jurisdiction [illegible] Consent [illegible] value [illegible] suit—Jurisdiction cannot be questioned in appeal—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 58. The plaintiffs filed a suit for partition in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, valuing their claim at an amount which made the suit triable by that Court [illegible] r was any issue [illegible] ceeded on merits: and a decree was passed in favour of plaintiffs. The defendant appealed to the lower Appeallate Court, where he, for the first time, raised the question of jurisdiction on the strength of the market value stated in the plaint. The objection was overruled. On appeal:—Held, that the market value stated in the plaint primâ facie determined the jurisdiction. Held, further, that as neither party raised any question as to want of jurisdiction in the first Court, and as they by their conduct and silence treated the market value to be of the amount sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Court, they dispensed with proof on the question by their tacit admissions and thus the principle of law laid down in s. 58 of the Indian Evidence Act came into operation and prevented the result of the statement of the market value in the plaint. As a rule, parties cannot by consent give jurisdiction where none exists. This rule applies only where the law confers no jurisdiction. It does not prevent parties from waiving inquiry by the Court as to facts necessary for the determination of the question as to jurisdiction, where that question depends on facts to be ascertained. XLI, r. 27, and the Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to entertain it. O. XLI, r. 27, does not authorise an Appellate

Subsequently, the defendant proceeded to give evidence upon the issues raised in the case, and eventually, the plaintiff not appearing, the District Judge dismissed the whole case for default under s. 102 of the Code. On appeal to the Chief Court, the majority of a Full Bench of that Court decided that no appeal lay from an order dismissing a suit under s. 102, and the appeal was consequently dismissed: Held, by the Judicial Committee, that after the decision of the District Judge adverse to the plaintiff on the claim to recover the money paid, which left no question as to that claim open in the Court of first instance, and the abandonment by the plaintiff of the claim to damages, there remained nothing in substance to be tried; and that the case was one not proper to be dealt with under s. 102. Without deciding (as being, therefore, unnecessary) the question whether an appeal would lie against a dismissal regularly made under that section, their Lordships remanded the case to the Chief Court to decide the appeal on its merits. On the 12th June 1909, the application was again dismissed but on appeal the order was set aside and the case once more remanded on 29th January 1910: Held, that a second appeal against the order of remand did not lie under the new Code (Act V of 1908), O. In a suit to wind up a partnership and to have accounts taken, the membership of the firm was in dispute, certain persons being by the plaintiff alleged to be partners, and by the defendants to have been only employees remunerated by a share of the profits. An adjudication was made by the Trial Judge which declared that the partnership was dissolved as from 1st July 1907, and then "ordered and decreed" that "it is referred to the Assistant Referee of this Court to take the following account and make the following enquiries, that is to say, (a) to enquire who were the partners entitled to share in the assets and goodwill of the partnership business,

On an appeal by the appellants raising the question whether inquiry (a) was rightly included in the first adjudication, or whether it was not one which should have been made by the Court itself: Held (affirming the decision of the Courts below), that the first adjudication of the Trial Judge which included inquiry (a) was a preliminary decree under s. 97 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, and that the appellants not having preferred an appeal from it could not question it on appeal from the final decree. ———— Review—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLVII—Letters Patent, 1865, cls. 10, 39—Sanction for prosecution—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195. An order sanctioning prosecution made in the course of a disciplinary proceeding against an attorney under cl. 10 of the Letters Patent of 1865, is not governed by cl. 39 and therefore against such an order no leave to appeal to the Privy Council can be given. Clause 39 of the Letters Patent empowers the High Court to declare the fitness of an appeal to the Privy Council in any matter, not being of criminal jurisdiction, if it is a final judgment, decree, or order of the Court, made on appeal or in the exercise of original jurisdiction. A proceeding under cl. 10 is a disciplinary power which does not fall under any of the jurisdictions specified in the Letters Patent, and thus is not governed by cl. 39. I, r. 1 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) which declares the persons who may be jointed in one suit as plaintiffs. A suit to set aside an adoption is brought by the presumptive reversioner in a representative capacity and on behalf of all the reversioners. The act complained of is to their common detriment, just a the relief sought for is for their common benefit Under the above rule the contingent reversioner may be joined as plaintiff in the presumptive reversioner's suit, and, if so, it follows that on his death the "next presumable reversioner" is entitled to continue the suit begun by him. The two kinds of suits which the Indian law permits to be brought in the life-time of a female owner by reversioners for a declaration that an adoption made by her is invalid, or an alienation effected by her is not binding against the inheritance [see articles 118 and 125 of schedule I of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908)], although they differ in character, will be found to be the same in both

B. 734,* and Bozson v. Altrincham Urban District Council, [1903] 1 K. B 547, referred to. In a suit for damages for an alleged breach of contract for the sale of cotton, the contract contained an arbitration clause, and the defendant applied, under section 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), for a stay of proceedings, with a view to the issues being referred to arbitration under that section. The Trial Judge granted a stay, but on appeal the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind reversed that order and refused to stay the proceedings. On an application to the Judicial Commissioner for a certificate under section 109 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908, with a view to appeal to the Privy Council, the Court of the Judicial Commissioner being of opinion that the order refusing a stay was a "final order," granted a certificate, under section 110, that the value of the matter in dispute exceeded Rs. 10,000; and the appeal came to His Majesty in Council. On a preliminary objection by the respondent that the order refusing a stay was in fact not final and that the appeal did not lie: Held, that the order under appeal did not finally dispose of the rights of the parties, but left them to be determined by the Courts in the ordinary way. It was therefore not a "final order" within s. 109 of the Civil Pocedure Code, 1908, which relates to appeals to the Privy Council; and appeal was therefore dismissed. Nor should the pronouncement of the Trial Judge with respect to their credibility be put aside on a mere calculation of probabilities by the Court of Appeal. ——— When should reverse trial Judge's estimate of evidence. Per Richardson, J.—A Court of Appeal should in general be slow to differ from the trial Court on a question of fact depending on the credibility and veracity of witnesses. But there are cases where the trial Judge has approached the evidence from a wrong standpoint or has applied to that evidence wrong standards of probability or improbability. If a trial Judge says that a servant speaking for his master ought never to be believed, the appeal Court is not obliged to accept his estimate of the servant's evidence. In such a case the question is not merely a question of the credibility of the particular witness, the witness has not been given a fair chance. There are verdicts or findings which are contrary to the weight of evidence. Hem Chandra Roy v. Bepin Behary Saha Sardar . . . . . 24 C. W. N. 800

Subsequently when assets were needed to bring about a composition with the creditors, the wife executed a deed of gift covering most of the said properties in favour of the husband who thereafter died. In a suit by the wife for the cancellation of the second deed of gift alleging it to have been executed under undue influence, the Subordinate Judge gave a decree to the Plaintiff. On appeal, the High Court remanded the case to the lower Court for finding as to whether the first deed was a genuine transaction. ——— When will upset Trial Courts decision in collision case—General principle that decision must be consistent with case made by parties—Cases where Courts of Appeal should not upset Trial Court's decision unless convinced that it is wrong. It is absolutely necessary that the determination in a cause should be founded upon a case either to be found in the pleadings or involved in or consistent with the case thereby made. The fundamental principle that the plaintiff cannot be permitted to follow a line of attack which the defendant had no opportunity to meet is of special importance in collision cases, where the accident happens very often in an entirely unexpected manner and in an extremely short space of time. Held, on a consideration of the circumstances, that this was the class of cases where a Court of Appeal should in order to upset the decision of the Trial Court not merely entertain doubts whether the decision below was right but be convinced that it was wrong. The parties to the cause are entitled, as well on questions of fact as on questions of law, to demand the decision of the Court of Appeal, and that Court cannot excuse itself from the task of weighing conflicting evidence and drawing its own inferences and conclusions though it should always bear in mind in deciding a point on which there is a conflict of

1. ———— Letters Patent, 1865, cl. 15—Order of Judge refusing to decide whether arbitrators are going beyond scope of their authority—"Judgment"—Appeal—Construction of submission to arbitration—Insurance against fire—Liability of Company for further loss. An order of a Judge dismissing a petition to revoke a submission to arbitration on the ground that the arbitrators are going beyond the scope of the reference is a "judgment" within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent and as such is appealable. Such an order compels a party to submit to the jurisdiction of arbitrators though he complains that no such jurisdiction exists. It decides a question of right, namely, whether or not he is by the terms of reference to arbitration deprived of his right at common law to have the dispute decided in the ordinary way in a Court of law. It goes to jurisdiction and is not passed as an exercise of discretion. The loss or damage by fire which is insured against in a policy of insurance cannot include loss caused by deterioration of the property insured consequent on neglect (if any) of the Insurance Companies to take care of it if they have taken possession. A loss so caused is not an inevitable or direct consequence of the mischief by fire. It is only where mischief arises from fire (in fire insurance cases) and from perils of the sea (in marine insurance cases) and the natural and almost inevitable consequence of that mischief is to create further mischievous results that underwriters become responsible for the further mischief so incurred. Montoya v. London Assurance Company, 6 Ex. 451, 458, referred to. Even if a Civil Court possesses inherent jurisdiction to supersede an arbitration proceeding under its orders, such jurisdiction should be cautiously and sparingly exercised, and an application invoking such jurisdiction should at least suggest grounds for supposing that the applicant will suffer some irreparable injury if prompt action is not taken. A decree in terms of the compromise was made by the Court and the matters were referred to the arbitrators named for their decision. One of them refused to act, and the party whose nominee he was declined to make another nomination. The District Judge in the exercise of his discretion under s. 510 of the Code thereupon himself determined the matters submitted to the arbitrators, thus practically superseding the arbitration. His decision was confirmed by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner. Held (reversing the decision of the Courts in India), that the District Judge should, under s. 510, have appointed a new arbitrator, which he had power to do notwithstanding that the arbitrator refusing to act had not first consented to do so, and he was not precluded from making such appointment by the fact that the party whose arbitrator had refused to act declined to assist the Court by suggesting another name. The Court could not "proceed with the suit," which had been put an end to by the compromise, the decree on which was final; and it had no power except by consent of parties to itself decide the matters referred to arbitration. When the Court is apprised that the suit has been instituted in contravention of an arbitration agreement, the Court has a discretion to stay the suit. Such an application for stay does not constitute taking a step in the proceedings within the meaning of s. 19 so as to operate as a bar. An appeal by the defendant, on certain grounds taken in his memorandum of appeal, against an order restraining him from proceeding with the arbitration does not constitute the taking of "a step in the proceedings" within the meaning of section 19. The plaintiff, after shipment of goods, drew two bills of exchange against the defendant at 60 days' sight. These were presented by the National Bank of India, Delhi, to the defendant who accepted them; but subsequently refused to pay them upon maturity. The plaintiff accordingly sued the defendant and based his claim upon the accepted but unpaid bills, and in the alteranative sued for the price of the goods and certain expenses. The indent contained a clause that if any claim or dispute arose in connection with the contract, it should be referred to arbitration; and the defendant relying on this clause applied for stay of the proceedings under r. 18, Sch II, of the Code of Civil Procedure. The indent also contained a clause to the effect that the bills drawn by the sellers on the buyers must be accepted and paid at maturity "notwithstanding any objection the latter may have regarding or on account of any variation whatever in the terms of the indent, such objection to be settled by arbitration." Held, that having regard to s. 32 of the Negotiable Instruments Act and the terms of the indent the suit on the bills of exchange was competent and defendant could not claim a stay of proceedings under r. 18, Sch. an order for stay under s. 19 of the Indian Arbitration Act can be invoked, it must be established beyond all doubt that there is a valid submission. Where there is a submission, before an order can be made, the Court must be satisfied that there is no sufficient reason why the matters should not be referred in accordance with the submission and that the applicant was, at the time when the proceedings were commenced, and still remains, ready and willing to do all things necessary to the proper conduct of the arbitration. XLI, r. 33.* The Bengal Chamber of Commerce made an award in an arbitration proceeding in favour of one of the parties to a certain contract. On the application of the aggrieved party the award was remitted on the 22nd July, 1918, by the High Court to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce for further consideration. The Chamber, thereupon, made a fresh award on the 24th October, 1918, again in favour of the same party as at first. Both parties obtained separate Rules from the High Court—the one aggrieved by the award, to show cause why the said award should not be set aside as having been made in contravention of s. 13 (2) of the Indian Arbitration Act; the other, in whose favour the award was made, to show cause why the time for making the award should not be enlarged till the 31st October, 1918: Held, that without deciding whether there was an appeal against the order refusing to extend the time, an appeal lay against the order setting aside the award and the Court, in considering that appeal, must consider the learned Judge's reasons for his decision, and if the Court came to the conclusion that the learned Judge's reasons were ill-founded and that he was wrong in holding that he had no power to extend the time and so make the award effective, this Court would have the power to make an order for extension of time under O. XLI, r. 33 of the Civil Procedure Code: Held, also, that this case depended upon the provisions of the Indian Arbitration Act and under s. 12 of that Act the Court had power to extend the time though the time for making the award had expired and even though the award had been in fact made. Shib Krishna Dawn & Co. v. Satish Chunder Dutt, I. II s. 10—Rules and Orders of the High Court, Chapter XXIII, r. 1. The arbitrator in a certain suit made his award on the 22nd August, 1917, and on the 3rd September, 1917, the plaintiff through his attorneys applied for a copy of the award. On the 10th October, 1917, the award was received by the Registrar. Owing to the Long Vacation, the Court was closed on that date and remained so till the 17th November, 1917. On the 22nd November, 1917, the defendants filed the award in Court. In pursuance of the above mentioned application, dated the 3rd September, 1917, a copy of the award was supplied to the plaintiff on the 27th November 1917. On the 6th December, 1917, the plaintiff applied to the Court for an order to set aside the award and the award was subsequently set aside. On appeal: Held, that it was not shown that it was the duty of the respondent to file the award and that he could and should have done so between the 17th and 22nd November: Held, also, that r. 1, Chapter XXIII (of the Rules and Orders of the High Court) did not appear to be in conformity with the provisions of r. 10, Sch. II of the Code of Civil Procedure: Held, also, that if time commenced to run either on the 10th October, or 22nd November, it did not appear that the application (of the 6th December) was barred. Per CURIAM: It seems that the word "Court" in Art. 118 of the Limitation Act means "Court" and not its Registrar and "submission" means "submission to the Court" which again, according to Sch. II, s. 10 of the Civil Procedure Code, is to be done by filing the award in Court. Nabin Kally Dabee v. Ambica Churn Bannerjee, 5 C. W. N. 813, doubted. There is no statutory rule that if an arbitrator proceeds ex-parte without giving notice of his intention to proceed in that manner, the award made by him must be set aside. Where an arbitrator has proceeded ex parte without giving notice of his intention to proceed in that manner, the true test is, has the complainant who takes exception to the validity of the award been in fact prejudiced by the omission of the arbitrator to serve the special notice on him. If it is established that, notwithstanding such warning, he would not have appeared before the arbitrator, he has really no grievance, and cannot invite the Court to set aside the award on account of the alleged defect in procedure. Gladwin v. Chilcote, 9 Dowl. 550, Waller v. King, 9 Mod. 63, Wood v. *Leake, 12 Ves. 412. to vitiate the award without any imputation on the honesty or impartiality of the arbitrator, but no such irregularities were established by the appellant, on whom the onus of proving them lay. An arbitrator selected by the parties comes within the general obligation of being bound to give evidence, and where a charge of dishonesty or partiality is made, any relevant evidence he can give is without doubt properly admissible. It is, however, necessary to take care that evidence admitted as relevant on a charge of dishonesty or partiality is not used for a different purpose, namely, to scrutinize the decision of the arbitrator on matters within his jurisdiction and in which his decision is final. The limitations applicable to the evidence of an arbitrator as witness in a legal proceeding to enforce his award are stated in the case of Buccleugh v. Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R. 5 H. L. 418, but where charges of dishonesty are made the Court would reject no evidence of an arbitrator which could be of assistance in informing itself whether such charges were established. In this case the charges of dishonesty and partiality were held to have entirely failed. Where part of an award was found to be invalid as being in excess of the arbitrator's powers and it was separable from the rest, the remainder of the award being good was maintained. It is generally desirable that an arbitrator should make and retain for subsequent use, if necessary, notes of the proceedings before him; but there is no warrant for holding that in the absence of such notes an award should be set aside at the instance of one of the parties, who must be held to have known the general course of procedure, and who did not make any protest until after the making of the award with the terms of which she was not satisfied. The order does not merge in the decree. It is competent to a Court setting aside an order directing an award to be filed to declare that the decree based on the award has been vacated because the order on which it was based has been cancelled: Kshetra Nath v. *Ushabala, 18 C. Where a party's capacity to contract is restricted, the power of making a submission is in the same manner and to the same extent limited. An executor cannot make a reference to arbitration with the avowed purpose that the terms of the will may be modified and arrangements made for the management and distribution of the estate contrary to the directions of the testator. Questions of law including questions as to construction of a will may be validly referred to arbitrators. But they cannot add to, or alter, the terms of the will. A Court will not enforce an award to the detriment of persons not parties to a reference may take exception to the legality of the award. arbitrator under Sch II of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act V of 1908) fixed three months time for the submission of the award to Court and also empowered the arbitrator to extend the time for such submission from time to time by endorsement in the office copy of the order: Held, that when the Court had made the order by consent of the parties, there could be no objection to the functions of the Court with regard to the enlargement of time being delegated to the arbitrator if the parties so desired. But the arbitrator can only extend the time in such cases, before the time originally fixed for making the award had expired. If he did not do so, he was by reason of effusion of time functus officio and had no further jurisdiction in the matter. As in this case the arbitrator had extended the time after the three months originally fixed by Court had expired, the award must be set aside, although it was submitted within the time so extended by the arbitrator. If an arbitrator, unknown to one of the parties, has a personal interest in the subject-matter of the award, it would be improper that he should act as arbitrator. If, however, his interest is insignificant and unknown to himself so that it is impossible that it could have influenced his award in any way, the Court would not be disposed to set aside the award. Award made in the absence of party who withdrew from the arbitration, if bad. A suit was referred to the arbitration of three persons, two of whom were witnesses in the case, one for the plaintiff and one for the defendant. Thereafter the defendant objected to the arbitration going on and intimated that he would not call any evidence before the arbitrators who concluded the arbitration and gave an award, two for the plaintiffs and one for the defendant. The application for reference to arbitration contained a provision that the opinion of the majority would prevail but the reference to arbitration did not provide for it. Held, that there was no impropriety on the part of the arbitrator who gave evidence before his colleagues. XXI, r. 48—Repeal of s. 60 (2) (b) by the Repealing and Amending Act (X of 1914). In a suit for dissolution of marriage the defendant, who was a First Class Warrant Officer of the British Army, was ordered to pay permanent alimony to his wife (plaintiff), and maintenance to his children by her. Later, the Court having fixed the amount of Rs. 65 as payable on each account, the plaintiff applied to the Court for attachment of the defendant's salary and allowance, under the provisions of O. XXI, r. 48 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. The application was dismissed under s. 136 of the Army Act. The plaintiff having appealed, it was contended for the defendant that in view of an order made by the Commander-in-Chief directing that a certain sum be deducted from the defendant's salary for payment to the plantiff under s. 145 (2) of the Army Act (44 and 45 Vict. c. 58), on the footing that the defendant was a soldier, his pay could not be attached under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908: Held, upholding the contention, that s. 145 of the Army Act prevailed over the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code in spite of the repeal of clause (b) from sub-s. (2) of s. 60 by the Repealing and Amending Act of 1914: Held, also, that the terms of s. 4 of the Civil Procedure Code compelled the Court to apply the special rule of procedure provided by s. 145 of the Army Act in preference to the general provisions of the Code. In a suit by the previous settlement-holder of land for declaration of his right to settlement, the Civil Court has jurisdiction to see whether r. 57 has been complied with. It is not open to the Civil Court to go into the question of correctness or sufficiency of the reasons and once it appears that the revenue authorities took into their consideration the fact that preference should ordinarily be given to the settlement-holder they have a discretion in the matter. The Civil Court has power to see whether the Collector has found anything for excluding the plaintiff from the settlement, and the reasons for such exclusion may appear not only in the Collector's order but in the office-report and even in the petition of the parties or in other settlement papers. (i) of the rules framed under Regulation I of 1886 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation lays down a principle for the guidance of Settlement Officers and does not confer a right on the first applicant to a settlement. It directs that in cases where settlement is not made with the first applicant the reasons therefor should be stated in writing. It does not follow from this that if the reasons are not recorded the first applicant is entitled to a settlement. Madhab Nath v. *Myarani Madhi, I. L. ——— R. 57 of the Rules framed by the Chief Commissioner under s. 12—Re-settlement of land previously settled by lease—Jurisdiction of Civil Court to examine if Collector had in mind while making settlement the instruction in Rule as to person to whom preference to be given. Under r. 57 of the rules framed by the Chief Commissioner under s. 12 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation the previous settlement-holder is to be ordinarily given preference in resettling a land previously settled by a lease. In a suit by the previous settlement-holder of land for declaration of his right to settlement, the Civil Court has jurisdiction to see whether r. 57 has been complied with. It is not open to the Civil Court to go into the question of correctness or sufficiency of the reasons and once it appears that the revenue authorities took into their consideration the fact that preference should ordinarily be given to the settlement-holder they have a discretion in the matter. The Civil Court has power to see whether the Collector has found anything for excluding the plaintiff from the settlement, and the reasons for such exclusion may appear not only in the Collector's order but in the office-report and even in the petition of the parties or in other settlement papers. In 1909, the plaintiffs obtained from Government a lease of certain lands at Aden for the purpose of constructing salt-works thereon at the annual rental of R7,000 for the land and a royalty of 8 annas per ton of salt exported. They erected a factory for crushing salt on the land and the works first commenced to yield salt in 1911. The defendants were the assessing authority for the Aden Settlement. For the year 1909 and 1910 the defendants had, under the powers conferred upon them by Government Notifications, assessed the plaintiffs in the annual rent of R7,000 payable by them under the lease. In the year 1911, the defendants adopted a different basis of assessment. They assessed the plaintiffs on the basis of half the produce of works less 10 per cent. landlord's deductions. In support of this method of assessment the defendants relied upon a method of valuation considered to have been in vogue for salt-pans in Bombay in the year 18 ; and upon a decision which they had obtained in their favour from the Resident's Court at Aden in 1909 in respect of other salt-works at Aden to which the alleged Bombay method of assessment was applied. A question being raised whether the mode of assessment adopted by the defendants in the year 1911 was wrong and illegal. Held, that the mode of assessment was wrong and illegal as the defendants made no attempt to value the particular salt-works in question or to say whether the method they applied was such as to result in the assessment that the hypothetical tenant of these premises would pay for them. ment before he filed his appeal, makes any difference. Where the decree of the Appellate Court was the result of fraud and collusion between the judgment-debtor and the original decree-holder, it is possible that such a plea if made and proved would be a sufficient answer to a suit by the judgment-debtor against the assignee of the decree. Money realised under an invalid process of Court must be treated as money had and received to the use of the person from whom it was realised. A suit for restitution by the judgment-debtor was maintainable, where he had sought his remedy for restitution by an application made to the Court which executed the decree and it was on the objection of the defendant (assignee of the decree) that he was driven to institute the suit; the defendant cannot now be heard to say that the procedure to which he himself successfully objected was the proper procedure. [illegible] v. *[illegible] Goundan, I. 5. ———————— Alienation by judgment-debtor alleged to be pending the attachment and a fraudulent transfer to a creditor other than decree-holder—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53—Judgment-debtor preferring one creditor before others—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 240, 276, 295—Contest between private alienee and decree-holder—Continuance of attachment. The question in this case was which of two titles to the property in suit was to be preferred, that of the appellant under two deeds of sale executed in her favour on 15th July, 1907, by the judgment-debtor, or that of the respondent (decree-holder) who purchased the property at an auction sale on 23rd August, 1907, in execution proceedings under a decree, dated 3rd January, 1901, which were instituted by an application for attachment on 16th July, 1907. There were two decrees of the High Court at Calcutta, Original Side, against the judgment-debtor, of 24th August, 1896, and 3rd January, 1901, and the respondent was transferee of both decrees, which were sent to the District Court at Murshidabad for execution. On 13th June, 1902, application was made for execution of the decree of 1896, and the proceedings became execution case 8 of 1902; and the execution of the decree of 1901 commenced as above as execution case 16 of 1907. Held by the Judicial Committee (reversing the decision of the High Court), that on the evidence, and under the circumstances of the case, the appellant (plaintiff) had the better title. The deeds in her favour were not ante-dated as alleged, and there was no fraudulent transfer to her within the meaning of s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). The preferring of one creditor to another by the judgment debtor did not make the transfer a fraudulent one. A debtor, for all that is contained in s. 53, may pay his debts in any order he pleases, and may prefer any creditor he chooses. Nor was the private alienation to the appellant void under s. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, as having been made during the continuance of an attachment. The respondent's title rested entirely on the attachment in the execution case 16 of 1907, and that alone was the attachment the continuance of which could avoid the appellant's private alienation; but on the facts it did not do so. The respondent could not invoke the attachment in execution case 8 of 1902 to defeat the alienation to the appellant which was made in different execution proceedings. Nor could he with its aid rely on s. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, as entitling him to the benefit of s. 276. There were no assets in Court which was essential if s. 295 were invoked, and the only attachment within the meaning of s. 276 was that in execution case 16 of 1907 which he could not employ against the appellant. Sorabji Edulji Warden v. Order passed by Court by usurpation of jurisdiction, cannot be allowed to stand on a consideration that a similar order would have been made on the merits by a Court of competent jurisdiction. It is the policy of the law, as a question of public order, to keep inferior Courts strictly within their proper sphere of jurisdiction. It is imperative that money which has been paid out of Court under an illegal order made without jurisdiction must be brought back into court. If the money is not returned to Court by the party who took it out, the Court should of its own motion proceed to realise it by attachment and sale of his properties and by attachment of his person if necessary. Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). A Court sale of the judgment-debtor's interest in attached property puts an end to the attachment and incidentally to the attaching creditor's right of redemption under s. 91 of the Transfer of Property Act. It makes no difference that the Court sale was in execution of a mortgage decree and that the attaching creditor was not a party to the suit on the mortgage. An attaching creditor is not a proper party to such a suit. A private sale pursuant to an agreement entered into after an application for attachment but before notice is good as against the auction purchaser in the Court sale held pursuant to the attachment. After such agreement, the private purchaser is not represented by the judgment-debtor and is not bound by the order of sale made against him. Held, further that a purchaser in execution of a money-decree obtained only the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor and not also any right of the attaching decree-holder which was purely personal to him, e.g., a right to redeem. Kashy Nath Roy Chbudhry v. Sunbanand Shaha, (1886), *I. ———— Attorney discharging himself, if may detain clients' papers, pending suit—Lien in such case how secured—When discharged by client, except for misconduct, if may detain papers. SANDERSON, C J. (WOODROFFE, J., agreeing). Where an attorney, who had been acting for his client in the ordinary way, refused to go on acting for him unless his out-of-pocket expenses were paid, that amounted to a discharge of the attorney by himself and he could not claim to retain the papers when they were wanted by his former client for continuing the litigation. He would, at most, be entitled to have his lien protected by an undertaking by the new attorney. The same rule would apply where it was part of the original retainer of the solicitor that he should only be bound to act as long as the money should be supplied from time to time for the necessary out-goings. Bluck v. Lovering & Co., 35 W. R. 232, and Robins v. Goldingham, L. R. 13 Eq. 440; 22 W. R. 277, followed. MOOKERJEE, J. If a solicitor is discharged by his clients, otherwise than for misconduct, he cannot, so long as his costs are unpaid, be compelled to produce or hand over the papers: but if he discharges himself he may be ordered to hand over the papers to the new solicitor on the latter undertaking to hold them without prejudice to his lien. A solicitor could not be treated as finally discharged till the leave of the Court had been obtained. Atul Chandra Ghosh v. *Lakshman Chandra Sen, I. L. ———— Practice—Set-off—Attaching creditors. Where on an application by the defendant that satisfaction of a decree obtained against them by the plaintiff should be entered by setting-off a decree upon an award in their favour against the plaintiff, it appeared that a prohibitory order had been made against the plaintiff in execution of a decree obtained by a third party, and the attorney for the plaintiff claimed a lien for costs on such decree: Held, that the defendants' application to set-off was proper, but that this was not a case in which the Court to hold that the solicitor's lien claimed. Edwards v. v. Lathem. 41 C

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882).* A Court sale of the judgment-debtor's interest in attached property puts an end to the attachment and incidentally to the attaching creditor's right of redemption under s. 91 of the Transfer of Property Act. It makes no difference that the Court sale was in execution of a mortgage decree and that the attaching creditor was not a party to the suit on the mortgage. An attaching creditor is not a proper party to such a suit. A private sale pursuant to an agreement entered into after an application for attachment but before notice is good as against the auction purchaser in the Court sale held pursuant to the attachment. After such agreement, the private purchaser is not represented by the judgment-debtor and is not bound by the order of sale made against him. Held, further that a purchaser in execution of a money-decree obtained only the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor and not also any right of the attaching decree-holder which was purely personal to him, e.g., a right to redeem. Kashy Nath Roy Chbudhry v. *Sunbanand Shaha, (1886), I. AUTREFOIS ACQUIT—contd.

Where a prisoner is unanimously acquitted of some of the charges, and the jury are divided as to the rest and discharged, and he is "retried" under s. 308 of the Criminal Procedure passed on all the counts. S. 403 of the Criminal Procedure Code has nothing to do with pleading, being in terms a limitation on the jurisdiction of the Court, and is not to be construed with reference to the English law of criminal pleading. Ss. 271 and 272 contain all that is necessary as to pleading without reference to the English rules. Under s. 271 the accused can only plead "guilty," or claim to be tried, or he can refuse to plead, but the plea of "not guilty" is intentionally not recognized by the Code. If an accused claims to be tried he can, subject to special provisions, take any objection to his trial or conviction before the verdict of the jury and in any form. A defence under s. 403 may, therefore, be set up at any time before verdict and in any form, and the question must be decided solely according to the terms of the section irrespective of the English law. The question is one of law to be decided by the Judge without reference to the jury. Semble: That if the case was governed by English law, (i) the prisoner having, at the commencement of the retrial, made a plea of "not guilty." which was still awaiting adjudication, could not at the same time plead autrefois acquit, and that the second plea was, therefore, unnecessary and of no effect. Rex v. Banks, [1911] 2 K. B. 1095, referred to; (ii) that the proper course would under that law, have been to take a verdict from the jury at once on the plea. Rex v. Parry, 7 C. & P. 836, referred to; (iii) that under the same law, a verdict on one count and disagreement on the others would not, in the case of a retrial, affect the trial on the latter. Reg. v. Grimwood, 60 J. P. 809, not followed. S. 34 of the Penal Code must be read according to its own terms without reference to the doctrine of the English law, and applies only where a criminal act is done by several persons of whom the accused charged thereunder is one, and not where the act is done by some person other than the latter. Where, therefore, two persons fire at another and only one actually hits

Namasudra v. Emperor, I. L. R. 36 Calc. 659, not followed. There is no reason for saying that a person must be absent in order to abet under s. 109 of the Penal Code. But when the evidence shows that he was so present, s. 114 applies. Ss. 109 and 114 of the verdict of the jury to that effect has not determined any question of fact, and the acquittal has no effect on the trial of charges under ss. $\frac{302}{109}$ and $\frac{302}{114}$. Rule 52 of the Association provided that if the final award for inferiority of quality be in excess of Rs. 5 per candy, "the buyer shall have the option either to take the cotton at the allowance fixed by the arbitrators or the Appeal Committee, or upon giving notice in writing to the seller and original tenderer to refuse the same, in which latter case he may either buy in the market at a reasonable rate on account, risk and expense of the seller, or invoice it back to the seller at the market rate of the day upon which the final award shall have been made." The appellants accordingly gave the respondents notice that they refused the cotton tendered, but did not exercise either when the cotton was rejected. The appellants repudiated their liability as the breach was committed by the respondents. The respondents proposed to the appellants that the matter should be referred to the arbitration of the Association under Rule 13. The appellants protested that the matter could not be referred to arbitration, and in spite of this protest the Association appointed two arbitrators under the rules to decide the claim preferred by the respondents. The appellants submitted their contentions in writing to the arbitrators who, however, awarded the respondents' claim on the contracts and directed the appellants to pay Rs. 25,000 to the respondents. The award was confirmed by the Appeal Board. The appellants thereupon filed a petition to set aside the award contending that the arbitrators had no jurisdiction in the matter as the matter was not referable to arbitration under rule 13 and that accordingly there was an error of law patent on the face of the award. The trial Judge dismissed the application holding that there was no error of law patent on the face of the award, and that the error, if any, was latent which could not vitiate the award. On appeal, Held, reversing the decision of the trial Judge, (1) that the award of the arbitrators was based upon the erroneous construction of the terms of the contract and Rule 52 of the Rules of the Association; (2) that upon the proper construction of Rule 52 the buyer would not be liable to pay any sum of money as damages or compensation to the seller after he has rightly rejected the cotton tendered, there being no compulsion upon him to invoice the cotton back to the seller if the market had fallen; (3) that the liability imposed on the appellants by the arbitrators in spite of the breach committed by the respondents was opposed to the general provisions of the Contract Act and to the Common Law; (4) that the award should be set aside as there was an error of law patent on the face of it. Landauer v. Asser [1905] 2 *K. "BABUANA" AND SOHAG GRANT.

See HINDU LAW—CUSTOM. I. L. R. 42 Calc. 582

1. ———— Darbhanga Raj—Government revenue and cesses whether payable to Raj—Revenue not paid to Raj—Debt, whether a joint family debt—Mitakshara family—Decree against father personally—Debt not proved to be illegal or immoral—Whether the interest of the sons passes. Holders of babuana property in the Darbhanga Raj are liable to pay Government revenue and cesses to the Raj. Where the income of the babuana property was appropriated by members of the family, and the Government revenue and cesses payable were not paid, the liability to pay the Government revenue and cesses should be considered as a joint family debt and not the personal debt of the holder for the time being. Even if it were considered to be a personal debt of the father, in execution of a decree against the father alone the entire family property could be sold and not merely the personal interest of the father, as the debt could not be attached as an immoral debt. Every debt incurred by the father in a Mitakshara family not for illegal or immoral purposes is of a nature to support a sale of the entirety of the family property. In execution of a money-decree against the father alone for a personal debt of the father, the whole family property may be sold, if the debt was not contracted for immoral purposes and it is not absolutely necessary that the son should be a party either to the suit itself or to the proceedings in execution. Where it appears from the form of the suit or of the execution proceedings or from the description of the property put up for sale that only the interest of the father in the property was intended to be sold and was put up for sale, the interest of the sons would not pass by such a sale, and in such a case, the absence of the sons from the suit or execution proceedings would be a material element for consideration. Where, on the other hand, the proceedings show that the intention was to sell the entire property and the same was sold and bargained for, then the purchaser would be entitled to the whole, and the sons, though not parties to the proceedings cannot, claim their shares against the purchaser except by proving that the debt was contracted for immoral purposes. The words "right title and interest" of the judgment-debtor may either mean the share which the father might have sold to satisfy his debt or the share which he would have obtained on partition, and the question what was intended to be sold or was sold in each case will depend upon its own circumstances. Where in the sale proclamation the property to be sold at an auction sale was described as "7 as. 8 gds. 3 karas of Pandaul . . . Touzi No. 6473 . . .," i.e., the entire family property, and the property was purchased by the decree-holder for Rs. 55,000, and an application for setting aside the sale was rejected on the ground that the evidence in proof of the insufficiency of price could not be deemed good and satisfactory, and the sale was confirmed with the following order: "Whereas M purchased for 55,000 the rights and interests in the properties specified below, and thirty days have expired, and an application for setting aside the sale has been rejected the sale is hereby confirmed;" but in the certificate of sale, the description of the property was to the same effect as that in the sale proclamation, and, finally, it was not suggested that the price paid was not the full value of the property purchased. Held, that the words "rights and interests" in the order confirming the sale do not raise any ambiguity, or induce the Court to hold that only the personal interest of the father was sold and that under the circumstances the entire family property passed to the purchaser. Deendyal v. Jugdeep, *L. In a suit for the cotton, the plaintiff claimed delivery of the bales or their value, charged the Bank with conversion of the goods, and in the alternative, if it was held that he was not entitled to such relief, he claimed to stand in the shoes of the second defendant, and asked that his rights should be ascertained and declared, and that the securities deposited by the second defendant with the Bank should be marshalled in his favour. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court, and restoring the order of the Trial Judge of the same Court), that the fact that the Bank parted with the cotton

Objection was taken to the Banks raising the defence, and an application to amend the written statement was refused by the first Court. But later on the case evidence of the return of the cotton was held to be admissible in regard to the alternative claim of the plaintiff. Held, that the evidence was rightly admitted having regard to the claim of the plaintiff to marshall securities, and that if properly admitted it was admissible for all purposes. pondents were their Bankers. From 1906, the Bank had allowed the appellants' firm to overdraw their accounts under an agreement between the parties consisting of a letter in a printed form signed and given by the appellants to the respondents on 1st December annually, and providing that interest should be charged at 7 per cent. per annum, and be calculated on the daily balance due in respect of the overdraft, pledging as security the cotton stored by them in the godowns of the Bank. The practice of the Bank as to interest was to strike a balance of each of its customers' accounts on the last day of each month, and charge interest on the amount of the balance, in fact compound interest with monthly rests; but the appellants though they knew it was done never objected until after 1st August 1914. In a suit by the Bank to recover a balance due by the appellants the latter counterclaimed for damages for the dishonouring of two of their cheques. Held, that the acquiescence of the appellants for 9 years in the mode of charging interest entitled the respondents to set up an implied agreement on the appellants' part to pay it in that way, and there was nothing in s. 92 of the Evidence Act to prevent such an agreement being proved. It was found by all the Courts that the respondents were justified under the circumstances at the time in not increasing the appellants' overdraft by honouring the cheques, and had rightly refused to do so. ———— Effect of a blank draft which is not addressed to any specific banker—Negligence of customer leading to payment of forged cheque by banker—Effect of negligence when not the proximate cause of payment. The plaintiffs were a Banking Corporation with their head office at Lahore and branch offices at Amritsar and elsewhere. The defendants were a Banking Corporation having a branch at Bombay. In 1904 the plaintiffs opened a current account with the defendants and sent the defendants a list of the officers of the plaintiffs authorized to sign for the plaintiffs including the name of Madho Ram, the manager of the Amritsar office. Madho Ram had acted on occasions previous to this date as the manager of the Lahore office. It was the custom of Madho Ram when leaving the Bank premises for a short time both when acting as manager at Lahore and afterwards when manager at Amritsar to leave with the Accountant blank draft and blank letters of advice ready signed by him for use as occasion occurred. These drafts were not destroyed after his return. On the 2nd of October the defendants cashed a draft presented to them for payment for Rs. 10,000 purporting to have been signed by Madho Ram. The defendants had previously received a letter of advice also purporting to have been signed by Madho Ram. The defendants debited the plaintiffs with the payment. The plaintiffs repudiated the draft as a forgery and sued to recover Rs. 10,000 from the defendants. The defendants denied that the draft was a forgery. In the alternative they submitted that the forged draft had been paid by them owing to the negligence of the plaintiffs, and that the latter were not entitled to recover the amount of the draft from them. Held, that it was probable that the draft was one left by Madho Ram when acting as manager of the Lahore office of the plaintiffs, but that the plaintiffs were not estopped from contending that the draft was not the draft of the plaintiffs. Held, further, that it was not incumbent on the plaintiffs to contemplate the perpetration of such a crime as forgery or theft and that the negligent act of Madho Ram was not

The plaintiffs who, as one of the creditors, proved his debt and received two of the dividends due to him, was a party to the order of discharge. Under the above Ordinance a discharge operated as an extinguishment of the debt. Held, that the extinguishment of the debt by the Bankruptcy Laws of Singapore operated as a discharge of it everywhere and the creditor had no right to sue in India the debtor and his undivided sons for the balance of the debt as if it was still subsisting. Under the Hindu Law a Hindu son is not "jointly bound" with his father to pay the debts contracted by the father. Hence the said Ordinance under which a discharge of a bankrupt does not discharge a person "jointly bound" with him does not affect the undivided son. NARAYANAN v. VEERAPPA (1916)

It was given to him for the purpose of attending the trial, and the consultation was held with a view to his so doing. The practice for seniors to name their juniors, or for juniors to nominate their seniors, is contrary to the traditions of the profession and to its best interests, and such a practice ought to be discouraged. ——— Benami purchase, allegation of—Proof —Subsequent conduct—Surrounding circumstances—Motive—Suspicion only, if sufficient to justify finding of benami—Loan given by executor to person who succeeds him as executor after his death—Limitation—Previous statements, use of. Subsequent conduct of the parties affords valuable evidence as to whether the person in whose name a conveyance is taken is intended to be the beneficial owner or a mere benamidar. In cases of alleged benami purchaser, the decision of the Court ought not to be rested on mere suspicion. Reliance in such a case must be largely placed not only upon the surrounding circumstances and the position of the parties and their relation to one another, but also upon the motives which could govern their actions and their subsequent conduct. Previous statements, unless used to contradict or discount the evidence of a witness given in the suit, cannot be legitimately used, and even then the particular matter or point must be placed before the witness as one for explanation in view of its discrepancy with the evidence tendered. The principle that the effect of the appointment of a debtor to the office of the executor is that the debt due from the debtor-executor is considered to have been paid to him by himself and that the executor is accountable for the amount of his debt as assets is not applicable where the alleged loan was by a former executor to one who subsequently to his death was appointed executor and the loan was already time-barred at the latter date and there was nothing to show that the debt was kept alive up to that date. The principle that the grant of probate operates retrospectively from the date of the death of the testator did not apply here where there was an intermediate executor who created the debt for which the executor who followed him was sought to be made liable as debtor. In a suit for the construction of a will, and for the administration of the estate left by the testator, the costs, in the absence of grounds established in favour of a departure, should ordinarily be paid out of the estate. The section is clearly aimed at benami purchases at execution sales. The clear intention of the section is to stop benami purchases by making it impossible for the real owner to question the benamidar's title. Bhishan Dial v. *Ghazi-ud-din, I. L. ———— Right of benamidar to sue in his own name—Position of beneficial has long been a common practice in the country: there is nothing inherently wrong in it, and it accords, within its legitimate scope, with the ideas and habits of the people. So far, therefore, as a benami transaction does not contravene the provisions of the law the Courts are bound to give it effect. The statement of the rule applicable to such transactions given in Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, I. L. R. 37 All. 557 ; L. R. 42 I. A. 242 followed. The benamidar, though he has no beneficial interest in the property or business standing in his name, represents in fact the real owner, and is, so far as their relative legal position is concerned, a mere trustee for him. Held, (reversing the decision of the High Court), that an action could be maintained in the name of the benamidar in respect of the property, though the beneficial owner is not a party to it, the latter being fully affected by the rules of res judicata. It was open to him to apply to be joined in the action, but, whether or not he is made a party, a proceeding by or against his representative is in its ultimate result fully binding on him. A suit perty to the predecessors of the defendants, by one M in conjunction with her daughter B, and her grandson H while M was in possession of the property by virtue of her right of succession to her son S who died in infancy in 1852. H was a predecessor in title of the plaintiffs to whom in 1895 after the death of M, the then nearest reversioners conveyed all their right, title and interest in the property now in suit. It was contended by the

the alienation, were estopped and the High lge, decided in favour of that contention relying on the general doctrine of equitable estoppel embodied in s. 115 of the Evidence Act; and also were of opinion that H's purchase from the reversioners accrued to the benefit of M's vendees in consequence of the fact that he had joined with her in conveying the property to the defendants' predecessors, resting their judgment on the equitable doctrine of "feeding the estoppel" and on the provisions of s. 43 of the Transfer of Property Act. Held (reversing those decisions), that s. 115 of the Evidence Act did not apply, there being absolutely no evidence that the vendees were induced to alter their position in consequence of H's representation contained in the deed of conveyance, H was merely a passive instrument in the hands of his elders, and his statement could not have materially influenced either the vendors' or vendees' conduct in the matter. The theory that H's subsequent purchase of that property in 1895 from the reversioners should accrue to the benefit of the purchaser from M, was based on the assumption that what happened in 1880 created an estoppel against H, but that was not the case. Moreover, H did not acquire the property as a contingent reversioner to M, the title on which the plaintiffs brought the suit was based on an independent purchase by H, from the rightful heirs. ———— Proof that transfer is benami—Onus. In regard to benami transactions, Courts of law should not approach them with that scrupulous rigour which in other systems of jurisprudence may demand the existence of the clearest positive evidence that the ex facie owner of a property is a trustee for or holds the same for the interest of another. Benami transactions are very familiar in Indian practice and even a slight quantity of evidence to show that it was a sham transaction will suffice for the purpose. Still, such a transfer cannot be considered as nothing. The person who impugnes its apparent character must show something or other to establish that it is a benami or sham transaction. The decision of the Court should rest not upon suspicion but upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. MAHBUB ALI KHAN v BHARAT INDU (1918) . . . 23 C. W. N. 321

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 116 —No inference against litigant as to contents of documents he considers irrelevant—Omission of opposing litigant to put them in evidence in proper way. A Hindu taluqdar who had two wives and a Muhammadan mistress and had already made substantial provision for the latter, purchased a house with his own money in the name of the mistress, and registered the deed also in her name. He treated the house, however, as his own during his life-time, living in it, paying for repairs and taxes, and receiving rent for it when let, as did his senior widow after his death: and the mistress had no possession or use of the house. In a suit by the senior widow to eject, after due notice to quit, a tenant to whom she had let the house, whose defence was a denial of the plaintiff's title, and an assertion that he held under the Muhammadan mistress who claimed title under the deed of sale in her name of which she had obtained possession. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court and restoring that of the Subordinate Judge), that on the evidence in, and under the circumstances of, the case the deed of sale was, and had remained throughout, a benami transaction. The general rule in India, in the absence of all other relevant circumstances, laid down in Dhurm Das Pandey v. Shama Soondri Dibiah, 3 Moo. I. A. 229, that "the criterion in these cases is to consider from what source the money comes with which the purchase money is paid" followed. It is open to a litigant to refrain from producing any documents which he considers irrelevant; and if the opposing litigant is dissatisfied, it is for him to apply for an affidavit of documents and he can so obtain inspection and production of all that appear to him in such affidavit to be relevant and proper. If he fails to do so, neither he, nor the Court at his suggestion, is entitled to draw any inference as to the contents of any such documents. It is for the litigant who desires to rely on the contents of documents to put them in evidence in the usual and proper way; if he fails to do so, no inference in his favour can be drawn as to the contents of them. A tenant who has been let into possession cannot deny his landlord's title, however defective it may be, so long as he has not openly restored possession by surrender to his landlord. XI of 1825—Diara proceedings confirmed by Board of Revenue for assessment with revenue under s. 6 of Act IX of 1847—Suit in Civil Court for declaration that such proceedings are a nullity, if governed by s. 10, cl. C.) it must be shown that land has been added to any estate paying revenue directly to Government. Where the Government as "owner" of the Sunderbans granted a lease of certain lands for a certain term with a covenant for perpetual renewal on a progressive rental and, in the lease there was no distinction between "rent" and "revenue" and the relation created by it was that of a lessor and lessee, and the lessee was not allowed to claim an abatement of rent on the ground of diluvion, and in addition to his lease-hold interest his other properties moveable and immoveable were liable to be sold in the event of the accrual of the arrears of the jama reserved by the lease: Held—That having regard to the position of the Government as owner of the Sunderbans and to the terms and the conditions of the lease, the lessee in the present case was not the holder of an "estate paying revenue directly to Government," and as such Act IX of 1847 was not applicable, and that the relation between the parties was regulated by the contract between them, subject to the provisions of Reg. XI of 1825. The entire proceedings confirmed by the Board of Revenue assessing the lands with revenue in the present case under s. 6 of Act IX of 1847 were

Estate released pending appeal from order dismissing application—Effect. Some properties of the judgment-debtors, whose estate was in charge of the Court of Wards, was sold in execution of a decree on 15th April 1912. As the Court of Wards would not apply to set aside the sale, the judgment-

estate was released by the Court of Wards on the 18th June 1914, before the appeal was heard. One of the judgment-debtors, B, had ceased to be disqualified before the sale, but as there were unpaid debts of the estate, the Court of Wards under s. 13A of the Court of Wards Act, was authorised to retain possession of the estate. Held, that under s. 55 of the Court of Wards Act the application to set aside the sale was incompetent. That the release of the estate did not give a fresh start to limitation, as the judgment-debtor B not being a minor at the time the right to apply accrued, was not entitled to claim the benefit of s. 7 of the Limitation Act. ——— Institution of suit by manager to save limitation—Subsequent filing of sanction of Court of Wards after conclusion of hearing but before judgment—Suit for balances of "sale price" of "garh" if suit for rent—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 193. A manager of an estate under the Court of Wards instituted a suit to have limitation. The suit was for recovery of the balance of the sale price of a "garh" or forest and was based on a document described as an agreement for settlement of a reserved "garh" for a certain period at a "thicca jammah" providing for instalments for payment of rent and giving the defendants among others the right to cut down and sell valuable trees and to grant sub-leases of such right. The sanction of the Court of Wards was filed after evidence on both sides had been recorded and arguments heard in part: Held, that s. 55 of Act IX of 1879, which simply lays down that if a manager files a suit to save limitation, he shall not proceed with it without the sanction of the Court of Wards, is intended for the guidance of managers. It is not a question of jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit has been instituted, but it seeks to control the action of the manager, and there is nothing in the section which prevents the defendants from waiving the stay. To proceed with such a suit is not an assumption of jurisdiction which the trial Court does not possess, but is at most an irregularity which does not vitiate the proceedings. That the suit in the present case was a suit for arrears of rent and as such was excepted under s. 55 and was maintainable, being authorised by the manager. The expression "rent" has a more extensive meaning than the definition given to it in the Bengal Tenancy Act. JOY CHURN DUTTA v. SARAJUBALA DEBI (1919) . 23 C. W. N. 876

BENGAL DRAINAGE ACT (BENG. VI OF 1880).

(b) of s. 42 of the Bengal Drainage Act (Beng. VI of 1880) being recoverable under the provisions of sub-s. (1) of s. 44 of that Act as if the same were an arrear of rent, a suit to recover the same comes under cl. (8) of Sch. II of the Small Cause Courts Act and is not a suit of a Small Cause Court nature within the meaning of s. 586 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882. The mere fact of a sum of money having been declared under the Act to be payable by a landholder in respect of any land is not sufficient to make a tenant of the land liable to contribute towards it. Cl. (b) of s. 42 of the Act requires that the landholder should show in the first instance that the land of any particular tenant, against whom a claim has been made has been benefited by any scheme or works. The Commissioners' report under s. 32 of the Act cannot be treated as primâ facie evidence in favour of the landlord in a suit to recover drainage charges against tenants. Quære: Whether the power of determining any question as to the amount which any tenant is to pay in respect of drainage charges is not intended to be exclusively vested in the Collector, and whether a notice under sub-s. (2) of s. 44 would not therefore be a necessary preliminary to the maintainability of a suit to recover such charges from a tenant. BASANTA KUMAR RAI v. RAM CHANDRA ROY CHAUDHURY (1903) 17 C. III of 1884) was raised at a meeting of Municipal Commissioners, as an amendment to a substantive motion; the amendment was lost; but the same question was again raised as a substantive proposition within six months from the date of the first meeting; the proposal being carried, an assessor was appointed who revised the assessment of the plaintiff. The plaintiff applied for a review under s. 113, but the assessment was confirmed under s. 114 of the Act:—Held, that the appointment of the paid assessor was not ultra vires, inasmuch as the subject of the appointment of an assessor had not been finally disposed of at the first meeting, and therefore its re-consideration was permissible; and that, whether the assessor was or was not legally qualified to make any assessment, the validity of such an assessment when once confirmed by the Appeal Committee under s. 114 of the Act, could not be impeached. The assessment of tax with reference to the circumstances and property outside the Municipality is ultra vires. The defendant objected to the assessment and under s. 113 of the Bengal Municipal Act (III, B. C., of 1884) applied to the Commissioners to review the amount of assessment; the application was heard by a Committee under s. 114 and disallowed. It was urged that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to modify the assessment under s. 116: Held, that if the question relates to the amount of assessment according to the circumstances and property within the Municipality then the decision of the Commissioners under s. 114 is final and the Civil Court has no power to reopen the question of assessment. Here the assessment being made with respect to the circumstances and property not only within the Municipality but also outside it, the assessment was ultra vires. RAJPUR MUNICIPALITY v. NAGENDRO NATH BAGCHI (1919).

It provided that the mortgagees should enter into possession and collect the rent and pay the Government revenue and defray collection charges, etc., therefrom and retain the balance in lieu of interest. There was to be no accounting on either side and the mortgagor was to be entitled to redeem on payment of the principal sum of Rs. 252: Held, on suit by the representative of the mortgagor to redeem, brought within 60 years from the date of the mortgagee, that the suit was within time; that the mortgagee could not be considered as redeemed in the strict sense of the term from the moment when the profits received by the mortgagees became equal to the amount due to them for principal and interest, and that the mortgagor was, notwithstanding anything contained in the deed, entitled to an account of the profits received by the mortgagees. Sudarshan Das Shastri v against moveables first, even when insufficient to satisfy decree. S. 109 of Act X of 1859 contemplates the case of a single execution creditor and a single judgment-debtor; it does not specifically refer to the case of a joint and several decree against a number of judgment-debtors. Where, therefore, a joint and several decree has been passed against several judgment-debtors and the decree-holder elects to proceed against some only of them, he is bound to proceed against their person and moveable property before he can apply for execution against their immoveable property. But he is not bound before so applying to proceed against the persons and moveable properties of the other judgment-debtors. The decree-holder must first take out execution against the moveable property of the judgment-debtor against whom he wishes to proceed even when the moveable property of the judgment-debtor is insufficient to satisfy the decree in full. When once the moveable property of the judgment-debtor has been exhausted, the decree-holder can proceed against his immoveable property, and he is free to do so in successive applications, and it is not obligatory on him to seek out and proceed, upon each of such applications, against such moveable properties as may have come into the judgment-debtor's possession in the interval. Plaintiff on 9th November 1910 having sued to eject the defendant: Held, that until the Bengal Tenancy Amendment Act of 1907 came into force, the Bengal Tenancy Act applied to the case and defendant had in consequence acquired the status of a non-occupancy raiyat when the Amendment Act came into force, and this status was not affected by the provisions of s. 3 of the Amendment Act which gave a new definition of the expression "Town of Calcutta" as used in s. 1 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, making it co-extensive in area with the present municipal limits of Calcutta. ——————— Tenure-holder or raiyat—Reclamation lease if necessarily raiyati lease—"Raiyat" used loosely for all tenants—"Korfa" if means "under-raiyat only"—Suit to establish plaintiff's status as raiyat—Under-tenant if necessary party. Casual mention of the tenants as "raiyats" in judgments in suits in which no issue had been framed or question raised as to the status of the tenants cannot be regarded as the recognition by Courts of the tenants' status as raiyats. The word "raiyat" is sometimes used in official documents to mean tenants in general. A "korfa" tenant is not necessarily an under-tenant of a raiyat. He is a sub-lessee, whether of a talukdar or of a raiyat. The reservation by the chakdars of certain portions of the land for their own cultivation did not militate against the conclusion that they were tenure-holders. The definition of "tenure-holder" in s. 5 (1) of the Bengal Tenancy Act merely formulates the pre-existing law and the insertion of the words "bringing it (the land) under cultivation by establishing tenants in it" introduced no change in the law. The section subject to s. 195 applies to tenancies created before, as well as after, the Bengal Tenancy Act. In a suit to establish the status of the plaintiffs as raiyats the under-tenants are proper, but not necessary, parties. Reclamation lease, if necessarily raiyati lease, considered. BENGAL TENANCY ACT (VIII OF 1885)— contd.

The lease was an ordinary reclamation lease of the land permanently to the lessee at a fixed rent "to make it fit for cultivation according to your will and you shall hold the same by cultivating it or having it cultivated, and you shall be competent to make such other arrangements or adopt such other convenient steps as you consider necessary for cultivating the same." In a suit brought under the provisions of s. 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) for rectification of the entry by recording the defendant as tenure-holder: Held, on the construction of the Act, that in determining the status of a tenant, whether he is a tenure-holder or a raiyat, what has to be considered is (a) the purpose for which the land was acquired, and (b) the extent of the tenure or holding. Fixity of rent was no criterion for the determination of that question, for a tenure may be held at a fixed rent equally with a raiyati holding. The statutory presumption under s. 5, sub-s. (5) applied to the defendant as holding more than 100 acres, and the purpose appeared to be that the land should not be cultivated by the personal agency of the defendant himself. Here the land was leased to a man of means, a resident of another place, for the purpose of reclaiming the land, and rendering it fit for cultivation, the agency to be employed for cultivating it being left to his discretion. The Courts were right in looking at the attendant circumstances to judge of the purpose for which the lease was acquired and to determine the status of the defendant. The presumption under s. 103-B that an entry in a "Record of Rights" finally published "shall be presumed to be correct until it is proved by evidence to be incorrect," was fully rebutted by the circumstances referred to by the majority of the Courts in India in arriving at the conclusion that the defendant was a tenure-holder and not a raiyat. But where the meaning of the words in the document is unambiguous the subsequent acts of the parties are not admissible to construe it whether the document be ancient or modern. Where in a proceeding under Reg. VII of 1822 held in 1877 it was clear that there was no dispute as to the status of the tenant within s. 14 and no official proceedings were incorporated in the rubekari of settlement, the mere fact that the tenant was recorded as a raiyat does not preclude the Government from contesting his claim as such, especially as at the time of the record the sharp distinction which now exists between raiyats and tenure-holders was not so well recognized SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. GOVIND PRASHAD BARIK (1916) . . . 21 C. ——— Its effect—Presumption applicable to a tenancy existing before the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Cl. (5) of s 5 does not create any new rights or purport to affect any right created before the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy Act. It simply furnishes a mode of proof of the character of tenancies of certain descriptions. If the area held by a tenant exceeds 100 standard bighas, and a question arises as to the status of such a tenant the Legislature lays down that the tenancy is to be presumed to be that of a tenure-holder, but the presumption thus raised is rebuttable. The clause is, consequently, a provision not of substantive, but of adjective, law. It lays down a presumption and changes the burden of proof. Whereas in the absence of the presumption the party who affirmed that the tenancy was of particular description would have to give evidence in support of his contention; the presumption, where it applies, relieves the party relying thereon from the obligation to furnish such proof in the first instance. There is no valid reason why the presumption should not be applied to a tenancy which existed before the commencement of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The presumption embodied in s. 5, clause (5) does not incorporate a novel principle into our law but merely codifies what had been a recognized doctrine under the old law. The only difference caused by the adoption of the presumption is

In determining the amount of enhancement under s. 30 (b) regard must be had to the nature of the land on which rent is to be assessed. If it is upland the prices of the upland staple crop must be considered, while if it is lowland the prices of the lowland staple crop must be ascertained. It is not permissible to assess the enhancement on one kind of land by comparing the average prices of upland and lowland staple crops together. SAJIWAN MAHTO v. GULAB CHAND LAL . 1 Pat. L. Joint shebaits are, in some respects, joint trustees. Where one of two shebaits of an idol sued a tenant holding debutter land for enhancement of rent under s. 30, Bengal Tenancy Act, making the other shebait a co-trustee, and alleging that the latter had ceased to reside in the village and was no longer interested in the management of the endowed property, and the defendant shebait filed a written statement in which she stated that she had no longer any connection with the endowment and did not object to enhancement of rent at the plaintiff's instance: Held, that the plaintiff and the shebait defendant were joint landlords within the meaning of s. 188, Bengal Tenancy Act, and the right to institute the suit vested jointly in them as shebaits. Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi, 8 C. W. N. 809 : I. L. R. 32 Calc. 129, followed. That no foundation for a case of agency had been laid in this case. The statute means an agreement proposed by the landlord and the only requisite is that the document containing the terms of the proposed agreement be tendered. Where a landlord sent a draft of the proposed agreement duly stamped to the Court and the Court served on the tenant a copy identical with the draft but without a stamp on it, and it was said that it was not the original of the agreement that was tendered to

It has to be definitely found that the defendant could not be found after reasonable and diligent enquiries, and that the person on whom the notice was served was an adult male member residing with him. ——— Under-raiyat, ejectment of—Notice to quit—Length of notice—English law, if applicable. S. 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act prescribes no form of notice to quit nor has it given any indications as to the length of the notice, the reason being that the Act itself protects the under-raiyat from ejectment until the end of the agricultural year next following the year in which the notice to quit is served upon him by the landlord. The rules of English law or even of the law prevailing in the Presidency towns concerning the length of the notice, should not be applied in such matters. Where a notice to quit which was served on the under-raiyat on the 10th April 1908 (about the end of Choitra 1314) asked the tenant to leave within the first of Baisak 1315, and the suit was instituted on the 3rd August 1909: Held, that the notice was not insufficient in law. ——— Ejectment of under-raiyat holding under harsana patta not for specified time—Notice necessary to terminate tenancy—S. 85, lease in contravention of—Grantor, if may challenge validity—Estoppel. In a suit for ejectment of the defendant, an under-raiyat holding under harsana patta not for any specified time, it appeared that the plaintiff (who was the raiyat) before the expiry of a year served a six months' notice to quit on the defendant and on non-compliance therewith brought the suit more than one year after the service of notice: Held, that the tenancy was lawfully terminated and the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of the land. Per MOOKERJEE, J.—That for agricultural tenancies of this description the provision for notice is to be found in s. 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act which prescribes no form of notice and gives no indication as to its length, but only protects the under-raiyat from ejectment until the end of the agricultural year in which a notice to quit is served upon him by his landlord. Per BEACHCROFT, J.—That if it be found as a fact that a raiyat giving a permanent sublease in contravention of the provision of s. 85 (2) has induced his lessee to accept it on the faith of a representation that his own status was such as to validate such a sublease, he will not afterwards be allowed to prove in a suit against his lessee that his status was other than it was in the first instance represented to be. That it is absolutely necessary to plead estoppel if it is intended to rely on it. This is not a technical rule of pleading but a matter of substance, for if estoppel is pleaded it may be possible for the other side to shew that there could be no estoppel, the real facts being known. Per* N. R. CHATTERJEA, J.—S. 179 of the Bengal Tenancy Act does not exclude the consideration of the question whether a stipulation in a permanent mokurari lease to pay interest at a higher rate than that provided by s. 67 is affected by provisions of law other than the Bengal Tenancy Act, and although Courts should not lightly interfere with contracts between landlords and tenants in cases of permanent mokurari leases, a stipulation for payment of interest on arrears of rent at rate which is unconscionable should not be allowed to be enforced even in such cases. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to what is unconscionable and exorbitant, which must be determined with regard to the facts of each case. Interest represents compensation for the detention of the rent and a stipulation in a mokurari lease to pay "75 per cent. interest plus full damages" appears rather to have been intended as an effective means of securing punctual performance of the contract than represent the damages which the landlord was to suffer by reason of non-payment of the rent. Per RICHARDSON, J.—The lessee of a permanent lease at an invariable rent is not primâ facie entitled to the indulgent consideration which might be extended to a needy and improvident debtor in the clutches of a grasping money-lender, and though it may be that the provisions of s. 179 of the Bengal Tenancy Act must be read subject to the power of the Court to intervene under the Contract Act, they cannot be overlooked or left out of account. Stipulation to pay interest at a high rate may be proved to be one by way of penalty, but to justify an inference that it is so, it is not enough to show that it was a hard bargain. In general, evidence of facts and circumstances outside the contract is necessary to justify the Court's interference. The onus to prove such circumstances is on the lessee. The raiyat's rights in the portion having been extinguished, by the surrender or grant to the landlord, the latter took nothing. Sale of a part of a holding may be reasonably argued to be an incumbrance or limitation of the raiyat's rights in the whole and should therefore operate to prevent a surrender whether of the whole or the part. Per RICHARDSON, J. (contra). On the authorities sale of a part of a raiyati holding is not an incumbrance within the meaning of cl. (6) of s. 86 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. In a suit for khas possession of the lands, it was pleaded by the defendant that the entry being with respect to lands which did not come within the scope of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the Revenue Officer had no jurisdiction to make the entry, and as such no presumption as to its correctness arose under s. 103B (3). The landlord did not produce his papers which would have shown the origin and nature of the tenancy and the defendant stated the lands to be jote or homestead lands: Held, that though it cannot be said that no presumption arose under s. 103B (3), the presumption cannot be of such great weight as would be the case if the entry were with regard to matters which are rightly and properly included in the record-of-rights. Where the predecessor of the appellants, long prior to the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, acquired land and reclaimed it merely in order that it might be cultivated by others who would pay rent to him, whilst he resided and followed his avocations elsewhere, and had no intention of cultivating it himself: Held, that it was not a raiyati holding within the definition in the Bengal Tenancy Act, though it would be within it for the purpose of the relief given by s. 104 H of that Act. In a suit by the appellants for such relief in regard to a record-of-rights in which they were entered as tenure-holders for a declaration that they were "raiyats" and for a reduction of the rent (which had been enhanced) to a fair and equitable amount, they contended that the suit was governed, not by the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, but by the Rents Act, prior thereto in which there were no definitions of the words "raiyat" and "tenure-holder," and that a change had been made by the Bengal Tenancy Act in the meaning of those terms as interpreted under the prior Acts: Held, that the onus was on the appellants to rebut the statutory presumption that the record-of-rights was correct (s. 103B) and the holding being in excess of 100 bighas, to rebut the further presumption that the holders of it were "tenure-holders" [s. 5 (5)]; and that there was very little and doubtful support given by the documentary and other evidence to the appellants' contention, and it was not sufficient to rebut the above presumptions. There was no decision giving a universal definition of a raiyati interest as being different, prior to the Bengal Tenancy Act, from the definition given in that Act. Durga Prosonno Ghose v. *Kalidas Dutt, 9 C. On second appeal by the Municipality, held, that the Municipality was the creature of the statute with duties, inter alia, to preserve the passage along public streets. It mattered not for the Municipality whether the encroachment had been in existence for 12 years or more. Under s. 113 of the District Municipal Act (Bom. Act III of 1901) the Municipality might, on proof that the encroachment objected to was an obstruction to the safe and convenient passage along a street, by written notice require the owner to remove it. Section 122 of the Act empowered the Municipality to remove the encroachment which might have been put up after the place had become a Municipal District. In the present case the Municipality having failed to justify their action by reference to the said statutory powers, the decree was confirmed. The kowl further provided that "In respect of the abovenamed village you (grantee) are to consider yourself as a farmer thereof. You are therefore to exercise the authority vested in farmers by Chap. VI of Reg. XVII of 1827 or such as may hereafter be vested in them by any new enactment, shall also be exercised by you, and in the event of your acting contrary to the abovesaid enactments, you will be subject to such penalties as are now or may hereafter be provided for by Regulations." Subsequently some of the occupants of the village having built upon their respective lands, Government levied extra assessment from them under the provisions of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879). The grantee under the kowl himself claimed the right to levy extra assessment on the ground that the village was an "alienated" village within the meaning of cl. (19) of s. 3 of that Code, and was, therefore, not liable to the provisions of the Code. He, therefore, applied to Government for a refund either wholly or in part of the extra assessment collected by them, and the Government having refused to grant his request, he brought a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council praying (i) for a declaration that (a) the extra assessment imposed by the defendant upon lands appropriated for building sites in the village was illegal, (b) the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879) was not applicable to the village, and (c) the resolution of Government to the effect that the kowl was agricultural was erroneous, (ii) that the defendant be restrained by a permanent injunction from levying the extra assessment, (iii) that in the event of its being found that the Government were entitled to levy the assessment, it be declared that the plaintiff was entitled to receive the same, and (iv) that the amount, if any, received by the defendant on account of such assessment be awarded to him. During the seasons when the land was not used for agricultural purposes, the plaintiff had let it out for stacking timber and derived profit from this special user of the land. For this conversion of use, a fine of 30 times the assessment was levied from him by the Collector, under the provisions of s. 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865. Some huts were erected on the land about the time. The revision survey of the land took place in 1889, when the land was assessed as agricultural land. ——— s. 56—Mortgagor in possession—Failure to pay assessment—Forfeiture of land—Re-grant of land to mortgagor by Collector under new tenure—Previous encumbrances not to subsist on the land re-granted. In 1895, the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 mortgaged their lands to the plaintiff, one of the conditions of the mortgage being that the mortgagors were to remain in possession of the land, and to pay the Government assessment. Default having occurred in payment of assessment. the Collector demanded payment first from mortgagors and then from the mortgage. The latter expressed his willingness to pay, if he was placed into possession of the land. The Collector eventually forfeited the land in 1902; but shortly afterwards re-granted it to defendants Nos. 1 and 2 under s. 56 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879 as amended by Bom. The attachment was, however, raised by the Revenue authorities under s. 70 of the Code. The plaintiff sued for a declaration that the land was liable to be attached and sold in execution of his decree. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaint disclosed no cause of action. On appeal:—Held, that the land was, under the operation of s. 56 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, vested in defendants Nos. 1 and 2 free from the incumbrance which had been created and from the equities theretofore existing between them and the plaintiff. Government, an occupancy was forfeited under s. 56 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879), and was thereafter disposed of by the Collector, under rr. 32 and 62 framed under s. 214 of the Code, to the defendants who signed kabuliyats. Some years after this, the Collector ordered the same occupancy to be taken from the defendants and given to the plaintiffs who had been occupants before the forfeiture. The defendants having declined to deliver up possession were sued by the plaintiffs. Held, that the Collector was not empowered by the rules framed under s. 214 of the Code to pass the order he did; and that the plaintiffs were, therefore, not entitled to succeed. R. 68 of the rules framed under s. 214 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code, 1879, empowers a Collector to restore a forfeited occupancy to the original occupant. In 1871, Government assessed the land and entered it in the Revenue Registers as "Government waste land." The plaintiffs paid no assessment on the land. The lower appellate Court found that the defendants were permanent tenants and held that under the provisions of s. 216 (b) read with section 106 of the Land Revenue Code, 1879, the plaintiff had no right to claim enhancement in excess of the rates fixed by the Revision Survey, though he was of opinion that the maximum enhancement should be three times the assessment. If he shows it, it is for the landlord to show under s. 83 of the Land Revenue Code that there is evidence of the intended duration of the tenancy either by agreement or by usage. BOMBAY REGULATION (II OF 1827)—contd.

———— s. 56—Pleader—Pleader in the mofussil—Duty towards client—Winding up proceedings—Pleader must not represent parties whose interests are conflicting. By the custom of the mofussil a pleader employed by a party to a proceeding before a Court is bound faithfully and exclusively to serve that party throughout the whole proceeding. The pleader in the mofussil is not merely an advocate—he is the confidential legal adviser of his client and does for him those things which in the Presidency towns are often done by solicitors. For legal advice, for the prosecution of legal proceedings in all their stages, the client depends on the pleader. This dependence makes the position of the pleader peculiarly onerous and binds him to give exclusive attention to the interests of the client throughout any proceedings in which he is engaged. In winding up proceedings, a single pleader must not represent two different creditors whose interests are known to conflict. A pleader must not accept a vakalatnama when he knows that he cannot act for his client throughout the proceedings. A pleader in defending himself against charges of professional misconduct made certain statements. He was dealt with under the disciplinary jurisdiction for making them. It was contended in his behalf that the statements made by him in defence must be regarded as having been made by an accused and were therefore protected. Held, overruling the contention, that the pleader was writing to the Court as a pleader and was responsible as such for the statements made by him. GOVERNMENT PLEADER v. BHAGUBHAI DAYABHAI (1912) I. L. R. 36 Bom. 606

————————Pleader—Misbehaviour — Not limited to professional misconduct—High Court—Disciplinary jurisdiction. The term "misbehaviour" in s. 56 of the Bombay Regulation II of 1827 is not restricted to misbehaviour in the strict course of a pleader's professional duties, but includes general misbehaviour. There is no reason to suppose that the Legislature intended in this matter to enact a laxer rule of practice in India than the rule which prevails in England. taken away by the defendants who claimed the right to retain the skins as Mahar-Watandars of the village. The lower Courts dismissed the suit as barred by s. 18 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act, 1874, and s. 4 (a) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876. The plaintiffs having appealed: Held, that the question, whether there was a Mahar-Watan was within the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts. Held, also, that the plaintiffs would be entitled to their injunction unless the defendants succeeded in showing that there was an hereditary office of Mahars. ——Kulkarni Vatan—Commutation—Suit for a declaration of right as Vatandar—Civil Court—Jurisdiction—Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Schedule I, Articles 14 and 91. The plaintiffs were the hereditary Kulkarni Vatandars of certain villages. By an agreement dated the 7th July 1914, arrived at between the plaintiffs and the Government, the plaintiffs consented to the commutation of their Vatans. On the 30th September 1917, the plaintiffs filed suits for a declaration that they were the Vatandars and were entitled to the vahivat of the Kulkarni Vatan hereditarily as before. Held, that the suits were barred under s. 4 (a) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876. Held, also, that even if the suits be treated as having been brought to set aside the agreement they were barred under Article 14 or under Article 91 of the Limitation Act, 1908. —— Collector's order—Civil Courts—Jurisdiction—If right of action against East India Company jurisdiction of Civil Court cannot be ousted by Legislature. The plaintiffs claimed to be the occupants of land in suit. In 1914 the Collector at the instance of the second defendant made an order that the lands should be resumed and restored to him as the holder of a sanad granted to his predecessors in 1841. The plaintiffs thereupon sued for a declaration that the order made by the Collector was not binding on them and that they had an absolute right over the lands in suit. The lower Court dismissed the suit as barred under s. 4 (a) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876. On appeal to the High Court: Held, remanding the case, that if the plaintiffs could show that their predecessors-in-title cultivating the suit lands in 1841 had such rights of occupancy that if dispossessed by the East India Company, they would have had a right to sue the Company on account of such dispossession, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court would not be ousted. Secretary of State for India v. Moment (1912) 40 Calc. 391, considered. —— s. 4 (a), Prov. (k) and ss. 5 (a) and (b)—Khatib Inam land—Alienation of land by Inamdar's widow—Adjudication passed by Inam Commissioner exempting the land from payment of assessment—Collector's order directing alienee to pay economic rent to the officiator appointed—Suit by alienee to set aside the order—Jurisdiction—Civil Court. The lands in suit were originally granted in Inam to one Fakarudin for Khatibgiri services. In 1856 by an adjudication passed by the Inam Commissioner under Bombay Act XI of 1852, it was declared that the lands were to be held by the Inamdar free from payment of land revenue. In 1864 Fakarudin's widow Pachhabi alienated the lands and transferred the Khatibgiri right to plaintiff's father. Thereafter the plaintiff enjoyed the lands free from assessment and performed the services as Khatib until 1911 when an order was passed by the Commissioner directing that the full economic rent be recovered from the plaintiff and be paid to defendant No 3 as long as he officiated as Khatib on behalf of the Inamdar. The plaintiff sued for a declaration that the Commissioner's order was invalid and not binding upon him and also claimed the right to officiate as Khatib. The defendants contended that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was ousted under s. 4 (a) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876; and the suit was not saved by clause (k) of the proviso to that section, nor by s. 5 (a) and (b) of the Act. Held, that the plaintiff's claim being a claim to hold land wholly or partially free from payment of land revenue under an adjudication duly passed by a competent officer under Bombay Act XI of 1852, was cognizable by the Civil Court under clause (k) of the proviso to s. 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act. The fact that the plaintiff claimed as alienee did not take the case out of the proviso. Held, further, that the claim to perform the services as Khatib apart from the claim to hold the lands exempt from the payment of land revenue, was, although in form a claim covered by the first part of the second paragraph of s. 4 (a) of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, in substance a matter between private parties and might be treated as falling under s. 5 (b) of the Act, notwithstanding the suit was against Government and was thus cognizable by Civil Courts. In 1852 by the decision of the Inam Commissioner it was declared that the lands will be continued to be held wholly free of assessment. In 1914 the Collector passed an order directing that the plaintiff who was an alienee from the Inamdar should pay a certain rent on the lands in suit for Kazi services or else the lands would be resumed from his possession. The plaintiff sued for a declaration that the order of the Collector was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant Kazi contended that the plaintiff's claim being against Government relating to the property appertaining to his office as village officer, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was ousted under s. 4 (a), paragraph 1 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876. Held, that the plaintiff's claim being a claim to hold land wholly exempt from assessment under the decision of the Inam Commissioner was clearly within the scope of Proviso (k) of s. 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, and therefore cognizable by Civil Court. Held, also, that the proviso to s. 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, in terms applied to any person claiming exemption from land revenue under an adjudication duly passed by a competent officer under Bombay Act XI of 1852 and an alienee from the Inamdar could not be treated as being outside the scope of the proviso. ———— Reference by Government to High Court—Bombay Summary Settlement Act (Bom. Act II of 1863), s. 1—Summary Settlement—Inam Dharmadaya—Sanads—Jaghir—Treaty between the Government and the Native State—Lands, whether held under a treaty or on political tenure. Under s 12 of the Revenue Jurisdiction Act, 1876, Government can refer a question for the decision of the High Court, when investigating any claim or objection which before 1876 may have been excluded from the cognizance of a Civil Court In 1818, the British Government granted by a Sanad some villages in Chikodi and Manowlee as Inam Dharmadaya to be enjoyed from "son to grandson, etc , from generation to generation." Shortly afterwards, the talukas of Chikodi and Manowlee were ceded by the British Government to the Maharaja of Kolhapur. In 1821, the Raja of Kolhapur granted some more villages in the said talukas to the same grantee. In 1826, a treaty was concluded between the British Government and the Maharaja of Kolhapur One of the articles of the treaty provided that the Raja of Kolhapur promised to continue to the grantee his lands and rights; and the British Government guaranteed enjoyment of those villages to the grantee for life, provision being made that the rights of the grantee's descendants as founded on Sanad or custom should not be prejudiced by the cessation of the said guarantee As the Raja did not keep his promise not to molest the grantee, the British Government made in 1827 a further treaty with the Raja of Kolhapur, by which it was provided that the latter should give back to the former the said talukas "in the same state in which he received them," and that, as the Raja and the Raja accordingly engaged never to molest them. Thereafter, in 1828, a question having arisen with regard to the villages granted by the Raja in the said talukas, it was declared by the Government that the same should be allowed to remain in possession of the grantee as if the grant was made with the concurrence of the British Government. In 1863, on the introduction of the Summary Settlement, the Government was of opinion that no primâ facie case had been made out for excluding the grantee's lands from the benefit of the Summary Settlement on the ground of their being held on political tenure, and the Summary Settlement was accordingly applied to the grantee's lands with his consent. It was contended, nearly sixty years afterwards, that the lands in question being either lands held under a treaty or under political tenure, were excepted from the provisions of the Bombay Summary Settlement Act, 1863. Held, (1) that at the time of Summary Settlement the lands in question were not held under a treaty, for neither was it shown that the original title was under a term of treaty which remained in force nor that the treaty of cession guaranteed title; (2) that the title of the grantee to the lands in question originated in the Sanads of 1818 and 1821, and that when the two talukas were given back by the Raja to the British Government in 1827, the existing rights of the grantee under the Sanads remained undisturbed pleno vigore and were so recognised by the British Government; (3) that the grant was specifically described in the Sanad as Dharmadaya Inam, and there was nothing to show that it was a Jaghir or held under political tenure; (4) that, therefore,

tioned" settlement—Continuance of the terms of the "sanctioned" settlement after the expiration of the period as still being sanctioned. A question having arisen as to whether under the settlement of the khoti village in suit which was sanctioned in 1863 and introduced in 1865 subject to all the provisions of the Survey and Settlement Act (Bom. Act I of 1865), and thereafter for a fixed period of twenty-seven years, the Government was entitled, on the expiration of the said period of twenty-seven years, to insist upon the terms imposed upon the Khot as between him and his tenants under the settlement as still being sanctioned: Held, that in 1892 when the fixed period of the settlement sanctioned in 1863 and introduced in 1865 came to an end, the terms which had been imposed upon the Khot under s. 38 of the Survey and Settlement Act (Bom. Act I of 1865), when that settlement was introduced, remained in force, since the settlement itself must be deemed to have been then and still to have been sanctioned and that Government was within its rights in insisting upon the Khot accepting certain clauses in the kabuliyat of that year. ——— Shetsanadi lands— Rules framed under Act XI of 1852 (Bombay)—Government continuing the shetsanadi lands to the family of the shetsanadi who is discharged by Government without any fault on his part—Continuance on condition of paying full survey assessment on the lands—Subsequent resumption of the lands by Government. On the death in 1865 of the then shetsanadi, one B, Government appointed one Y as the new shetsanadi; but under the rules framed under Bombay Act XI of 1852, Government continued the shetsanadi lands to the family of B on condition of their paying full survey assessment on the lands. The remuneration of Y was made payable out of the extra assessment recovered in 1905. Government resumed the lands and handed them over to Y for his services: Held, that both the order passed in 1865 and the action taken under the rule framed under Bombay Act XI of 1852 had in law the effect of converting the land from a shetsanadi vatan into a rayatwari holding and investing the holder of the land with the rights of an ordinary occupant, entitled to it, so long as he paid the survey assessment. Held, also, that the proceedings of 1905 were on the supposition that what was done in 1865 on B's death had the effect of continuing the lands in dispute as one reserved for shetsanadi service; but that was not its effect, and the proceedings in question were ultra vires. BURMESE LAW.

————— Adoption—Kittima adoption—Publicity and notoriety essential—Forfeiture of adoption by kittima son separating from adoptive parents—Distinction where there are other children—Intention to break tie with adoptive parents—Contest between two claimants each claiming the whole estate. A child adopted under the Burmese Buddhist Law according to the fullest form of adoption, and retaining his status as an adopted child till the death of his adoptive parents, is entitled to inherit their estate as if he were a natural and lawful child, either in the absence of other children or in competition with them. Such a child is called a kittima child. There is no ceremony of adoption, and it is not necessary for one who claims adoption to point to any particular statement made or act done by his adoptive parents on a particular date. But on the other hand the adoption must be a matter of publicity and notoriety. Ma Me Gale v. Ma Sa Yi, I. L. R. 32 Calc. 219 ; L. R. 32 I. A. 72, and Ma Ywet v. Ma Me, I. L. R. 36 Calc. 978 ; L. R. 36 I. A. 192, followed. A kittima child may forfeit his right of inheritance by separating from his adoptive parents, this being considered an act of ingratitude : see the texts set forth in s. 195 of Gaung's 'Digest of Burmese Buddhist Law." These authorities, however, draw a distinction between the cases where there are other children with whom the kittima child seeks to compete and share, and cases where he has no such competitor, and in the latter instance allow him to inherit in whole or in part notwithstanding his separation. The true principle on which the rule of forfeiture rests is that it is a matter of intention. The fact that the child goes to live apart is some evidence of an intention to break the bond ; and it is easier to presume this where the adoptive parents have other children who can perform the duties and receive the estate. The extent of the separation is to be also taken into account. The distance may be so great as to render it impracticable for the child to continue to discharge duties to the adoptive parents, and in that case it probably works a forfeiture. But if the distance be not great, if the separation of residence be with the consent of the adoptive parents, and if the child is ready and willing to discharge filial duties after this separation, the bond is not broken. This is the result of the modern decisions. Chan Toon's "Principles of Buddhist law," 88 to 95 where the authorities are given, and Maung Shwe Thwe v. Ma Saing, 2 U. B. Rul. (1897—1901) 135, referred to. In this case where each of the parties claimed to be the sole adopted son of the same adoptive parents, and in that capacity to be entitled to succeed to their whole to the exclusion of the other : Held (reversing the decision of the Chief Court), that on the evidence both the claimants were adopted heirs, and that, it not being contended for the appellant that there would be any legal objection to the widow adopting a second heir, or that the position of a son so adopted would be in any way inferior to that of the first adopted son, they were both entitled to inherit the estate. As in that case both of them had asked for too much, each should bear his own costs of the litigation. MAUNG THWE v. MAUNG TUN PE (1917) . I. L. R. 45 Calc. 1

————— Inheritance—Sisters in trade living apart from, and independent of, their father—Succession of elder sister to property of younger sisters in priority to father. The appellant was the eldest, and the survivor, of three sisters, daughters of the respondent. They traded in cocoanuts in the Municipal market in Rangoon, and lived together apart from, and quite independently of, their father : Held (reversing the decision of the Chief Court of Lower Burma), that, by the Burmese Buddhist Law, and irrespective of any question of partnership between them, the appellant succeeded to the property of her sisters in preference to the respondent. The balance of the authority of the Dhammathats, pre-eminent among which is the Manu Kyay, is upon the side of the brothers and sisters of a deceased person being preferred to the parent. I of the Limitation Act of 1908, as the period within which a claim must be made for a share of property on the death of an intestate. ————— Marriage—Mutual consent—Repute as evidence of marriag[illegible] with sister of living [illegible] separate houses—Social status of after-married wife, evidence as to—Effect of recognition of wife—Evidence of reputation. No ceremony of any kind is essential to a marriage among Burmese. Mutual consent is all that is required ; and in the absence of direct proof consent may be inferred from the conduct of the parties or established by reputation. In Burma polygamy is lawful, as also is marriage with the sister of a living wife, as well as with a deceased wife's sister. The title of the respondent (plaintiff) to share in the property of a deceased Burman, a twinzayo or hereditary oil-well owner, depended on proof that she was his lawful wife, as to which the Courts in Burma differed, the Appellate Court finding on the evidence that she was. At the time of the alleged marriage, the plaintiff was a widow with children, and the deceased was the husband of the defendant, her elder sister, with whom after the marriage she remained on good terms, though for convenience, both having families, they lived in separate houses, at which the husband took his meals, to a far greater extent, however, at the house of the defendant than at that of the plaintiff : Held, that there was abundant evidence that the plaintiff was recognised as the wife of the deceased. None of the witnesses said she occupied a dishonourable or inferior position, and it was difficult to see how there could be any question of social inferiority. The Courts regarded the evidence from different standpoints ; but whether the particular testimony on which they differed was accepted or not, there was very little con-

——— Owner of bustee—Receiver—Liability of actual owner to carry out bustee improvements when his estate is under a Receiver appointed by the High Court—Calcutta Municipal Act (Beng. Act III of 1899), s. 408. When a notice under s. 408 of the Calcutta Municipal Act has been served on the actual owner of an estate in the hands of a Receiver appointed by the High Court, he is liable under the section as such, and not the Receiver, to carry out the requisitions made therein It is incumbent on the owner in such a case to request the Receiver to comply with the notice, after taking the directions of the Court, and on the latter's failure to do so he should himself apply to the High Court making the Receiver a party. If the Court refuses the application, the owner would be enabled to satisfy the Magistrate that he had used all diligence to carry out the requisitions, and in the event of a conviction the penalty would be merely nominal If the owner is helpless in the matter the General Committee may proceed under the section against the occupiers. Parker v. *Inge, 17 Q. Thereupon the accused's son appeared and took time Then again the proceedings were stayed for one month at the instance of the prosecution. Negotiations were entered upon between the petitioner and the municipal authority, which eventually fell through More than two years after the proceedings had been stayed, an application was made for reviving the old proceedings, and the proceedings were accordingly revived and the petitioner was convicted: Held, that having regard to the special circumstances, the great delay that occurred, during which nothing was done with regard to the proceedings, it must be taken that those proceedings were abandoned, and consequently the conviction of the petitioner was invalid NANDO LAL GUHA v. CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA

(c), of Beng. Act IV of 1866 for being, while on duty, in possession of annas four, contrary to an order of the Commissioner of Police. After the examination of one witness the petitioner pleaded guilty to having the money in his possession He, however, stated before the Magistrate that at the time in question he was not on duty, but engaged in the private business of a police officer and also that he had been on duty the previous night. The Magistrate convicted the accused on this plea of guilty The order, the contravention of which was the subject-matter of the prosecution, was not proved: Held, that a copy of the Government order or an extract therefrom or a reference thereto should have been placed on the record. petition was filed before the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta by one S alleging that at the premises mentioned therein cotton figure gambling had been carried on, the modus operandi of which was described and that the accused had taken part in it. The Magistrate examined S, issued a warrant for books and papers and directed the Assistant Commissioner of Police, Southern Division, to take cognizance of the case. He next made an order directing the Assistant Commissioner, Northern Division, to take cognizance "if evidence sufficient" and to "send up case." The police thereafter submitted a chalan charging the accused with gambling for gain on the date specified therein at the premises mentioned. The accused moved the High Court for quashing the proceedings pending before the Magistrate: Held, that the Magistrate took cognizance on the petition filed before him and not upon the chalan submitted by the police. the regulations affecting it, the arrangements made with the owners of the lands taken to indemnify them for the loss they sustained by being deprived of their rights of occupancy, and the other circumstances of the case, (i) that even if the defendants established that their house was built at or before the time the cantonment was made, there was still a strong probability that they were duly compensated for the change in their position as owners to that of licensees; (ii) that from the regulations as summarised in Aitchison's Cantonment Code of 1836 and Jameson's Cantonment Code of 1850, it was clear that, though permission to occupy ground was frequently given, especially for the building of officers' houses or bungalows, such permission carried with it no sort of proprietary right, and the buildings were liable to expropriation at a price to be fixed by the authorities, and the permission of the Commanding Officer was necessary even for the letting or sale of the house so built. It was therefore impossible to say that mere possession or occupation of the bungalow on this site, afforded any presumption whatever that the defendants or their predecessors in title were owners in fee. The presumption was all the other way, and was strengthened by an examination of the history of the site itself which showed that the defendants' predecessors in title did not regard the property as differing in its tenure and terms from other property in the cantonment. The defendants were, therefore, mere licensees and the land had been lawfully resumed by Government. KAIKHUSRU ADERJI GHASWALA v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1911) I. L. R. 36 Bom. 1

This may be the case both when a serious demand requiring very attentive consideration had been made on the plaintiffs and reasonable time has not been given to the latter to take advice on the subject and when the cantonment authorities have wholly disregarded the basis on which the rate should have been assessed, by assessing the rate upon the gross income of the plaintiffs. Kasandas v. *Ankleshvar, I. W. Freeman or his assigns," and in which the consignee's name and address were slated as "N. W. Freeman, Calcutta." The consignee took no steps regarding delivery of the goods on arrival, and the defendant company after landing the goods handed them over, in the usual course, to the Port Commissioners. The defendant company thereafter posted a notice of arrival addressed to "N. W. Freeman, Esq., Calcutta," which was delivered by the post office to one Nigel W. Freeman. The latter through his agent gave a letter of indemnity to the defendant company, and the agent, without production of the bill of lading, obtained from the defendant company a delivery order on the Port Commissioners for the goods, and wrongfully took delivery of the same. When communicated with, Nigel W. Freeman returned most of the goods in a damaged and deteriorated condition to the plaintiff. ———— Tastik—Arrears of cash allowance, suit to recover—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 131, 62. The plaintiff, the manager of the temple of Shri Laxmi Narayan Dev at Hulekal, sued to recover from the defendants the managers of the temple of Shree Madhukeshwar at Banawasi, a sum of Rs. 96 as arrears of a cash allowance (tastik) which the former was entitled to receive from the property of the latter. The defendants admitted the title of the plaintiff to the allowance but pleaded limitation as to the arrears for two out of the six years. The lower Courts applied Art. 131 of the Limitation Act, 1877, and allowed the whole of the claim. On appeal: Held, that the claim was properly allowed. A cash allowance of the nature as in the present case is, according to Hindu law, nibandha or immoveable property; where it is annually payable, the right to payment gives to the person entitled a periodically recurring right as against the person liable to pay. The right to any amount which has become payable stands as to such person on the same footing as the aggregate of rights to amounts which are to become payable and which have become actually due. But where there are more than one person entitled to the payment as co-sharer and the payment is made to one of them by the person liable to pay, the co-sharer receiving the amount holds it, minus his share, on behalf of the rest as money had and received for their use though as to him with reference to the aggregate of rights, it is nibandha or immoveable property, in the nature of a periodically recurring right. The important question is who is the person sued and what is it that is sued for? If what is sued for is the establishment of a title to the right itself, then Art. 131 applies, whether the defendant is the person originally liable to pay or is a co-sharer who has received payment from that person. If, on the other hand, what is sued for is the amount of arrears, which has become actually payable to the plaintiff, then there is a distinction between the person originally liable to pay and a co-share of the plaintiff, who has actually received payment from that person. Art. 131 applies in that case

The plaintiff's complaint was that the [illegible] fees which would otherwise have been paid to the [illegible] virtue of that office. It was a caste question not cognizable by a Civil Court. Held, also, that the [illegible] defendant showed that what the parties had been fighting for was merely a question of dignity under the cover of a religious office. If the Court were to interfere in such cases, it would be merely assisting one party at the expense of the other and compelling the caste or the sect to follow one spiritual leader in preference to another. The plaintiff prayed for a declaration that he had the right to inspect all books and documents of the Mahajan Managing Committee, Sub-Committee and Trustees, and for an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with him in the exercise of such right. The only two documents about which there was any real controversy were the minutes of the Sub-Committee and the correspondence file of the Mahajan. Held, that as trustee of the Dorasai and Sadharan funds, the plaintiff had no right, either in law or by virtue of any caste rules, to the roving inspection claimed. Bank of Bombay v. Suleman, I. L. R. 32 Bom. 466, 474, referred to. Held, further, that the Mahajan fund of this caste being a purely secular fund the Indian Trust Act applied, and the plaintiff could not claim to have been made a trustee of that fund merely by virtue of a caste resolution and his own letter of acceptance. Held, further, on the evidence, that there had been no express demand addressed by the plaintiff to the proper quarter, and no refusal by the defendant such as would be necessary to enable a suit of this character to succeed. Held, further, that where rights to property are not involved all matters of external management must be left to the decision of the caste. The question in dispute was in reality a question between the caste and a section, apparently a small section, of the caste led by the plaintiff, and as such it was outside the Court's jurisdiction in accordance with the decision in Nemchand v. Savaichand, I. L. R. 5 Bom. 85; Lalji Shamji v. *Walji Wardhman, I. L. as occupancy tenants in one of the villages sold, brought the present suit for pre-emption in respect of that village, and the only question before the High Court was whether the vendee would, but for the sale, be entitled on the death of the vendors to inherit the land sold, he being a Christian, as in that case he would have a right of pre-emption superior to that of the plaintiffs under the Punjab Pre-emption Act, I of 1913, s. 15. Held, following Bhagwant Singh v. Kalu (*I. In that suit the plaintiff alleged that the defendant Company had not only dispossessed the plaintiff from his share the property by denying the plaintiff's title thereto but had wrongfully appropriated the material of the same on such demolition as aforesaid to the prejudice of the plaintiff's right—the work of dismantling having been commenced and completed in October 1908. The sanction of the Chief Commissioner to a mortgage of such property as required by s 18 of Act XVII of 1885 may be an implied sanction. By the terms of a mortgage made in 1891 by the Court of Wards in favour of the respondents (plaintiffs) on the security of the joint family estate, the mortgage money (Rs. 1,20,000 way repayable with interest by annual instalments of Rs. 10,000 extending over more than 20 years and in the event of Rs. 30,000 becoming overdue, the Court of Wards covenanted to recover such sum by sale or otherwise of sufficient of the mortgaged property. If it was found impossible to continue to manage the estate the Court of Wards was either to sell up the entire property and devote the proceeds to the liquidation of the debt, or make over the estate to the mortgagees in satisfaction of their claim. In the event of the management being relinquished before the debt was liquidated in the ordinary course, the Court of Wards was to liquidate the debt remaining due by the sale of such portion of the property as might be necessary. The sum borrowed was applied to pay off the debts on the property. Only Rs. 16,000 was repaid up to 1893, and since then no instalment had been paid, the Court of Wards, owing to unforeseen circumstances, finding its impossible to pay more, either of principal or interest: and in March, 1902, the Court of Wards after giving the mortgagees notice that the relinquishment by it of the management had been sanctioned, offered to make over to them the mortgaged property in satisfaction of their claim "excepting the cultivating rights of sir land which are to be reserved for the maintenance of the wards," which the mortgagees declined as not being a compliance with the terms of the mortgage deed. In June, 1902, the Court of Wards relinquished the management of the estate without selling it or transferring it to the mortgagees. [illegible]

[illegible] the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1881, which in any way suggests that a gaontia is not entitled to relinquish his rights Held, further, that the suit was not barred by limitation because possession could not be adverse to a person who was not himself entitled to claim present possession and so long as the gaontia tenure subsisted, the zamindar was not entitled to actual possession of any part of the village. Therefore the possession of the defendants did not become adverse to the plaintiff until the tenure was relinquished in 1907. A gaontia cannot confer on others, rights of a permanent character which would be binding upon the zamindar after the gaontia's tenure ceases to exist LAL NARAPRAJA SINGH v BHABANI TELI.

The words "otherwise transfer" in s. 46 (3) are limited to transactions of a similar nature to those enunciated in the first part of the sub-section, namely, transfers by way of sale, gift mortgage or sub-lease. The Act does not make any provision for recovery of possession by a co-sharer landlord, of land which has been surrendered to the other co-sharers by a tenant. (1) and (6):—Held in this case that a Concillation Award, dated 28th February 1905, was a fresh contract or origin of rights between the parties, which although it came into existence in consequence of registered mortgages of 1881 and 1884, and transactions under them, was both for the purposes of enforcement, and for the purpose of the application of s. 45, sub-s. The transfer made or decreed by the proceedings in suit could not therefore be said to be "in pursuance" of the mortgages. As documents expressly providing for the transfer of the right to occupy sir land as a proprietor within sub-s. (6) the mortgages would have been saved from the operation of sub-s. (1). But that sub-section was applicable in this case and therefore, notwithstanding the terms of the award which by virtue of the agreement of reference became the agreement of the parties, the mortgagor could not so transfer his rights to occupy sir land as to divest himself of his right as an "occupancy tenant" under the Act XI of 1898 as amended by Act XXI of 1899. 2. ———— Omission to frame—Rioting—Causing hurt—Conviction for an offence other than the one charged with—Error of law—"Error, omission or irregularity"—Criminal Procedure Code (V of 1898), ss. 535, 537 (a)—Practice. Ss. 535 and 537 (a) of the Criminal Procedure do not apply to a case where the accused is charged with one offence and convicted of another—totally different to the one he was charged with. S. 233 is mandatory for every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every charge shall be tried separately, except in the case mentioned in ss. 234, 235, 236 and 239 of the Code. S. 236 refers to a series of acts which are of such a nature that it is doubtful which of the several offences the facts constitute. To convict an accused of murder on a charge of rioting or to commit him to the Sessions without framing a charge, would be not merely an irregularity but an error of law vitiating the trial. 3. ———— Misjoinder of—Joint trial on charges of criminal breach of trust and falsification of accounts committed in separate transactions—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 233, 234, and 235—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 408 and 477A. A charge of criminal breach of trust of a sum of money can be tried under s. 235 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Code, at the same time with one of falsification of accounts made to conceal the act of misappropriation as part of the same transaction and two unconnected charges of falsification may be tried at one trial under s. 234, but a charge of criminal breach of trust cannot be legally tried together with one of falsification relating to a distinct act of misappropriation committed in a separate transaction. Kasi Viswanathan v. *Emperor, I. 4. ———— Misjoinder—Illegality of trial—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 233. A single charge relating to several distinct offences is illegal. Under s. 233 of the Criminal Procedure Code there should be a separate head of charge for each such offence. A charge under s. 409 of the Penal Code, of criminal breach of trust in respect of a total sum of 10 annas 6 pies, to wit, a sum of 4 annas 6 pies collected from A between certain dates in one year and a sum of 6 annas collected from B between other dates in the same year, is bad for misjoinder; and a trial held on such a charge is illegal. Subrahmania Ayyar v. *King-Emperor, I. CHARGE—contd.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 222 (2), 233, 234. S. 222 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code refers to cases of criminal breach of trust or dishonest misappropriation of money, and cannot be applied to a case under s. 477A of the Penal Code. Queen-Empress v. Mati Lal Lahiri, I. L. R. 26 Calc. 560, referred to. S. 233 of the Code must be strictly followed save where the law itself provides an exception. A joinder of three charges under s. 409 with three under s. 477A of the Penal Code relating to different transactions is not warranted by any of the exceptions provided in the Code, and is illegal. Such a misjoinder is absolutely fatal to the trial. Kasi Viswanathan v. Emperor, I. L. R. 30 Mad. 328, and Subrahmania Ayyar v. King-Emperor I. L. R. 25 Mad. 61, followed. A series of falsifications of accounts made to cover a single act of defalcation may be laid in one charge under s. 477A of the Penal Code, and does not constitute distinct offences merely by reason of a plurality of false entries intended to cover the same defalcation. RAMAN BEHARI DAS v. EMPEROR (1913) . I. L. R. 41 Calc. 722

7. ———————— Misjoinder—Inherent power of Criminal Courts. Per Mookerjee J. Criminal Courts have, equally with Civil Courts, inherent power to mould their procedure, subject to statutory provisions, to enable them to discharge their functions as Courts of justice. 9. ———— Form and Proof of—An accused is entitled to know with certainty and accuracy, the exact value of the charge brought against him. But where the accused fully understood the nature of the offence with which they were charged, they had clearly not been prejudiced by the omission of the words "unlawfully and maliciously" and "in British India" occurring in s. 4 (b) of Act VI of 1903. Such an omission can be cured by the verdict. The Queen v. Munslow, [1895] 1 Q. B. 758, referred to. Where the illegal act charged under s. 120 B is the unlawful and malicious possession of explosive substances within the meaning of s. 4 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1908, it is not essential to specify in the charge the explosive substance which the accused have conspired to have in their possession or under their control. A person may be guilty of criminal conspiracy even though the illegal act, which he has agreed to do, has not been done, for the "crime of conspiracy consists only in the agreement or confederacy to do an illegal act by legal means or a legal act by illegal means." Reg. v. Hibbert, 13 Cox. 82, Quinn v. Leathem, [1901] A. C. 495, The Queen v. Most, 7 Q. B. D. 244, 14 Cox, 583, and O'Connell v. The Queen, 11 Cl. & F. 155; 1 Cox 413; 5 St. Tr. N. S. 1, referred to. The indictment in all cases of conspiracy must in the first place charge the conspiracy, but in stating the object of the conspiracy the same degree of certainty is not required as in an indictment for the offence conspired to be committed. The King v. Gill, 2 B. & Ald. 204, The Queen v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49, The Queen v. Blake, 6 Q. B 126, Sydserff v. The Queen, 11 Q. B. 245, The Queen v Gompertz 9 Q. B. 824; 2 Cox, 145, Aspinall v. The Queen, 2 Q. B. D. 48, Taylor v. The Queen, [1895] 1 Q. B. 25 Reg. v. Parker, 3 Q. B. 292, referred to. It is a wholesome rule that the Court should adhere to the language of the statute, as far as practicable, when a charge is drawn up; as nothing is gained by a paraphrase, while opportunity is afforded to the accused to take exception to the form of the charge. The accused cannot be convicted on a conspiracy charge under s. 120 B, Indian Penal Code, unless the prosecution establishes that the accused were members of the conspiracy after the 27th March 1913 when Act VIII of 1913 became law. A comprehensive formula of universal application cannot be framed regarding the question whether two or more acts constitute the "same transaction"; the circumstances which must bear on its determination in each individual case are proximity of time, unity or proximity of place, continuity of action and community of purpose or design. If A B and C conspire to make, or have in their possession or under their control, an explosive substance within the meaning of the Explosive Substances Act, and, if in pursuance of such conspiracy A makes or has in his possession or under his control an explosive substance, they may, if the Court thinks fit, be charged and tried together under s. 120 B, Indian Penal Code, and s. 4 (b) of Act VI of 1908. If all the known co-conspirators named in the charge are not placed on their trial, the trial of some (separately) without the others is not vitiated. Emperor v. Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty, I. L. R. 38 Calc. 559 ; 15 C. W. N. 593, explained. If the accused have committed an offence under s. 4 (b) of the Explosive Substances Act, 1908, in pursuance of a criminal conspiracy, it is open to the Crown to prosecute them for such offences, irrespective of the question of the ultimate design of the alleged conspiracy coming under s. 121A, Indian Penal Code (which charge requires previous sanction under s. 196, Criminal Procedure Code). In order to justify the inference of guilt, the inculpatory facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt. R. v. Hodge, 2 Lewin C. C. 277, referred to. The presumption of innocence (in criminal cases) signifies no more than this that if the commission of a crime is directly in issue in any proceeding it must be proved beyond reasonable doubt. "The whole doctrine when drawn out is, first, that a person who is charged with a crime must be proved guilty, that according to the ordinary rule of procedure, and of legal reasoning presumitur pro reo, i.e. neganti, so that the accused stands innocent until he is proved guilty; and secondly, that this proof of guilt must, displace all reasonable doubt." In a charge of conspiracy general evidence of the existence of the conspiracy may first be given, before particular facts are proved to show that one or more of the accused took part in it. R. v. Sidney, 9 St. Tr. 817, Queen Caroline's Case, 2 B. & B. 284 ; 1 St. Tr. N. S. 1348, R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 566, followed. Under the law in England facts similar, but not part of the same transaction as the main fact, are not in general admissible to prove either the occurrence of the main fact or the identity of its author except (after evidence aliunde on these points has been given) to show the state of mind of the parties with regard to such fact, i.e., knowledge of its nature, or his intent. In general, whenever it is necessary to rebut even by anticipation, the defence of accident, mistake or other innocent condition of mind, evidence that the accused has been concerned in a systematic course of conduct of the same specific kind as, and proximate in point of time to that in question, may be given. R. v. Holt, (1860) Bell. 280 ; 8 Cox, 411, to the contrary is no longer authority. R. v. Smith 20 Cox, 804 ; 92 L. T. 208, and Emperor v. Debendra Prosad, I. L. R. 36 Calc. 573 ; 9 C. L. J. 610, referred to. S. 4 of Act VI of 1908 substantially reproduces the provisions of s. 3 of 46 and 47 Vict. Chap. 3 (Explosive Substances Act, 1883), consequently the expression "unlawfully and maliciously" may be interpreted in the sense in which it is familiarly used in the criminal law of England. "Unlawfully" thus signifies "not for a lawful object," and "maliciously" signifies "intentionally and without justification or excuse or claim of right." The Queen v. Clemens, [1898] 1 Q. B. 556 ; 19 Cox. 18, Miles v. Hutchins, [1903] 2 K. B. 714 ; 20 Cox. 555, referred to. Reg. v. Ward, 12 Cox. 123 ; 1 C. C. R. 356, McPherson v. Daniels, 10 B. & C. 272, Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 247, Clark v. Molyneux, 3 Q. B. D. 237, Allen v. Flood, [1898] A. C. 1, Johnson v. Emerson, L. R. 6 Ex. Ch. 373, R. v. Pembleton, 2 C. C. R. 119 ; 12 Cox. 607, Mogul Steamship Co. v. McGregor, [1892] A. C. 25 ; 23 Q. B. D. 598, followed. The term "explosive substance" as used in s. 4 (b) of Act VI of 1908 includes any part of an apparatus, machine, or implement intended to be used or adapted for causing or aiding in causing any explosive substance, and "by means thereof" does not mean by means thereof alone. R. v. Charles, 17 Cox. 499, referred to. The interference of fact may legitimately be drawn that the "explosive substances" made and possessed by Sasanka were intended for use in British India. It is the duty of the prosecution, not so much to secure a conviction as to place all the available evidence in the case fairly and fully before the tribunal by which alone the guilt or innocence of the accused is to be determined. Ram Ranjan Roy v. King-Emperor, I. L. R. 42 Calc 422 ; 19 C. W. N. 28, following Regina v Holden, 8 C. & P. 606, referred to. "The proof of the case against the prisoner must depend for its support not upon the absence or want of any explanation on the part of the prisoner, but upon the positive affirmative evidence of his guilt that is given by the Crown" But "if there is a certain appearance made out against a party, if he is involved by the evidence in a state of considerable suspicion, he is called upon, for his own sake and his own safety, to state and to bring forward the circumstances, whatever they may be, which might reconcile such suspicious appearances with perfect innocence" Regina v. Frost, 4 St. Tr. N. S. 85, followed. While it is not necessary to prove manual possession of the explosive substance by the accused, it must be proved that it was in his power or control: possession to be punishable must also be possession with knowledge and assent. The mere fact that the other accused were in the room does not show they were in possession of all or any of the things contained therein. When the evidence at the disposal of the prosecution is insufficient to secure a conviction for the crime committed, it is inexpedient, even though it may be lawful, to prosecute the accused for a conspiracy the proof whereof really rests on the establishment of that very crime. Reg. v. Boulton, 12 Cox. 87, and Emperor v. Lalit Mohan, I. L. R. 38 Calc. 559 ; 15 C. W. N. 593, referred to. A man's guilt is to be established by proof of the facts alleged and not by proof of his character; such evidence might create a prejudice but not lead a step towards substantiation of guilt. In India, as in England, the accused are entitled in cross-examination to elicit facts in support of their defence from the prosecution witnesses wholly unconnected with the examination-in-chief. In the course of cross-examination of this character the defence are entitled, in view of the generality of s. 143 of the Indian Evidence Act, to ask leading questions. Under s. 154, the Court has the discretion to permit the prosecution to test, by way of cross-examination, the veracity of their own witnesses with regard to the (unconnected) matters elicited by the defence in cross-examination. The defence is not entitled to elicit from individual prosecution witnesses whether he was a spy or an

Where a plaintiff has obtained a decree against a partnership firm, the available assets of which are in the hands of a receiver appointed in a previous partnership suit, his proper course is not to issue execution against those assets, but to ask the Court for a charging order, and to undertake to deal with the charge according to the order of the Court. Kewney v. *Attrill, 34 Ch. The principles regulating the ownership of enfranchised lands in cases of enfranchisement of personal or service inams afford no guidance in cases of resumption of charitable inams. In cases of enfranchisement there is a change not of ownership of the land, but of the tenure on which it is held; in cases of resumption the land previously the property of the trust is at the absolute disposal of the Government, who can grant it to anyone, who becomes the owner subject to the obligations ordinarily attached to ryotwari tenure. Gunnaiyan v. *Kamakchi Ayyar, I. 1. ——— Trustees, acts of—When act of majority will be binding—Estoppel—Suit by some of several trustees, when sustainable—Misjoinder—Form of decree. The rule that in the case of charitable trusts the act of the majority will be binding on the minority only applies when such act is done after full opportunity given for mutual discussion by all the members. When the act is done after mutual discussion when the minority had an opportunity to record their dissent it will be the act of the whole body; otherwise it will be the act of the majority alone and will not bind the minority. Teramath v. Lakshmi, I. L. R. 6 Mad. 270, referred to. Wilkinson v. Mallin, 2 Tyrwhit 544, referred to. A company or body of persons will be estopped from questioning the validity of an act done by some only of such body or company only when such persons are held out as clothed with authority to do the act. Where such persons have not unlimited power to act for the body but only the right to act within certain limits, the stranger entering into the transaction has to find within such limits the power to transact. Where the remedial right does not accrue until the majority have after consultation signified their will, an action by some or the majority of the trustees, without consulting the others, will not be maintainable. When the right to the relief claimed has accrued to the joint trustees, the institution of a suit by some only without having consulted the remaining trustees, even where they have not perversely refused to join cannot be a ground for dismissing the suit. Although the interests of the co-trustees is joint and indivisible, it is fully represented when they are all on the record on one side or the other. Peria Karuppan v. Valayutham Chetti, I. L. R. 29 Mad. 302, referred to. One trustee can sue for redemption without consulting the other trustees or making them co-plaintiffs. Such misjoinder is not fatal to the suit. Karattole Edamana v. Unni Kannan, I. L. R. 26 Mad. 649, referred to. The proper decree in such a case would be to order the trust property to be restored to all for the benefit of the cestui qui trust. KUNHAN v. MOORTHI (1910).

The Board of Revenue has no power to ignore the rights of a person lawfully in office as trustee and to appoint another person in his place without dismissing him. In this respect there is no difference between a hereditary and a non-hereditary trustee who is equally entitled to a freehold office. The Board of Revenue is entitled under s. 51 of Act V of 1884 to make over to a local body not only its power of superintendence but also the management of any endowment. The Chairman, Municipal Council, Rajahmundry v. *Susurla Venkateswarlu, I. ——— Bills of lading—Where charter-party and bills of lading conflict the prevailing contract is the charter-party—Stevedores, though named by the charterers, are the agents of shipowners, and not of the charterers—Dunnage improper and insufficient—Shipowners' ordinary liability for bad stowage and insufficient dunnage—Shipowners' specific liability for shortage and sweepings under the charter-party. The plaintiffs chartered the defendant company's steamer 'Abydos' for the carriage of cargo of rice in bags from Akyab, a seaport in Burma, to Bombay. The plaintiffs under the charter-party were empowered to sub-let the whole or part of the cargo, and they sub-let about one-fourth of the cargo space to other shippers. The charter-party expressly provided, inter alia, that "nothing herein contained shall exempt the shipowners from liability to pay for damage to cargo occasioned by bad stowage, by improper or insufficient dunnage," that "the charterers' stevedores at loading port to be employed at market rate but not exceeding owner's contract rate," that "all mats and requisite dunnage to be provided by the steamer," that "all sweepings to be delivered to the charterers at port of discharge," and that "the steamer to be responsible for any proved shortage." The bills of lading contained a special exception that the ship was "not responsible for loss or damage caused by insufficient packing, torn, mended, or chafed, weak or fragile bags, and bagging wrappers not for usual and reasonable wear and tear of packages." During the voyage the ship experienced heavy weather for at least two days and throughout encountered average monsoon weather with south-westerly squall. On the cargo being unloaded at Bombay it was found that 710 bags of the plaintiffs were damaged, that there was a shortage to the extent of 400 cwts., and that the sweepings collected amounted on the whole to about 576 cwts. On the evidence adduced in the case it was found that the damage was to a certain extent caused by improper laying of the dunnage at the port of loading. The plaintiffs sued in respect of (i) damage, (ii) shortage, and (iii) sweepings. The defendants contended that the loading and stowage of the cargo, as well as the laying of the dunnage was within the discretion and control of the stevedore as the plaintiffs' agent, and not as the defendants' agent, and that in respect of shortage their liability was excluded by the bills of lading. Held, (i) that the shipowners would be primâ facie liable for the damage caused by bad stowage or improper or insufficient dunnage and that their liability would not be modified by a clause in the charters-party empowering the charterers to name the stevedores, as the stevedores were the agents and paid servants of the shipowners for the purpose of discharging the duty of the shipowners in loading the cargo; Harris v. Best Ryley & Co., 68 L. T. 76, followed: (ii) that the defendants were liable in respect of the shortage as the prevailing contract between the shipowner and the charterer was the charter-party, and not the bill of lading; (iii) the plaintiffs were entitled to claim the value of the sweepings as specific provision was made in that behalf in the charter-party. 10 Moo. I. A. 16, referred to. The respondents in discharge of the duties imposed on them by their sanads to maintain peace and order within their estates (the manner in which they were to carry country, they remunerated by grants of land in lieu of wages. A register of these chaukidars was kept in the zamindari office, and in the appointment of the chaukidars, in more than one instance, the Government Police Officer had a voice. But the records showed that the zamindars often changed the lands held by these men, and resumed what they considered to be in excess of their requirements. Bengal Act VI of 1870 was extended to Orissa in 1879. In suits by the respondents against the Secretary of State for a declaration that the Act did not apply to the lands in question. Held, that the onus was on the appellants to show that when the zamindaries were confirmed to the respondents' ancestors, such confirmation was subject in the old Regulations in respect of lands which had been set apart by the zamindar with their per-ties of the grants under which the lands were held depended on the implied authorisation of the Government, which excluded them from consideration in the adjustment of the jama of the mahal In the part of the respondents to make such grants. The only obligation on them was to maintain peace and order within their zamindaries. They entertained the services of chaukidars for whose maintenance they allotted from time to time certain lands of their own free will. The mere fact that some appointments were made with the approval of a Government official could not alter the nature of the grants. The word "assigned" in the definition section of Bengal Act VI of 1870 means land assigned by Government, or appropriated under their authority or with their permission. Not only did the form of the "transferring order" in Schedule C of the Act clearly show that the expression "assigned" is applied to lands assigned by Government for the maintenance of the chaukidars, and in respect of which they reserved the right to resume and transfer to the zamindar subject to an additional assessment, but the resolution by which the Act was extended to Orissa leaves no possibility of doubt what the Government understood the Act to mean. In the orders passed a distinction is made with regard to its assets in the future. Nothing can be clearer that the Act was designed to deal with lands which, although lying within a mahal, did not form part of its assets, which was not the case with the respondents' zamindaries. alternative for a decree declaring that the defendants were bound to pay rent and for assessment of adequate rent. The lands in suit were formerly chakaran lands which were resumed by Government and settled with plaintiff's vendor on 7th September 1898. The plaintiff obtained his title to the lands by purchase of his vendor's interest at an auction sale in execution of a decree in 1907 or 1908. The defendants who held the lands as chaukidari chakran lands at the time of the resumption continued to hold them ever since without taking any settlement either from the plaintiff's vendor or the plaintiff. In 1902 the plaintiff's vendor sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for compensation for use and occupation and obtained decrees against them. The plaintiff brought his suit on the 10th September 1909. Held, that once the chakran lands were resumed and settled with the plaintiff's predecessor the latter had the right to take khas possession of the lands and the mere omission of the plaintiff's predecessor and of the plaintiff after him to assert that right would not amount to acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff which would alter the status of the defendants, from that of trespassers to that of tenants and the plaintiff was entitled to bring his suit within 12 years from the date of resumption by Government and settlement with the plaintiff's vendor. 6. ——— Mortgage of zamindari before resumption and transfer—Accession to mortgaged property upon transfer—Chakaran lands if become new estate. Whether, upon resumption by Government, chaukidari-chakran lands are for all purposes severed from the zamindari or not, they form part of the zamindari before resumption, and a mortgage of the zamindari executed before the resumption would cover such lands upon transfer of the resumed chakaran lands to the zamindar. There is an accession to the mortgaged property within the meaning of s. 70, Transfer of Property Act. *Semble. By accepting a deed of conveyance in fee and going into possession a grantee is not estopped to deny the title or seizing of the grantor unless he claims under the deed. Rup Chand Ghose v. Sarbessar Chandra, 10 C. W. N. 747 : s.c. I. L. R. 33 Calc. 915 ; 3 C. L. J. 629, referred to. The doctrine of estoppel does not extend to mere descriptive matters or statements or recitals which are immaterial and not contractual or essential to the purposes of the instrument. To give a recital to that effect it must be shown that the object of the parties was to make the matter recited a fixed fact as the basis of their action. The statement in question in the present instrument did not create an estoppel as it was essentially a collateral statement not concerning the direct purpose of the deed. When in pursuance of an agreement for a lease the intended lessee has taken possession though the requisite documents had not been executed the position is the same as if the document has been executed, provided specific performance can be obtained between the same parties in the same Court and at the same time as the subsequent legal question falls to be determined. Where a putnidar took possession of resumed chakaran lands on the footing that they were included within the putni and he was entitled to hold them upon payment of such rent as might be assessed, and there were negotiations between him and the zemindar regarding the chakaran lands ; and the putnidar settled the lands with the defendants who bonâ fide accepted a raiyati lease from him. Held, that the plaintiff who purchased the putni and then took settlement of the chakaran lands from the zamindar with full knowledge that the defendants were in occupation as cultivating tenants was not entitled to rent and treat the defendants as trespassers. Binad Lal Pakrashi v. *Kalu Pramanik, I. 8. ——— Zamindar's title under s. 50. The suits which gave rise to this appeal were brought to recover khas possession from the appellant, the registered proprietor of extensive zamindaris in the Birbhum District of Bengal, of chaukidari-chakaran lands resumed by Government, and transferred to him under the provisions of the Village Chaukidari Act (Beng. Act VI of 1870). The plaintiff in each suit (respondents) was the putnidar or dar-putnidar of the village within the boundaries of which the land in each suit was situated. It was objected that the appellant had no such interest in the chaukidari-chakaran lands as could be conveyed in a putni lease. Held (on a consideration of the nature of chaukidari-chakaran lands, the provisions of the Bengal Permanent Settlement of 1793, the Regulations of that time so far as they deal with chakaran lands, and the true meaning and effect of Bengal Act VI of 1870), that the zamindar obtained or retained in the chaukidari-chakaran lands situate within the territorial boundaries of a village comprised in his zamindari an interest capable of being made the subject of a putni lease. The settlement of 1793 recognizes and proceeds on the footing that the zamindars are the actual proprietors of the land for which they undertake to pay the Government revenue; and it is clear that since the settlement they have had a primâ facie title to all lands for which they pay revenue, such lands being commonly referred to as malguzari lands: see Perklad Sein v. Doorga Persaud Tewaree, 12 Moo. I. A. 289. On the Regulations of the Permanent Settlement the leading authority is Joykissen Mookerjee v. Collector of East Burdwan, 10 Moo. I. A. 16, in which Lord Kingsdown said that the effect of the settlement was to divide chakaran lands into two classes, viz., thanadari-chakaran lands, that is, land held on service tenure by police officials and all other chakaran lands. The former class were, by Bengal Regulation I of 1793, s. 8, cl. 4, made resumable by Government, the Government relieving the zamindars from the duty of maintaining a police establishment. These lands were in fact shortly afterwards resumed, and became Government lands, the title of the zamindars being extinguished by such resumption. As to all other chakaran lands, whether held by public officers or private servants in lieu of wages, they are dealt with by Regulation VIII of 1793, s. 41. From [illegible] services for which were purely personal to the zamindar, it was clear that thanadari and chaukidari-chakaran lands, the services for which involved the performance of duties in which the public was interested, had not, as a rule, been taken into account for the purpose of increasing the revenue. The effect of a resumption by the Government of chaukidari-chakaran lands under the provisions of Bengal Act VI of 1870 is that after the assessment is complete the Collector is, under s. 50, by order in the scheduled form, to transfer to the zamindar subject to such assessment; and by s. 51 such order operates to transfer the land to the zamindar "subject to all contracts thereby made in respect of, under, and by virtue of which any person, other than the zamindar, may have any right to any [illegible] lessee of the zamindars' interest in the lands resumed, and also the rights of a dar-putnidar under a dar-putni grant. Not only, therefore, does the Act recognize the existing title of the zamindar to the lands resumed, but the estate taken by the [illegible]

II Arts. 113 and 144—Suit by putnidar to recover rights in, and to obtain a settlement of, chaukidari-chakaran lands on resumption by Government and transfer of them to zamindar—Suit for possession or for specific performance—Whether rights were contractual—Transactions creating real right—Village Chaukidari Act (Beng. VI of 1870), s. 51.* In suits brought by the respondent claiming to recover and obtain as settlement of certain chaukidari-chakaran lands in villages of which the appellant was the zamindar, it was contended that the suits were barred by limitation, and that question depended on whether they were suits for specific performance and governed by Art. 113 (three years) or for possession and governed by Art. 144 (twelve years) of the limitation Act. There was no doubt that under the ruling of the Board in Ranjit Singh v. Kali Dasi Debi, I. L. R. 44 Calc. 841 ; L. R. 44 I. A. 117, the putnidar had, on resumption of the lands by the Government and transfer of them to the appellant, such rights in the land as he claimed. Held, that it did not follow that because such rights originally arose by virtue of a grant declared to be a contract within the meaning of s. 51 of Bengal Act VI of 1870, they are therefore rights contractual in the sense that the contract by its terms creates or regulates the personal obligations and duties of the grantor in the circumstances that had arisen, which were not contemplated and necessarily not referred to at the time the grants were made. On the resumption of the lands by the Government the rights of the patnidar were those conferred on him by the estate and interest created by the putni leases, and it was these rights which were kept alive by s. 51 of Bengal Act VI of 1870. The suits were not suits for specific performance of a contract, nor was the application of Art. 113 of the Limitation Act in any way suitable to them, no date having been fixed for performance, nor any notice given of refusal to perform a contract for there was no unexecuted contract to be performed. A suit for specific performance is essentially a suit for enforcing a stipulation relating to property. The word "contract" itself primarily means a transaction which creates personal obligations, but it may, though less exactly, refer to transactions which create real rights. It is in this latter sense that the word was used in s. 51, and the rights thereby reserved to the putnidars, comprehensively in the word "contracts" are real rights, the enforcement of which is secured not by a suit for specific performance, but by a suit for possession, and this is the character of the present suits. The period of limitation applicable therefore is twelve years prescribed by Art. 144 of the Limitation Act, and the suits were not barred. The main purpose of the Act is the protection of zemindars within that district, and any provisions which affect rights to enforce in jurisdictions outside it, personal debts or liabilities, are merely ancillary to the main purpose of the Act, which is directed to improving the persons owning land within it. The procedure provided for by s. 14 of the patni Regulation (VIII of 1819) is not such as to put those submitting to pay money under it in the position of persons paying a claim

But s. 14 of the Regulation expressly recognises the right to bring a separate suit in an ordinary Court in which the question of title can be raised, notwithstanding the proceedings before the Collector taken by the zemindar under s. 8, which are of an administrative rather than a properly judicial character. VI of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply to the matter as the order of the High Court directing amendment was not made under O. VI, but under the power of the Court to order that certain steps should be taken by the parties to enable the differences between them to be properly settled, and the amendment made was not out of time. That although the Deputy Commissioner had general jurisdiction over the case under the High Court's order the Deputy Collector and not he had power to deal with the matter and his order should be set aside. That the objection on the part of the judgment-debtor that it was the decree and not the plaint that was to be amended, though it would have been a valid objection if the case was under the general law, under the special provisions of s. 5 of the Rent Recovery Act there was no necessity for amending the decree. In rent suits it is desirable where the plaintiff has received delivery of possession from the Civil Court and has had his possession recognized in the survey proceedings, he should be permitted to realise his rent, leaving it to any third person who disputes the plaintiff's title, to bring a civil suit. for rent instituted under Act X of 1859—Decree and purchase by landlord in execution after Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act brought into force and land recorded as above at Settlement—Title to tenure. Under s. 83 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act, the Settlement Officer has jurisdiction to decide a dispute between landlord and tenant as to whether the latter was a mundari khuntkatidar and to record an entry to the effect in the record-of-rights. Where pending a suit for rent brought under Act X of 1859, the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (Beng. VI of 1908) came into operation, and the landlord in execution of the decree obtained in the suit put up the holding to sale and purchased it, but meanwhile in the course of settlement proceedings the land was recorded as the mundari khuntkati of the defendant. Held, that although the new Act did not apply to the suit, it governed proceedings in execution instituted after the suit had terminated in a decree; and the entry that the land was the mundari khuntkani of the tenants being conclusive evidence under s. 256 of the Act, the landlord acquired no title in the land. A proceeding in the Court of a Settlement Officer of Chota Nagpur under s. 85 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act for settlement of fair rent is not subject to the superintendence of the High Court under s. 15 of the High Courts Act, as appeals from the orders of the Settlement Officer lie under statutory rules to the Commissioner, an officer not shown to be subordinate to the Appellate Jurisdiction of the High Court. that, as the order passed by the first court was an order passed after a decree and relating to the execution thereof within the meaning of s. 215 of the Tenancy Act an appeal lay to the Judicial Commissioner. The court to which an application is made under s. 212 of the Tenancy Act is bound to inquire into the truth of the allegations made in the application. A person cannot have a sale set aside under s. 212 merely upon his putting before the court a series of statements which may be totally untrue. ———— Thak and Survey maps —Consent decree in previous suit—Decree not inter parties—Constructive possession of owner of submerged lands during diluvion—Adverse possession—Limitation. The plaintiffs sued for declaration of their title to certain Chur lands which they alleged were partly reformations on the site of and partly accretions to three mauzas. The Churs were measured in the course of Thak proceedings in the year 1859 and were subsequently measured by way of survey during the following year. The plaintiffs based their title to the disputed land on the Thak map of 1859, the Survey map of 1860, and a consent decree passed in 1879 in a suit instituted by the predecessors-in-interest of the plaintiffs against persons represented by the defendants in consequence of a dispute about the possession of some of the lands of these Churs. Held, on the evidence, that the consent decree was as binding on the parties as a decree after a contentious trial, but it cannot have greater validity than the compromise itself: Held, on the evidence, that the proceedings in the suit of 1879 were not bonâ fide; that the compromise was entered into without authority from the defendants, and that it was not established that the defendants, even though apprised of the compromise, had acquiesced in it. That the rights of property as between two parties cannot be affected by a map drawn for a different purpose—a purpose not relevant to the subject of the dispute between them. That the location of the boundary in the map prepared in the suit of 1879 could not be treated as conclusive between the parties for the purposes of the present controversy, inasmuch as it was not necessary for the disposal of that suit and was outside its scope. Kerr v. Nuzzur Mahamed, 2 W. R. P. C. 28, Kanto Prashad v. Jagat Chandra, I. L. R. 23 Calc. 335, Ranjit Sinha v. Basanta Kumar, 9 C. L. J. 597, Preo Nath v. Durga Tarini, 14 C. L. J. 578, and Shib Churn v. Nil Kantha, 17 C. L. J. 642, relied on. No hard and fast rule can be laid down that a Survey map is more reliable than a Thak map. The true principle is that the map which more clearly agrees with the local land-marks is the one that should be followed. That as the Thak map was made in the presence of the parties or their agents, it was primâ facie binding on them and in the circumstances of the present case the decree should be based not on the Survey map but on the Thak map after it has been relaid with as much accuracy as practicable. That as the rightful owners must be deemed in law to have been in possession of the submerged lands during the period of diluvion, for the purpose of deciding the question of limitation, the only point for investigation was the period of time when the lands re-appeared and became fit for occupation; and as the possession of the defendants after reformation of the disputed lands did not extend over the statutory period, the claim of the plaintiffs was not barred by limitation in respect of lands which lay within the Thak boundaries of their Churs. That as regards the plaintiff's claim by adverse possession to land lying beyond the Thak boundaries of their Churs, the plaintiffs were bound to establish in respect of specific parcels of land that they have been in occupation thereof to the exclusion of the rightful owner continuously for a period of twelve years, for the theory of constructive possession is applied only in favour of a rightful owner and is not extended in favour of a wrong-doer whose possession is treated as confined to land of which he is actually in possession. I of 1793, Arts. 3, 6—Reg. XIX of 1793, s. 1—Reg. XI of 1825, s. 1 (1), (4).* The intention and effect of Act IX of 1847 was merely to alter the machinery by which lands gained from the sea or rivers by alluvion or dereliction were to be assessed, and not to subject to assessment any lands which would not have been liable thereto under the law in force at the time when the Act was passed. The question whether chur lands formed since the Permanent Settlement in beds of rivers belonging to a permanently settled zemindari are assessable as "land added to the estate" within the meaning of s. 6 of the Act IX of 1847, has to be determined by reference to the preexisting law and particularly to Reg. II of 1819. The effect of Reg. II of 1819 is to declare that churs formed since the Decennial Settlement upon land which at the time of the Settlement had been river-bed are to be treated as unsettled; and this express provision cannot be excluded by showing that the river-bed from which the churs have been thrown up was at the date of settlement the property of the zemindar and that the settlement was imposed upon the zemindari as a whole. In view of Art. 3 of Reg. II of 1819, a river-bed was not intended to be treated as "waste land" coming within the protection of Art. 31 of the Regulation. on behalf of the trust. Even if the defendants or some of them were once entitled to be trustees along with the Vicar: Held, that they by their secession from the Catholic Church and by their repudiation of the trusts of the institution which in law works a forfeiture of their office, disentitled themselves to hold the office of trustee and that, they had in law no answer to a suit for their moval. Marian Pillai v. Bishop of Mylapore, I. L. R. 17 Mad. 447, followed. Even if they offered to return to their allegiance to the Romish Church, it would not be possible to accept their recantation to the extent of holding them to be fit to hold the responsible office of trustee Even if the plaintiff had not asked for the removal of the defendants, an amendment to that effect can be allowed in order to avoid future litigation and in the interests of the trust. A plaintiff may be allowed to sue certain defendants under s. 30, Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), as representing certain others in spite of the objection or refusal of the defendants on record to represent the others, the consent of the defendants on record not being necessary. In re Andrews v. Salmon (1888), W. N. 102, followed. Where a defendant claims to hold certain properties as a trustee and not as his own, there is no period of limitation within which a suit must be brought to recover them on behalf of the trust. The fact that the entire income of certain properties has always been utilised for a church is very good evidence that the properties belong to it. No deed of endowment is necessary to prove a dedication of certain properties in favour of a trust. Under s. 57 of Evidence Act the Court could dispense with evidence only of what may be regarded as notorious facts of public history, and cannot treat letters though 75 years old without any sort of legal proof, as proof of where certain missionaries were living or when they died. Taylor on Evidence, tenth edition, volume II, paragraph 1785, and Wigmore on Evidence, volume III, s. 1699, referred to. 5. ———— Jurisdiction —Suit for ejectment of defendants as trespassers—Defence set up that defendants were tenants of the plaintiff—Act (Local) No. II of 1901 (Agra Tenancy Act), s. 202. In a suit filed in a Civil Court for ejectment of the defendants as trespassers, the defendants pleaded in effect that they were tenants of the plaintiff. With reference to this plea the civil court held that the suit was not cognizable by it; but instead of returning the plaint for presentation in the proper court, passed a decree dismissing the suit. On the plaintiff's appeal the lower appellate court agreed with the first court that the suit was not cognizable by a civil court and made an order returning the plaint. Held that an appeal lay to the High Court against this order. Held also that, the suit being on the face of the plaint a suit cognizable by a civil court, the court of first instance should have entertained it, but in view of the defence set up, should have taken action under s. 202 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1901. A comparison of s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859 with ss. 278 to 282 of Acts X of 1877 and XIV of 1882 clearly lead to the conclusion that under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859 the Court could only make an order releasing the property from attachment or disallow the claim which must be one objecting to the sale of the property in execution. ———— Sale of property of person who had died pending attachment without making the legal representatives of deceased parties, if valid—Objection not taken in application to set aside sale, if may be taken by suit. Under the old Civil Procedure Code of 1882 an attachment once made did not necessarily fall with the dismissal of the application for execution. Also if a judgment-debtor died before the sale but after attachment, the sale was not necessarily invalid merely because the legal representative of the judgment-debtor had not been brought on the record. The omission was regarded, at most, as an irregularity which might lay the sale open to attack under the provisions of s. 311 of the Code. had been dedicated to charity, and refused to uphold his claim as owner. The plaintiff declined to adopt the Court's suggestion to modify his claim and be content to ask for a decree for possession as manager, and his suit was therefore dismissed. Five years later he filed the present suit, claiming possession as manager. Held, that his title as manager was one which might and ought to have been put forward in the previous suit, and that his present claim was therefore res judicata. If a plaintiff is suing in a capacity in which he is a stranger to the capacity in which he sued in a former suit, his claim has no proper connection with that former suit, and the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13, does not apply. If evidence not originally available comes to the knowledge of a litigant and he can show thereby that evidence on which a decree against him was obtained was perjured, his remedy lies in seeking a review of judgment. S. 6 of the Limitation Act cannot be invoked to extend the period as s. 6, Act X of 1908, is expressly limited to cases where the limitation is provided for in the Limitation Act itself: nor is there any law apart from s. 6 to the effect that minority is a ground of exemption from the operation of the law of limitation. Moro Sadashiv v. Visaji Raghunath, I. L. R. 16 Bom. 536, not followed. Jhandu v. Mohan-Lal 29 P.R. 489 followed. English decisions on the policy of Limitation Acts referred to. Limitation being the result of Statute Law no exemption from it can be recognised except what the Statute itself provides. Under the old Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) even where the decree directed that mesne profits should be ascertained in execution, the application for the ascertainment of mesne profits was one in execution only, and not in suit; so that the limitation applicable for such an application was that applicable for execution applications. An application for the ascertainment of mesne profits directed by a decree under the old Civil Procedure Code, but made after 12 years after decree, is barred by the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 230. The new Civil Procedure Code which directs an enquiry as to the mesne profits, before passing a final decree is not applicable to such a case. The effect to be given to a document and to the proceedings of a Court must be decided by the law in force when the document was executed or the proceedings were passed. Mutiah Chettiar v. Ramaswami Chettiar (Second Appeal No. 117 of 1911), followed. Applicant's mother, as next friend of the applicant, obtained a decree in his favour for partition which was confirmed with certain modifications by the High Court on 3rd August 1897. The decree left the mesne profits subsequent to suit to be ascertained in execution. The decree also declared as follows:— "The plaintiff do recover, when collected, his one-third share of such debts as have been or can be collected with due diligence out of the debts due to the family." Various applications for execution of the decree were made by the applicant's mother and she entered into a compromise on 21st January 1900 with the judgment-debtors regarding all the matters mentioned in the decree and others and the Court passed on 6th February 1903 a final decree in terms of the compromise. The latter looked after the minors and managed their property. When they arrived at the age of majority they found that A claimed the property in her own right. In 1891, R and D sued A for the possession of the lands and obtained a decree on the 30th of August 1892, which was confirmed on appeal on the 15th of June 1894. This decree was sought to be executed on the 26th June 1897, but the application was dismissed as barred by limitation. A was then wrongfully deprived of the possession of the property by V, who sold it to B in 1908. B mortgaged the property to E in 1900. In the same year, the plaintiff obtained a money decree against R and D, and in execution of it he had an attachment placed on the property, but the attachment was removed in 1904 at the instance of B and E. In 1905, the plaintiff brought a suit for a declaration that the property was liable to be attached and sold in execution of his decree against R and D. The defendants B and E contended that the suit was barred under Art. 142 of the Limitation Act, 1877, inasmuch as neither the plaintiff nor his predecessors-in-title R and D were in possession of the property within twelve years preceding the suit: Held, that the suit having been brought by the plaintiff under s. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882, to establish his right to attach and sell the property in dispute as that of his judgment-debtors R and D in execution of his money decree, all that he had to prove was that on the date of attachment the judgment-debtors had a subsisting right to the property; and that the suit must, possession or discontinuance of possession. It is a general principle that any one suing in ejectment must prove possession within twelve years: the reason for this, however, is that possession is commonly the effective assertion of title which is relied on: but it is not the only one. There is another which in some cases is equally good, and that is an assertion of title made in Court and established by a decree. That is good against those who are party defendants to the suit; and if the same title is re-asserted and made good in a later suit against other opposing parties, it is good against them also and entitles to possession whether the title claimant has or has not been in possession within twelve years, unless the opponent can defeat the title by adverse possession. Where the lower Court dismissed as premature an application made before the sale for amendment of sale proclamation on the ground that the property had been under valued: Held, that under-statement of value in a sale proclamation being a material irregularity, where an application is made by a debtor objecting to the value of the property as stated in the sale proclamation it is the duty of the Court to make an enquiry and to satisfy itself that the value as stated in the sale proclamation is correct. The prohibition is not based on the ground that the auction-purchaser is the representative of the decree-holder. The auction-purchaser is not such representative. Manickka Odayan v. *Rajagopala Pillai, I. L. The true ground for the prohibition is not that s. 244 bars the suit as the auction-purchaser is the representative of the decree-holder, but that s. 244 being a bar to setting aside the sale except by a proceeding between the parties, the suit against the purchaser is not maintainable until it is to set aside. This share was ascertained to be one-sixth of the property, and was sold and purchased by G R himself. The sale was duly confirmed and the sale certificate issued. G R then applied for possession by partition of the share, the other members of the family objected, and the executing Court, on 22nd November 1902, ordered that G R should sue for partition in a separate suit, as partition could not be effected in execution proceedings. In 1913 the son of G R brought the present suit for partition. The Lower Courts held that a separate suit was barred by s. 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. Held, that s. 244 of the old Code of Civil Procedure, which was applicable, did not give the executing Court power to effect a partition, and that the present suit was, therefore, necessary and competent. Yelmualai Chetti v. *Srinivasa Chetti, I. A decree was passed awarding the claim out of the property of the deceased. After the passing of the decree but before it could be executed both R and N died. C then brought on the record the defendants as the legal representatives of M. The latter denied that they were M's legal representatives or that they had any property of M's which could be liable for the decree. The Court overruled the objections, and in execution of the decree attached and sold the property in dispute. The plaintiff purchased the property at the sale, and filed this suit to recover possession thereof from the defendants. The lower Court disallowed the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the property having been joint property of M and defendants, survived to the latter at M's death ; and that the plaintiff obtained no title at the Court-sale which he could legally assert as against the defendants. In the lower appellate Court the plaintiff contended unsuccessfully that the defendants were debarred by the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, from asserting their title. Held, that as the property was sold by the Court at C's instance as that of M, the question so far was one relating to the execution of the decree arising between the decree-holder and the defendants as judgment-debtors under s. 252 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882. It was, therefore, a question in relation to them falling within s. 244 of the Code by reason of the explanation to s. 647 that applications for the execution of the decree were proceedings in suits. The defendants were consequently bound to object to the attachment and sale under that section, so far as the decree-holder's action was concerned. It was contended that whatever might have been the result if the decree-holder had been a party to the suit, the present dispute was between the auction- [illegible] ious suit and the [illegible]: Held, that though an auction-purchaser at a Court-sale in execution of a decree was not a party to the suit in which the decree was passed and though he was not a representative of either the decree-holder or the judgment-debtor for the purposes of s. 244, yet if the question raised by the judgment-debtor as to the legality of the Court-sale was virtually one between the parties to the suit, that is, between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, and if in the decision and result of that question the auction-purchaser was interested, the judgment-debtor ought not to be allowed to attack the sale in a suit. The test in all such cases is whether the ground upon which the Court-sale is attacked as conferring no title upon the auction-purchaser affects the parties to the suit and could have as between them been raised and determined under s. 244 and whether the auction-purchaser, though not a party to that suit, is a party interested in the result. ——— Decree—Satisfaction—Decree not carrying interest—Mortgage passed in satisfaction of decretal debt made payable in instalments—Interest payable on failure to pay instalments—Covenant for interest can be severed from the covenant as to repayment of principal—Agreement not void so far as concerned principal. The plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant for Rs. 800 without interest, but with costs which amounted to Rs. 89-12-0. In satisfaction of the decretal debt and in consideration of a cash advance of Rs. 10-4-0, the defendant passed a mortgage-deed for Rs. 900 in favour of the plaintiff. The amount of Rs. 900 was repayable in nine annual instalments of Rs. 100 each. On failure to pay any one instalment interest was to be charged at the rate of $1\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. per mensem; and the whole amount became payable on failure to pay any two instalments. None of the instalments having been paid, the plaintiff sued to recover Rs. 900 principal and Rs. 900 as interest. The lower Courts held that the mortgage-deed contravened the provisions of s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), but they passed a decree for Rs. 900 in plaintiff's favour, as the covenant to pay interest was quite distinct and severable from the covenant to pay principal. The defendant having appealed: Held, confirming the decree, that the primary and main agreement was to pay a sum of money which was not in excess of the decretal amount, and that it was only on failure to fulfil that agreement that interest was to be charged, that is, it was only something which came into operation when there was a breach of the agreement; and that the primary agreement was therefore not void under s. 257A of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. Bhagchand v. *Radhakisan, I. the adjustment not having been certified to the Court, it could not recognise it as valid but was bound to execute the decree. The Subordinate Judge overruled the contention holding that as the decree-holder had, after the adjustment, received for several years moneys under it, he was estopped by conduct under s. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. Held, that the view of the Subordinate Judge gave the go-by to the plain language of the last paragraph of s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. There is no room left by the law for the operation of the law of estoppel in the matter of execution. The last paragraph of s. 258 enacts a special law for a special purpose whereas s. 115 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, relates to the general law of estoppel; and the principle is that a special law overrides for its purposes the general law. Per CHANDAVARKAR, J.—Fraudulent executions of decree must be discouraged by the Courts whenever they come to their notice; and decree-holders who enter freely into adjustments outside the Court and do not certify them as required by law, but fraudulently apply for execution, ignoring the adjustment, should be dealt with under the criminal law. Per HEATON, J.—The purpose of s. 258 of [illegible] hat the Court [illegible] that is done [illegible] c. After the attachment, in 1896, B assigned the whole of his right, title and interest to the first defendant. In 1898, the plaintiffs sued B and obtained a decree. In 1909, B took the benefit of the Insolvency Act, and his insolvency, with a small break not material in this suit lasted up to the date of the present suit. In 1904, the plaintiffs levied an attachment on the right, title and interest of B in the property already subject to the attachment by A. In 1907, A was paid off and the attachment by him was accordingly withdrawn and thereafter, in 1910, on the application of the first defendant to the Judge in Chambers, the attachment by the plaintiffs was raised by an order dated the 15th of April 1910. On the plaintiffs suing for a declaration that the interest of B in the said property at the date of the several attachments was liable to be attached and sold in execution of the plaintiffs' decree, that the order of the 15th of April 1910 should be set aside, that the said interest of B should be sold in execution of the plaintiffs' decree and the proceeds thereof applied according to law: Held, that the essential condition of enforcement of claims under ———— ss. 276, 295, 320, 325A—Execution of decree—Attachment of property—Transfer of execution proceedings to Collector—Property re-attached under another decree between same parties—Second execution proceedings transferred to Collector—Claim under the first decree satisfied by compromise—Collector asked to return the darkhast as disposed—Judgment-debtor alienating the property—Claim for rateable distribution under another decree—Claims enforceable under the attachment—Bills of sale Act, 1878, s. 8—Practice and procedure In execution of a money decree which the plaintiff obtained against B, certain property was attached and ordered to be sold The execution proceedings were thereafter transferred to the Collector under s 320 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 In the meanwhile, the plaintiff obtained another money decree against B, in execution of which the property was again attached These execution proceedings were also transferred to the Collector. While the Collector was taking steps for the execution of the first decree, the plaintiff informed the Mamlatdar, who was carrying on the execution work on behalf of the Collector, that his claim under the first decree was satisfied by B, and that the darkhast should be returned to the Court as disposed of. The Collector did so. Ten days after this, B sold the property to the defendant, who out of the consideration moneys satisfied the plaintiff's first decree and other debts of B. The plaintiff obtained a third money decree against B, in execution of which the property was sold through the Civil Court and purchased by the plaintiff himself at the Court sale. He then sued to recover possession of the property from the defendant. In support of the plaintiff's claim, it was contended: (i) that the deed of sale relied on by the defendant was invalid, having regard to the provisions of s. 325A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882); (ii) that the Collector was not warranted in acting upon the plaintiff's admission that the decree had been satisfied, because the satisfaction was one made out of Court, and not having been certified to the Court, it could not be recognized as a payment of the decree under s. 258 of the Code; and (iii) that the sale to the defendant was illegal and void under s 276, because the property was on the date of the sale under attachment in the plaintiff's darkhast ultimately disposed of by the Collector, on the strength of the plaintiff's application that it should be returned to the Court as "disposed of" in consequence of the decree Held, (i) that the sale to defendant was not void under the provision of s 325A, inasmuch as ss. 322 to 325 presupposed

a decree which had to be satisfied and which was therefore capable of execution. That could not be said of a decree which its holder by his declaration to the Collector acknowledged to have been satisfied (ii) That the intimation to the Collector who was in charge of the execution, amounted to a due certifying of the adjustment of the decree, which satisfied the conditions of s. 258 Muhammad Said Khan v Payag Sahu, I. L. R. 16 All. 228, followed. (iii) That s 276 did not apply: for though the attachment had existed at the date of the sale to the defendant and was never formally raised, the darkhast claim having been satisfied was no longer enforceable under it Held, further, that the second attachment itself was illegal under the provisions of the last portion of the first paragraph of s. 325A; and it could not affect the private sale to the defendant by B. Held, also, that the sale to the defendant was not illegal and void under s 276 of the Code by reason of the second darkhast. The moment the attachment of the plaintiff came to an end by reason of the satisfaction of his first decree sent to the Collector for execution, all claims enforceable under the attachment ceased to be enforceable under it A claim under another decree cognizable under s. 295 ceased to be operative for the purposes of ss. 276 and 295, the same being dependent upon the continuance of the said attachment Sorabji E Warden v Govind Ramji, I L. R 16 Bom 91, distinguished. Umesh Chunder Roy v Raj Bullubh Sen, I L. R 8 Calc 279, Gobind Singh v Zalim Singh, I L. R. 6 All 33, and Kunhi Mossa v Makki, I L R. 23 Mad 478, followed. When a decree-holder intimates to the Collector that his decree has been satisfied and that the necessity for its execution by the Collector has ceased to exist, the Collector's powers under ss 322 to 325 also cease, because the very foundation of them consisting in the fact of a decree which is alive and capable of execution, has disappeared The provisions of s 276 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) make the private alienation void not absolutely but only "as against all claims enforceable under the attachment" referred to in it Where the execution proceedings, in the course and for the purpose of which the attachment was made, have come to an end on account of satisfaction of the decree by the judgment-debtor, and in consequence the decree is no longer alive, the attachment also ceases and there is no longer any claim "enforceable" under the attachment to make the private alienation effected by the judgment debtor under the attachment void. The person for whose protection s. 276 was primarily intended has had his claim in that event satisfied otherwise than by the attachment. As to any claim under another decree, cognizable under s 295, that had been dependent on the continuance of the said attachment, when that attachment was swept away, all other claims cognizable under it ceased to be operative for the purposes of ss. 276 and 295. The only bar in the way of the private alienation was removed as if it never existed in law; and the question as to the private alienation made by the judgment-debtor to the defendant during the attachment became reduced to one between that judgment-debtor and his alienee. The suit was dismissed and a decree for defendant's cost, namely Rs. 96-2-10, was passed against the plaintiff. The defendant sold the decree to one Nathu, who, in execution attached Shivlal's house. A proclamation of sale was published and at the auction sale one Gangadas Dayabhai purchased the house for Rs. 1,325 and deposited one-fourth of the purchase-money. The purchaser, however, made a default in the payment of the balance in time and the house was again put up to sale. At the re-sale only Rs 260 were realized. Assets are realised not when the deposit is made by the purchaser, but only when the balance of the purchase money is paid into Court. An application for execution to the superior Court is an essential pre-requisite of a general claim to rateable distribution. Where the lower Court has ordered the transfer of the decree for execution to the superior Court, an application after such order to the superior Court before it has received a copy of the decree would be sufficient to satisfy the requirements of O. purchaser—Protection—Doctrine of constructive notice—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 3 and 41. The mortgagee of the certified purchaser at a Court-sale is entitled to rely upon the title of his mortgagor including such immunity from suit as the law provides in support of the statutory title. S. 66 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) which may be called in aid for the purpose of assisting in the construction of s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882)—supports this conclusion. Hari Govind v. *Ramchandra, I. cases, first, whe

he is deemed to have notice of the facts and instruments to a knowledge of which he would have been led by an inquiry after the charge or incumbrance of which he actually knew, and, secondly, where the Court had been satisfied from the evidence before it that the party charged had designedly abstained from inquiring for the very purpose of avoiding notice. This does not conflict in any way with the statutory definition of notice in s. 3 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). A purchaser of property is under no legal obligation to investigate his vendor's title. But in dealing with real property as in other matters of business regard is had to the usual course of business, and a purchaser who wilfully departs from it in order to avoid acquiring a knowledge of his vendor's title is not allowed to derive any advantage from his wilful ignorance of defects which would have come to his knowledge if he had transacted his business in the ordinary way. This is what is meant by "reasonable care" in s. 41 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). Occupation of property which has not come to the knowledge of the party charged is not constructive notice of any interest in the property. Manji Karimbhai v. Hoorbai (1910)

Those decree-holders having applied for execution by attachment and sale of certain lands, the Court transferred the decree for execution to the Collector under s. 320 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The Collector executed the decree and held the amount for payment to the decree-holders. In the meantime, the plaintiff obtained a decree for money against Ramchandra and others in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, First Class, at Dhulia; and in execution of the decree obtained attachment of the amount with the Collector by means of a prohibitory order under s. 272 of the Code. About this time, the defendant obtained a decree against Ramchandra and others in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Second Class, at Chalisgaon; and in execution of his decree obtained an order of attachment of the said amount. In obedience to this second order the amount was remitted to the Chalisgaon Court, where it was paid to the defendant. The plaintiff sued to recover the money. The lower appellate Court applied the provisions of s. 285 and decreed the plaintiff's claim. Held, dismissing the plaintiff's suit, that it was governed not by the provisions of s. 285 but by those of s. 324A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held, further, that the prohibitory order passed by the Dhulia Court under the provisions of s. 272 was ultra vires and could not bind the Collector in view of the provisions of s. 234A under which he was acting. Held, also, that in virtue of s. 324A of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the Collector held the amount "at the disposal of the Court" (at Chalisgaon) which had transferred to him the decree for execution and which was bound to dispose of the amount in the manner and for the purposes mentioned in the third paragraph of that section; that it was open to the plaintiff to apply to the Court at Chalisgaon through the Court at Dhulia for rateable distribution under s. 295; and that according to the provisions of s. 324A, the Collector owed a special duty to the Chalisgaon Court and that Court alone had jurisdiction to deal with all questions as to the disposal of the amount. The plaintiff's separated brother was also a creditor. The plaintiff's brother attached the family lands. The matter went in execution to the Collector who leased the lands to one Piraji. Subsequently the plaintiff and the defendants came to an understanding by which the plaintiff agreed to remit his mortgage debt and pay off his brother—the judgment-creditor—and the defendants agreed to sell him one of the lands. The plaintiff then obtained possession of the family lands from which he was ejected by the defendants. Thereupon, the plaintiff having brought a suit to recover possession. Held, allowing the claim, that the interest which the sale-deed purported to transfer to the plaintiff was the interest which the defendants had in the lands at the time of the transfer, and the Collector's powers having ceased by reason of the proceedings in attachment being closed, the conveyance of the defendant's interest to the plaintiff took effect in his favour. Gangabai v. *Baswant, I. Ultimately the suit was compromised between the mortgagor and mortgagee and a decree passed in terms of the compromise. Neither to the compromise nor to the decree recording the compromise was defendant No. 2 a party. In execution of the decree, the mortgaged property was sold at a Court-sale and purchased by the plaintiff. When the plaintiff attempted to recover possession of the property, he was obstructed by defendant No. 2 who was in possession. On an application to remove the obstruction, the Court made an order for the removal of the obstruction in February 1908. The plaintiff recovered possession of the property in March 1908, but was dispossessed in June 1908. The plaintiff filed a suit in 1913 to recover possession of the property from defendant No. 2: Held, that the order for removal of obstruction was referable to s. 335 and not s. 331 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882; that it was binding on defendant No. 2; and that as defendant No. 2 took no steps to have the same set aside within one year of its date it had become final. Subsequently in the year 1912 T V's son, and three grandsons filed a second suit for redemption of the same property alleging that the property being ancestral they had interest in it by birth. It was also alleged that an adult brother of V was interested as a coparcener in the same property. The trial Court dismissed the suit on the strength of the order of abatement passed on the 15th October 1883. On appeal, the District Court reversed the decree and remanded the suit for disposal. On appeal to the High Court: Held, that there being no indication that V's suit was brought in a representative capacity it would certainly be defective as a redemption suit according to all canons of procedure, and if the suit was defective V's personal right to sue did not embrace the rights of his coparceners and none of them would be concluded by the application of s. 371 of Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held, also, that apart from the question raised upon s. 371, there was sufficient authority for the conclusion that since the introduction of the Code of 1877 no legal proceedings by V short of actual redemption would deprive his coparceners of their right to redeem against the mortgagee. Per CURIAM: The right of a mortgagee to enforce his security by sale in a suit against the person who executes with authority, express or implied, a mortgage of family property, without joining the coparceners interested, results from the authorized mortgage which carries with it the all embracing remedy. It does not follow that the defect of one co-owner who desires to redeem will bar the exercise of the same right by another: hence arises the necessity for joining all parties interested in one suit. Cases which are clearly outside the scope of an enactment cannot be brought within it by any inference drawn from the terms of a proviso. (1) to s. 17 cannot be brought within sub-s. (1) of s. 3 merely because sub-s. 2 of s. 17, which is in the nature of a proviso, expressly exempts certain orders and decrees relating only to cls. When the subject-matter of a lease is the rents and profits of land, the possession which a lessor, under s. 108 (b) of the Transfer of Property Act, is bound to give the lessee, is sufficiently given by giving notice of the lease to the ryots or other persons in occupation and requiring them to attorn and pay rent to the lessee. Attornment by the tenants and actual receipt of rent is not necessary to give the transferee possession of the rent. It is also no ground for not setting it aside that it is impossible to place the parties in the position in which they were when the compromise was effected. Where in a suit for partition by a member of a joint family, the father was made third defendant, and his son, a minor, was made sixth defendant, and the Court appointed the father guardian ad litem of the minor: Held (reversing the decisions of the Courts in India), that the powers of the father were controlled by the provisions of s. 462 of the Code, and he could not without leave of the Court, do any act in his capacity of father, or managing member of the joint family which he was debarred from doing as guardian ad litem. To hold otherwise would be to defeat the object of the enactment. A compromise made, without the leave of the Court, by the father with the second defendant, of a decree passed against the latter, was held therefore, in a suit brought by a minor on attaining his majority to be not binding on him. The fact that the money was by the decree made payable, not to the minor, but to the father who was admittedly representing the family, made no difference in the duty which lay on him to obtain the leave of the Court to an agreement which was clearly intended to affect the rights and interests of the minor. The decree made by their Lordships was to the effect that the compromise was not binding on the minor, and he was remitted to his original rights under the decree in the partition suit. Manohar Lal v. *Jadunath Singh, I. It is the legal effect of a decree of reversal that the party against whom the decree was given is to have restitution of all that he has been deprived of under it. A Court of Appeal does not necessarily enter into the question whether a decree, it is about to reverse, has been executed or not. Hurro Chunder Roy Chowdhry v. *Shoorodhonee Debia, 9 W. On second appeal to the High Court it was contended that the Court was bound under s. 584 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, to accept the finding of the Subordinate Judge as conclusive, the question being one of fact, but the High Court rejected that contention Held (affirming that decision), that the Subordinate Judge's finding was arrived at by inferences drawn from a misconstruction of the Wajib ul arz. The right construction of documents was a question of law which the Court on second appeal was not precluded from considering under s. 584 and 585 of the Civil Procedure Code. On the true construction it was clear from the documentary evidence that the appellants were only tenants of the land, and not proprietors. FATEH CHAND v. KISHAN KUNWAR (1912) . . I. L. The right construction of documents is a question of law which Judges in second appeal are not, by ss. 584 and 585 of the Civil Procedure Code, precluded from considering by any finding of a lower Appellate Court based upon such documents. Where the Court of first appeal found on its construction of the wajib-ul-arz and other documentary evidence that the plaintiffs were the owners of the lands in suit, and the High Court on second appeal, on their construction of the wajib-ul-arz and other documents in the suit, held that the plaintiffs were not the owners: Held, that the Court of first appeal having misconstrued the wajib-ul-arz, the High Court in second appeal was not bound to accept as correct its finding based upon such misconstruction. The wajib-bl-arz is cogent evidence of the rights as they existed when it was made of those holi holding proprietary or other rights of property within the mouzah. When no such ground can be made out, but the order is sought to be challenged on the ground that it was made without jurisdiction, the proper course for the aggrieved party is to move the High Court in revision. That is to say, it is a preliminary decree in those cases where it necessarily involves the result that the accounts should be taken under s. 13 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879, despite the terms of the contract to the contrary. It is not a preliminary decree, when there are other questions yet to be determined before the parties could be held entitled to have accounts taken under s. 13 of the Act. 2. ——— Preliminary decree, decision that plaintiff can maintain suit if—Court's refusal to embody its findings in formal decree—Right of appeal. A decision merely holding that the plaintiff's suit is maintainable is not a preliminary decree. It is not an adjudication on "matters in controversy" in the suit. The intention of the Legislature appears to be that there should be only one preliminary decree in the suit to be followed by one final decree. The preliminary decree ascertains what is to be done whilst the final decree states the result achieved by means of the preliminary decree. The cases in which the Legislature contemplated the preparation of a preliminary decree are specified in rr. 12 to 18 of O. XX of the Civil Procedure Code. Sidha Nath Dhonddeb v. *Gonesh Govind, I. XXVI, rr. 11, 12 (2) —Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879)—Redemption suit—Direction to a Commissioner to take account—The direction not a preliminary decree. In a redemption suit tried under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), the first Court, on the 15th August 1910, referred the taking of the account to a Commissioner and on the 30th August 1910 passed a decree for the plaintiffs for possession free from incumbrances, the defendants having received profits for 25 years after the debt had been paid off. One of the defendants having appealed on the 10th October 1910, the Appellate Court dismissed the appeal as time-barred on a preliminary objection taken by the plaintiff-respondents, namely, that the period of 30 days for the appeal ran from the date when the Court issued the commission to the Commissioner on the 15th August 1910 because the issue of commission constituted a preliminary decree within the definition of s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). The defendant having appealed to the High Court: Held, reversing the decree of the Appellate Court and remanding the case for disposal on the merits, that there was nothing in the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) which prevented the Appellate Court from entertaining the appeal inasmuch as there was not a preliminary decree within the meaning of s. 97 of the Code, that in applying the definition of the decree contained in s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), the right of the parties in respect to matters in controversy should be taken to mean the general rights in relation to status, in relation to jurisdiction, in relation to limitation, in relation to frame of the suit and in relation to liability to account which, if decided, must have a general effect upon the proceedings in the suit and could be decided preliminary to the investigation of the matters in dispute between the parties upon the merits. Krishnaji v. *Maruti, 12 Bom. ———— Decree against a judgment-debtor who dies—Execution against his legal representative—True legal representative not brought on record—Sale of property in execution—Suit by auction purchaser to recover possession of property from true legal representative—Sale not binding on true legal representative. The plaintiff having obtained a decree applied after the death of the judgment-debtor, for execution against the property of the deceased, bringing the latter's brother's widow on the record as legal representative. At that time, the plaintiff knew that the debtor had bequeathed his property by will to his mistress R. The executing Court made no inquiry as to who the real legal representative was, and the widow not appearing, the judgment-debtor's property, valued at Rs. 120, was sold to the plaintiff's brother-in-law for Rs. 11 and subsequently resold by him to the plaintiff. In the meantime R obtained probate of the will and sold the property to defendant No. 10, putting him in possession. The plaintiff having sued to recover possession of the property from defendant No. 10: Held, that defendant No. 10 was entitled to ask the Court to hold that as against him the auction purchaser had obtained no title to the property. Held, further, that the right of defendant No. 10 to dispute the fact that the estate was properly represented had still been preserved; and as he had clearly shown that the estate as a matter of fact had not been properly represented, the sale could not be binding upon him. Mallarjun v. Narhari (1900), 25 Bom. 337 and Khairajmal v. Daim (1904), 32 Calc. 296, discussed. Held, also, that R was, from the date of the testator's death, his true legal representative; and that the inference to be drawn from the facts found was that the plaintiffs were endeavouring to acquire a right to the debtor's property in fraud of R. Per MACLEOD, *C. After the death of both defendants, the plaintiff sought to execute the decree against the three surviving co-parceners: Held, dismissing the application, that the surviving co-parceners were not bound by the decree for on no construction of the term "legal representative" could members of a joint Hindu family be brought within its definition as contained in s. 2 (11) of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908. Per BEAMAN, J. "S. 53 (of the Civil Procedure Code) has been enacted, in my opinion, expressly to enforce one recognised rule of the Hindu law, namely, that members of a joint Hindu family may not escape the payment out of the joint family property of any debt incurred and decree against their father before his death provided that such debt is not tainted by immorality. They referred their dispute to arbitration by means of an agreement, dated the 8th of August 1909. At the time J G was sonless, but on the 26th of December 1909 a son J N was born to him. On the 9th of March 1910 the arbitrator gave his award and on the 25th of July 1910, upon an application made by K K to have the award filed in Court, the parties agreed to a compromise by which they accepted the award with certain modifications in favour of J G. Upon this a decree was passed. D D the second son of J G was born on the 4th of August 1913. The present suit was instituted by J N and D D, the minor sons of J G, on the 16th of June 1914 for a declaration to the effect that the entire arbitration proceedings were null and void, and praying to be awarded joint possession of the property in dispute and they valued the relief sought at Rs. 2,500. The property was valued for purposes of jurisdiction at a sum exceeding 8 lakhs, and it was contended that the suit should be valued for purposes of Court-fees at the actual value of the plaintiff's share. During the pendency of the appeal J N died. An application was then made under O. XXII, r. 3, Civil Procedure Code, praying that his brother D D and his mother Mst. P D should be brought on the record as his legal representatives. This application was accepted subject to all just exceptions. Held, that there in no such thing as succession properly so called in an undivided Hindu family and the order in chambers making D D and Mst. P D the legal representatives of J N deceased must consequently be set aside. Chunilal v. Bai Mani (I. L. R. 42 Bom. 104), followed, also Mayne's Hindu Law, 8th Edition, page 339. Held also, that the present suit is not for partition and for possession of a definite share of joint property, but is one to enforce the right to share in joint family property. This being so the value of the suit is the amount stated in the plaint, viz., Rs. 2,500, vide s. 7 (IV) (b) of the Court Fees Act. Dagdu v. Totaram (*I. L. And if the reference cannot be objected to, the award cannot be objected to merely on the ground of inequality of benefit. Balaji v. Nana (*I. L. A Cantonment Committee constituted under the Indian Cantonments Act (XIII of 1889) is a "public officer" within the meaning of s. 2, cl. (17) of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act V of 1908). Before the Committee can be sued, notice prescribed by s. 80 of the Code must be given. The notice contemplated by s. 80 has to be given for actions sounding substantially in tort; and it makes no difference that those actions are, by operation of law, treated, for certain purposes, as actions ex contractu. Rajmal v. *Hanmant, I. The Collector has no authority to reverse the decision come to by the Mamlatdar upon the evidence. III—Decree—Interest awarded up to realisation—Execution—Interest calculated in darkhast up to its date—Collector carrying on execution and paying interest and amount as prayed in darkhast—Court directing Collector to continue execution till payment of interest up to realisation—Discretion of Collector—Jurisdiction of Court. The plaintiffs obtained a money-decree against the defendants which awarded interest on the decretal amount up to its realisation. They applied to execute the decree and calculated interest over the decretal amount up to the date of the application. The Collector, to whom the execution-proceedings were transferred, placed the defendants' estate under his management; and when the decretal amount and interest as calculated in the plaintiffs' application were paid up, he treated the decree as satisfied and returned the execution-proceedings to the Court. The Court sent back the proceedings to the Collector, asking him to continue in management till interest over the decretal amount from the date of the application to the date of realisation was paid to the plaintiffs. The District Court held on appeal that the Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with what lay completely within the Collector's jurisdiction and reversed the order. On second appeal: Held, restoring the order passed by the first Court, that under the provisions of s. 7 (1) (b) of the third schedule of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908, the Collector had to take into account the whole amount, with the total interest awarded by the decree; and that that would include not merely interest up to the date of the application but also interest which would run according to the decree thereafter. Per CHANDAVARKAR, J.—The Civil Procedure Code (ss. 69 and 70) of 1908 gives authority to the Collector for the purpose of enabling him to determine the best mode or modes of satisfying the decree, whether it is to be satisfied by management by the Collector himself of the land attached in execution of the decree, or whether it is to be by its sale or letting. So far, therefore, as the machinery necessary for the satisfaction of the decree is concerned the Collector is the sole authority. The discretion is his, and no Civil Court can interfere with that discretion. But that discretion does not extend to any jurisdiction in the Collector to determine whether the decree itself has been satisfied or not. The latter jurisdiction is the Civil Court's. It is that Court above which is competent to determine the question judicially. BAYECHAND HANSRAJ v. VIRA CHHATRA (1912) . . . . I. L. R. 37 Bom. 32

1. ——— Suit for declaration and injunction—Right to perform Ram Lila, such performance not being connected with any shrine or temple and being supported by purely voluntary contributions—Suit not maintainable—Jurisdiction. The plaintiff, a minor, sued for a declaration that he had the right to perform certain religious pageants in Benares and to receive subscriptions in connection therewith, and claimed an injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with that right. It was found that these pageants had been performed for many years past by the plaintiff's father, grandfather and great-grandfather with the aid of voluntary subscriptions from the Hindu community. But the pageants were not connected with any particular temple, shrine or sacred spot, nor did the plaintiff or his ancestors hold any office by virtue of which they were under any obligation to perform such pageants. The performance thereof was in fact wholly voluntary. Held, that the plaintiff's suit would not lie. Tholappala Charlu v. Venkata Charlu, I. L. R. 19 Mad. 62, Srinivasa v. *Tiruvengada, I. L. 3. ——— Right to officiate at funeral ceremonies, suit for declaration of—"Right of office." The plaintiff, a Hindu priest of Patna, sued for a declaration that he had by custom a right to officiate at all funeral ceremonies performed upon the banks of the Ganges between certain points, and for recovery of a sum of money paid to the defendant by the members of a household situate within the plaintiff's birt for officiating at the funeral ceremony of a member of such household. Held, that no suit for a declaration lay. The plaintiff did not claim that any "legal character" vested in him within the meaning of s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, or that he was entitled to any "right of office" within the meaning of s. 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. The freedom of the subject entitles all Hindus to call in at any time any priest whom they may prefer to perform any ceremony, and so long as that inherent freedom exists, there can vest in no one any legal character or any right to the office of performing ceremonies in private houses. Held, further, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the money paid to the defendant unless he could prove that there was a contract between himself and the defendant, whereby the defendant had bound himself to pay to the plaintiff all sums received from ceremonies performed within the plaintiff's birt. Mere proof of a custom that among the Brahmin priests of Patna there was an implied contract not to interfere with the rights of each other, did not amount to proof of a contract by the defendant to pay to the plaintiff sums of money received for officiating at ceremonies within the plaintiff's birt. Hira Panday v. Bachu Panday 1 Pat. 5. ——— Right to be carried in procession—Claim to dignity and honour—Right claimed as Jagadguru—Alternative claim made as a member of the public—Inconsistent claim—Plaint—Amendment—Civil Court—Jurisdiction. A suit claiming a right to be carried in a cross-palanquin procession with Panch-Kalash and Birudavali is not maintainable in a Civil Court without proof of special damage. Madhusudan Parvat v. Shri Shankaracharya (1908) 33 Bom. 278, referred to. The plaintiff alleged that he was one of the Jagadgurus of the Lingayats and as such he claimed the right of going in procession seated in a cross-palanquin adorned with and accompanied by Panch-Kalash and Birudavali. One of the issues raised in the trial Court was, "Is the right to parade in cross-palanquin as described in the plaint a general right exercisable by any subject of His Majesty ?" On this issue it was contended in second appeal by the plaintiff that the lower Courts which dismissed his suit on the ground that it was not maintainable in a Civil Court should have dealt with the case as if the plaintiff was suing as a member of the public claiming as such to be entitled to be carried in a cross-palanquin if he chose to adopt that method of procession. The plaintiff also asked that he should be allowed to amend his plaint accordingly. Held, refusing the amendment, (1) that the claim made as a member of the public was inconsistent with the plaintiff's original claim that he was entitled to be carried in procession as Jagadguru, and (2) that on the pleadings the issue raised in the trial Court was irrelevant and ought not to have been admitted. Mahomed Buksh Khan v. *Hosseini Bibi (1888) L. It does not contemplate that the Court has no jurisdiction to order an award to be filed, only because it deals with mánpán, that is, matters relating to a complement or dignity about which the Courts would have no jurisdiction to entertain suits. It is the policy of law to enable parties who by private arrangement settle a dispute to have that settlement made legally effective If there is something to arbitrate on, and there is a reference and an award, the policy of the law is that that award should be given effect to without minute inquiry by the Court. Disputes about mánpán which cannot be settled in the Courts can often only be effectively settled by arbitration. does not apply to a claim relating to a period subsequent to the claim in the former suit. It is contemplated by that section that if all the matters in dispute are substantially the same in both suits, then the fact that the relief claimed in the subsequent suit is not identical with the relief claimed in the previous suit shall not operate to enable the parties to continue the litigation. The mere fact that the question of title is raised in both suits and decided in the first suit is not sufficient to attract the operation of s. 10. The defendants had, however, on the 13th of March 1919, filed a suit in the Court of First Class Subordinate Judge at Bijapur against the plaintiffs and seven other persons, praying inter alia that the accounts between them and the various defendants in that suit be taken after fixing the rate at which their cotton should have been sold in Bombay and that a decree be passed against the several defendants for such amounts as may legally and properly be found due from them respectively. On the 29th of April 1919, the defendants applied to the High Court for a stay of the plaintiffs' suit under s 10 of the Civil Procedure Code. The plaintiffs opposed the application and asked that an order in personam be made against the defendants restraining them from proceeding with their suit in the Bijapur Court. The trial Judge holding that s. 10 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply dismissed the defendants' [illegible] suit and made [illegible] restraining the [illegible] Bijapur suit as [illegible] dants appealed, contending (1) that the High Court suit ought to have been stayed as the matter in issue therein was involved in the earlier suit in the Bijapur Court and (2) that High Court had no jurisdiction to restrain them from proceeding with their suit in Bijapur where they resided and carried on business. Held, (1) that the High Court suit should not be stayed inasmuch as the matter in issue therein was not "directly and substantially in issue in the previously instituted suit" at Bijapur within the meaning of

A suit filed in formâ pauperis was decided on the 10th February 1908. An application for leave to appeal in formâ pauperis was presented to the High Court on the 13th April 1908; but as it was beyond time it was rejected. On an application to excuse the delay, it was excused on the ground that the applicant having been a minor, s. 7 of the Limitation Act, 1877, applied. At the hearing, it was objected that the application for permission to appeal in formâ pauperis must be treated as an appeal, and that s. 5, and not s. 7 of the Limitation Act, applied to it. Held, overruling the contention, that whether the application was treated as falling under s. 5 or under s. 7 of the Limitation Act, 1877, the result was the same. If it fell under s. 5, as an appeal, then under the second paragraph of that section, which applied to appeals, the Court had jurisdiction to excuse delay, after the period of limitation prescribed for the presentation of an appeal had expired. If on the other hand, it be treated as an application and fell under s. 7 of the Limitation Act,

A consent decree come to between the predecessors-in-interest of the present parties touching matters now substantially and directly in issue between them is res judicata. Res judicata ousts the jurisdiction of the Court while estoppel does no more than shut the mouth of a party. Estoppel never means anything more than that a person shall not be allowed to say one thing at one time and the opposite of it at another time; while res judicata means nothing more than that a person shall not be heard to say the same thing twice over. It was held by the Court of first instance that R was entitled to the ornaments, because they were her stridhan, but the Appellate Court held that she was entitled to them not because they were her stridhan, but because she was the absolute owner of the property. D then sued R for a declaration that he, as son and heir to M, was entitled to hold the decree. The defendant in reply contended, inter alia, that the suit was barred by res judicata: Held, that the bar of res judicata did not apply, inasmuch as there was no final adjudication as between R and D, and in the first suit it was a matter of no consequence to the defendant therein for the purposes of the relief to be given against him whether R succeeded or whether D succeeded. A finding to become res judicata as between co-plaintiffs must have been essential for the purpose of giving relief against the defendants. Ramchandra Narayan v. *Narayan Mahadev I. L. 7. (a). ——— Res Judicata—Mortgage—Dekkhan Agricultural Relief Act. In a suit brought by a mortgagee to recover interest on his mortgage money the amount was found to be Rs. 350 and interest was awarded on that sum. The mortgagee subsequently brought another suit to foreclose the mortgage under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturist Relief Act. The mortgage amount was found to be Rs. 400 and relief granted accordingly. It was contended in the appeal that the finding as to the mortgage amount in the first suit operated as res judicata in the second suit. Held, that the Dekkhan Agriculturist Relief Act, 1879, was in relief of certain class of His Majesty's subjects and therefore the finding in the first suit could not affect and be res judicata in the second which was under a special law unless the previous suit also came within that law. In a suit brought against her husband's nephew, a Hindu widow alleged that certain property was her husband's separate property. The Court held that the property was joint property; but allowed the widow to be in possession of it in lieu of her rights to maintenance. The widow appealed against the decree, but she subsequently withdrew the appeal. On the widow's death, the property passed into the possession of her daughter who claimed it as heir to her father. The nephew filed the present suit to recover possession of the property from the daughter, who resisted the claim on the ground that the property having been the separate property of her father had descended to her and that the decision in the first suit was not binding on her. Held, that the first decree operated as res judicata against the defendant inasmuch as it was a decree against the widow as representing her husband's estate. Held, further, that so far as the first suit was concerned the case was fairly contested and the mere withdrawal of the appeal by the widow was not sufficient to deprive the decree of its operative character in law. Katama Natcheir v. *The Rajah of Shivagunga, 9 Moo. 9. ——— First suit for partition—Declaratory decree—Second suit by other members for partition of their share—Res judicata does not bar the second suit. A Khoti village was owned by two families known as Varang and Desai. In 1854, two members of the Desai family brought a suit for partitioning the one-half share of the Desai family in the village. That suit ended in a decree which awarded them the share. The decree remained unexecuted. In 1904, the plaintiff, a member of the Varang family, sued the Varang as well as the Desai members to obtain his $\frac{1}{84}$th share by partition of the village. Some of the defendants in both families admitted the plaintiffs' claim and asked that their shares also should be awarded to them on partition. It was contended that the claim of the defendants to obtain their share in the village was barred as res judicata in virtue of the decree of 1854, which awarded to them half a share in the village:—Held, that the first decree was a declaratory decree and did not operate as res judicata in the present suit. Babaji Parshram v. *Kashibai, I. The defendant raised the plea of res judicata urging that the plaintiff had filed a previous suit against her in the High Court for similar relief and had failed in it. The previous suit was filed without obtaining the leave of the Court under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, the residence of the parties being outside the jurisdiction of the Court. The Court, therefore, dismissed the suit for want of jurisdiction though issues on the merits were raised and decided. The first Court disallowed the plea of res judicata on the ground that the judgment in the previous suit was delivered by the Court not competent to do so in consequence of the absence of leave. On appeal by the defendant, the Judge dismissed the suit holding that the absence of leave did not go to the root of the jurisdiction of the Court and therefore the judgment of the Court was the judgment of a Court having jurisdiction. Held, on second appeal by the plaintiff, that the judgment in the previous suit was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it within the meaning of s. 44 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872), and therefore the plea of res judicata could not prevail. In a former suit between the parties the defendant claimed the property as the nearest male agnate and heir of B. An issue was raised whether the custom of the daughter's exclusion by a pitrai heir was proved to have been in existence in the bhagdari village of Rahad and it was heard and decided but the suit was dismissed on the ground that the defendant, who was the plaintiff in that suit, was not proved to be the nearest pitrai heir to B. It was contended that by reason of this finding the plaintiff's suit was barred by res judicata, within the meaning of s. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code 1908. Held, that the suit was not barred by res judicata because although the issue was heard and decided, it was not finally decided as it was not necessary for the decision which the Court came to dismissing the suit and the plaintiff had no necessity of appealing against the Court's finding on that issue. Both suits were decided by a single judgment, but a separate decree was framed in each. In the former suit A appealed. In the latter S appealed but A did not. Pending A's appeal S died and his appeal abated and judgment in the case became final. Held, that the hearing of A's appeal was barred. Zakaria v. Debia, I. L. R. 33 All. 51, followed. Defendants denied holding the latter plots and contended that their jama was only Rs. 16 per year. It was held that the defendants were liable to pay rent at the rate of Rs. 16 per annum for a holding which included the lands alleged to have formerly belonged to S : Held, that the questions, whether the lands alleged to have been formerly held by S formed part of the defendant's holding and of

But where such person has elected to pursue his remedy under s. 23 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, and the claim has, after a full inquiry, been decided against him, and he has not appealed from the decision under s. 46, he cannot afterwards file a separate suit with the same object. Ram Kirpal v. *Rup Kuari, I L. They then sued in a Court of Small Causes for damages on account of the same wrongful dispossession. Held, that the finding of the Munsif that the plaintiffs had in fact been dispossessed was a res judicata in respect of the subsequent suit in the Court of Small Causes. Ghulappa bin Balappa v. *Raghavendra Swamirao, I. On appeal by the defendants, two questions having arisen, namely, (i) whether the judgment refusing probate was as much within the scope and intention of s. 41 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) as a judgment granting probate, and (ii) whether the judgment in the probate proceeding operated as res [illegible] : H [illegible]

22. ——— Suit for declaration and recovery of possession—Defence of res judicata—Parties not adequately represented in the former suit not fully tried—No bar of res judicata. A suit brought by three plaintiffs as surviving coparceners of a joint Hindu family for a declaration that the property in suit formed part of the joint family property and for possession was met by the plea of res judicata. The previous suit, the decision in which was set up as res judicata, was filed in the year 1909 by the father of the present plaintiffs 2 and 3, who were minors and who were not joined as parties, against the present defendants and the present plaintiff 1 as defendant 4. The relief claimed in that suit was the same as that claimed in the present suit. The finding in that suit showed conclusively that the father of the present plaintiffs 2 and 3, who were then minors and were not parties, did not adequately represent them and the suit was not fully tried and the suit was accordingly dismissed. Held, that the bar of res judicata did not arise as the present plaintiffs 2 and 3 were then minors and were not adequately represented. Held, further, that the present plaintiff 1, who was defendant 4 in the former suit, was no more than a pro formâ defendant and took no active part and was not bound by the result of that suit the decree in which was in his favour. Raja Rampal Singh v. *Ram Ghulam Singh, L. 23. ——— Termination of tenancy by decree on prior mortgage.—The appellant purchased a plot of land at a sale held in execution of a mortgage-decree. In the mortgage-suit the plaintiff-mortgagee's case was that the tenant-defendants to that suit had taken their tenancies from the mortgagor after the date of the mortgage and the mortgagee prayed for the sale of the property free from the tenancies. The case set up by one of the respondents who was the elder brother of the other respondents was that they held a permament tenure created prior to the mortgage which was confirmed by a confirmatory lease after the mortgage and that they had created a masonry building on the land. Issues were framed on this point and the Court found in favour of the plaintiff mortgagee, and in execution of the mortgage-decree the property was sold free of all encumbrances and purchased by the appellant. Subsequently a portion of the land so purchased by the appellant was acquired under the Land Acquisition Act and the respondents put in a claim for the compensation-money alleging that they had a permanent mokurari maurasi interest in the land, the tenancy standing in the name of the elder brother. Held, that the matter was directly in issue in the former suit and decided against the respondents and they could not open the question again. must make the other co-sharers defendants, because the partition which is made in his favour is a partition against his co-sharers. That which gives him a portion of the property takes away all right which they would otherwise have to that portion, and therefore it is a decree against them and in favour of himself. Where a decree having been made in a suit for partition declaring the shares of the plaintiffs, a Commissioner under the Court's direction went and on the ground measured out the declared shares and the plaintiffs were put into possession thereof, but the defendants took no proceeding in the suit such as is provided for in the Code of Civil Procedure to correct errors, if any, made in partitioning out: Held, that, apart from such proceedings none of which were taken, the decree was res judicata, and a suit instituted by the defendants in the previous suit with a view to correct the apportionment made in favour of the plaintiffs in the previous suit was barred by res judicata. 25. ———— Rise of value of subject-matter—Pro formâ defendant when bound Person not joined as executor when bound as such—Decree against limited owner, upon compromise, when binding on reversion—Decree erroneously declared not res judicata, effect of. To determine, for purposes of res judicata whether the Court which decided the former suit had jurisdiction to try the subsequent suit, regard must be had to the jurisdiction of the Court at the date of the former suit and not to its jurisdiction at the date of the subsequent suit. A decree made by a Munsif cannot cease to be res judicata by reason of a gradual increase in the value of the subject-matter of the litigation. If a defendant actively contested the plaintiff's claim, the decision of the suit will bind him even though he was merely described as a pro-formâ defendant and no relief was asked against him. A defendant who might have been joined both in his personal capacity and in that of an executor to another's estate cannot be treated as having been a party necessarily in his character as an executor when he was not described in the pleadings as such. Where a decision between the parties was considered by the Court and declared not to be res judicata, the latter decision even if erroneous in law becomes conclusive between the parties; and it was not open to any of them to plead in a later suit that the former decision still operated as res judicata. An adverse decision obtained against a limited owner such as a Hindu daughter, if obtained upon a fair trial, is res judicata on the issues decided therein against reversionary heirs. A decree passed on a compromise made bonâ fide for the benefit of the estate and not for the personal advantage of the limited owner has the same effect, and such a decree unless successfully, impeached on the ground of fraud, coercion, collusion or any like reason would operate as res judicata against the reversioners. Act V of 1862)—Mortgage of unrecognised share of a bhag—Mortgage void—Unlawful consideration—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 24—Indian Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 62.* One K mortgaged with possession an unrecognised share of a bhag with R on May 10, 1896, contrary to the provisions of the Bhagdari Act, 1862. The mortgage deed provided that after possession by the mortgagee for eleven years the mortgage amount was to be paid to him whenever he should demand it either out of the property or by the mortgagor or his heirs personally. In 1908 B obtained a money decree against the estate of R whose mortgage right was put up to sale and purchased by the plaintiff at a Court sale for Rs. 577. In 1910, the plaintiff filed a suit No. 176 of 1910 against the representatives of R and K to obtain possession. No claim was made in that suit for payment of the amount of the mortgage-debt. The suit failed on the ground that the mortgage was invalid and therefore unenforceable. In 1911, another suit was filed by the plaintiff against the same parties to recover Rs. 788 from the estate of K and in the alternative to recover Rs. 577 from the estate of B. The defendants Nos. 1 to 3 contended that the suit was barred by res judicata and also, pleaded limitation. Held, that the subsequent suit for the mortgage-debt was not barred by res judicata, as the prior claim of 1910 for possession was not really a claim on the mortgage but a claim by virtue of the purchase by the plaintiff of the mortgagee's rights. Held, further, that the consideration for the mortgage being unlawful under s. 24 of the Contract Act, 1872, it failed ab initio and the claim for repayment of the money advanced to the mortgagor as money had and received being brought more than three years after the date of the mortgage deed was barred by reason of Art. 62 of Limitation Act, 1908. Jaterbhai Jorabhai v. *Gordhan Narsi I. In 1883, during the minority of Devare, his mother sold it to the Bhojes from whom one Bavachi received it in exchange for another parcel of land. In 1891, by a simple mortgage Bavachi mortgaged the property to the plaintiff. In 1898, a suit was brought by Davare against his mother Bavachi and the Bhojes in order to set aside the sale by his mother to the Bhojes. That suit was successful and the result was that the sale to Bhojes was set aside. In 1901, the plaintiff obtained a decree on his mortgage against Bavachi. The property was put to sale and was purchased by the plaintiff with permission. But when the plaintiff endeavoured to get possession he was resisted by Davare. The plaintiff, therefore, brought a suit in 1909 against Devare, Bavachi and the Bhojes to recover possession. The defendant Devare contended that the plaintiff's suit was barred by res judicata

28. ———— Applicability of the principle as against co-defendants. A deposit of money in a firm was owned in equal moieties by D and L. In a suit brought by D in the High Court of Bombay to recover his moiety of the deposit, his brother L who was a partner in the firm admitted his claim; but it was contested by the other partners, defendants Nos. 1 and 2. Defendants Nos. 3 to 6 contended that they were not partners in the firm at all. The Court passed a decree against L and defendants Nos. 1 and 2. The firm made losses and ceased to work. L, thereupon, filed the present suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Surat for a Dissolution of the firm and for taking its accounts. D was made a party to the suit as a creditor of the firm. The defendants Nos. 3 to 6 again contended that they were not partners in the firm. A question having arisen whether the contention was res judicata in the present suit: Held, that the relief given to D in the earlier suit did not require or involve a decision of any case between the co-defendants, and, therefore, the co-defendants were not to be bound as between each other by the Court's proceeding and decision which were necessary only to the decree which D obtained. Per BATCHELOR J. "The Court is slow to enforce the principle of res judicata as against co-defendants, and the limits of the operation of the principle in such cases seem to me to be narrowly laid down." In 1910, the plaintiff, the new manager, sued the defendants in ejectment praying that the mulgeni lease was not binding on him and that the defendants being annual tenants should be evicted. The Court held in favour of the plaintiff on the first ground, but for want of notice held that he was not entitled at that stage to evict the defendants. Then after due notice given, the plaintiff again sued to eject the defendants. They again pleaded the mulgeni lease. The Court held that that defence was not open to them, as it was barred by res judicata. On appeal, held, that the defence was barred by res judicata; for the decision of the Court in the earlier suit in favour of the plaintiff upon the first part of his prayer found a place in the decretal order and was as much decreed as the other part of the prayer which in the second part of that decretal order was rejected. In a suit brought by a mortgagee to enforce his mortgage, a person claiming a title paramount to the mortgagor and the mortgagee is not a necessary party, and the question of the paramount title cannot be litigated in such a suit. Joti Prasad v. Aziz Khan, I. L. R. 31 All. 11, and Jaggeshar Dutt v. Bhuban Mohon Mitro, I. L. R. 33 Calc. 425, referred to. Two suits for sale on separate mortgages of the same property were filed, and in each the mortgagees impleaded a third party as a subsequent mortgagee of a portion of the property in suit. The party so impleaded was in reality the owner of a considerable portion of the property comprised in the mortgages sued upon, though he was not impleaded in that capacity. In the first suit the puisne mortgagee did not appear. In the second he attempted to set up his paramount title, but was not allowed to do so. The mortgagors likewise attempted to set up the paramount title of the person impleaded as puisne mortgagee, and in their case also the defence was ruled out. In the result, decrees were passed in favour of the plaintiff. The puisne mortgagee then brought a suit for a declaration of his title to part of the mortgaged property. Held, that the suit was not barred by anything which had happened in the course of the previous litigation. Girija Kanta Chakrabutty v. Mohim Chndra Acharjya, 35 Indian Cases 294, referred to. ——— Foreign judgment, suit on—Judgment obtained by plaintiff after defence had been struck out and "defendant placed in the same position as if he had not defended"—Judgment not on "the merits of the case." The plaintiff (appellant) sued the defendant (respondent) in the Court of King's Bench in London for a sum of money he alleged to be due to him in respect of transactions he had with the defendant as a member of a firm in Madras who under arrangements between them consigned goods to the plaintiff for sale in London. The defendant denied that he was ever a member of the firm in Madras, and also denied that there was any money due by him to the plaintiff or that the arrangements had been made under which the plaintiff asserted that his claim arose. The defendant refused to answer interrogatories which the plaintiff was allowed to exhibit calling on the defendant to speak as to some of the material matters in dispute, and the defence was thereupon ordered to be struck out, "and the defendant to be placed in the same position as if he had not defended," and judgment was entered for the plaintiff. In a suit brought in the High Court at Madras on that judgment: Held (upholding the decision of the appellate High Court), that it had not been given between the parties "on the merits of the case" within the meaning of s. 13 (b) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. The writ of summons was accepted by a solicitor, who entered an appearance on behalf of the defendant, and the case was set down for hearing before a Judge of the Court of King's Bench and a special jury. Meanwhile the defendant was suddenly and unexpectedly recalled to India; but the case proceeded and resulted in a judgment for the plaintiff. Held, on suit by the plaintiff in India based on this judgment, that the judgment of the Court of King's Bench could not be said not to have been given on the merits of the case within the meaning of s. 13 (b) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. Keymer v. *Visvanatham Reddi, I. The suit was heard by that Judge for some days and then the defendant filed an application in the Court of the District Judge for transfer of the suit to another Court. The District Judge transferred the application to the Assistant Judge for disposal. The Assistant Judge heard the application and ordered that the suit be transferred to the District Court for trial. The plaintiff having objected that the order of the Assistant Judge was without jurisdiction: Held, setting aside the order, that under the provisions of the Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), Part V, the limit of the Assistant Judge's jurisdiction for the purpose of hearing suits is Rs. 10,000, and that in case of suits and applications when the value of the subject matter does not exceed Rs. 5,000, an appeal in appealable cases lies to the District Judge. The Assistant Judge is, therefore, not a Judge of co-ordinate jurisdiction to the District Judge. He is, therefore, not a Judge of the District Court and the order complained of was not made by the District Court which alone had jurisdiction. S. 24 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) empowers the District Court to withdraw any suit and try and dispose of it. The suit withdrawn being for a sum exceeding the jurisdiction of the Assistant Judge he could not try and dispose of it. He was, therefore, not a Judge of the District Court as contemplated by the section which must be a

A Court invested with the powers of a Court of Small Causes is a Court of Small Causes within the meaning of s. 24 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act V of 1908), though the suit was not transferred to such Court immediately from a Court of Small Causes. In such a case no formal order of transfer of a particular case or of all pending cases is necessary. On principle, unless the authority which changes the venue reserves the right to the Court which has lost the jurisdiction to continue pending proceedings affecting the property so transferred to another jurisdiction, such proceedings are also ipso facto transferred by the change of venue to the new Court, the records relating to that action becoming part of the records of the new Court. Section 150, Civil Procedure Code, implies that the whole business of a Court might be transferred to another Court, without any order of transfer by a superior Court under s. 24, or any other section of Code, thereby adopting the Calcutta view, that by changes of venue made by the local Government, the business of a Court which loses jurisdiction over a certain area, so far as such area is concerned, will be ipso facto transferred to the new Court. the legal representative of the decree-holder (mortgagee auction-purchaser) brought a suit to recover possession of the property so purchased. The defendants (representatives of the mortgagors judgment-debtors) contended that the question involved in the suit related to the execution of the decree; therefore, the suit was not maintainable under s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) and that the plaintiff's remedy lay under O. XXI, r. 5. The first Court allowed the claim. On appeal by one of the defendants: Held, reversing the decree, that (i) The suit was barred by s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). (ii) A decree-holder by becoming a purchaser at a court-sale did not cease to be a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. (iii) Proceedings for delivery of possession of property purchased by the decree-holder were proceedings in execution of the decree and fell within the scope of s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. (iv) Art. 138 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) did not override the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. They should be read together. Where the auction-purchaser was also a party to the suit in which the decree was passed, his claim for the delivery of possession of the property purchased must be determined by the Court in the execution department. But where the auction-purchaser was a third party, it was open to him to bring a suit for possession of the property purchased by him and such a suit would be governed by twelve years' limitation under Art. 138 of the Limitation Act. (v) Under s. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) the execution proceedings did not terminate with the sale. The execution of the decree being barred at the date of the suit, it was not allowed to be treated as a proceeding in execution. SADASHIV BIN MAHADU v. NARAYAN VITHAL (1911) . . I. L. On application by the decree-holders for execution as to the sum allotted to them, the judgment-debtor took objection that the decree-holders had as a matter of fact realized a large amount out of the debts which had been assigned by the decree to him. Held, that the question thus raised was not a matter falling within the purview of s. 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that the judgment-debtor's remedy was by a separate suit to recover from the decree-holders the amount alleged to have been illegally realized. 9. ——— Decree irreconcilable, directions in—Decree impossible of execution—Claim on behalf of Deity—Appeal. The appellant obtained a decree on a mortgage executed by one G and had certain properties attached. Thereafter one Y brought a suit for declaration that the property was wakf and could not therefore be attached and sold and obtained a decree. On appeal to the High Court against this decree, G and one N were substituted as the heirs of Y who had died in the meantime, and the appeal was ultimately dismissed as against G and decreed on a compromise as between the appellant and N, "allowing the appellant to recover the money due to him by sale of 4 annas share of the properties." On an application for execution of this decree of the High Court without making G a party to the execution, G appeared and objected that he was the sole mutwalli of the property which was wakf and could not be sold in execution of the decree. The lower Appellate Court refused execution, holding that a suit for declaration could not legally terminate in a mortgage-decree and that the decree which could be executed was the original mortgage-decree, but not the compromise decree. Held, that as G was a party to the suit in his personal capacity as also as mutwalli his objection came within s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and an appeal lay from the order refusing to execute the decree. Kartik Chandra Ghose v. Ashutosh Dhara, I. L. R. 39 Calc. 298; 16 C. W. N. 26, distinguished. That the ground upon which the application for execution was refused was erroneous; the decree of the High Court in the present case was, however, incapable of execution inasmuch as the decree in so far as it dismissed the appeal as against G as a part representative of the former mutwalli was a final decision, that the property was wakf and inalienable, and a direction in the same decree that a portion of the property could be sold was irreconcilable with the rest of the decision and made it impossible to carry the whole decree into effect. S died subsequent to the passing of the decrees, which were transferred to the District Munsif's Court of Rajam for execution. The first defendant filed an application in the latter Court for bringing on the record the plaintiff and the second defendant as the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor and for execution of the decrees. The Court passed an order as prayed for. The plaintiff (the junior widow of S) was a minor at the time of [illegible]

[illegible] defendant (the decree-holder) and the third defendant (the auction-purchaser) knew at the time that she was a minor. The second defendant (the co-widow) had then ceased to have any interest in her husband's estate. The decree-holder applied for sale in Original Suit No 555 of 1903 of properties which were attached in both the aforesaid decrees. The third defendant, who bid for the properties for Rs. 601, caused the sale to be stopped in Original Suit No. 555 of 1903; the first defendant in collusion with the third defendant brought them to sale in Original Suit No. 559 of 1903, the reserve price was reduced to Rs. 200 and the third defendant purchased the property for Rs. 301; the executing Court was not informed of the sale in Original Suit No. 555 of 1903 and of the third defendant's bid for Rs. 601 therein. The sale was held on 19th October 1906 and was confirmed on 23rd January 1907. The plaintiff (who attained majority in July 1907) filed an application on the 16th March 1909 in Original Suit No 559 of 1903 under s. 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure for setting aside the sale and for a declaration that the sale was invalid and for other reliefs. The petition was converted into a suit under the provisions of s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code. The defendants contended that the sale was valid, that in any event the sale had to be set aside, and that both the applications under s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and the suit were barred by limitation under arts. 162 and 12 of the Limitation Act respectively. Held, that the plaintiff who had no guardian ad litem appointed for her in the execution proceedings was not a party to the suit in which the sale was made, and was entitled to bring a suit for a declaration that the sale was not binding without regard to the provisions of s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code That the plaintiff not having been a party to the suit and not having been sufficiently represented by any one who was a party, the sale was not binding on the plaintiff and did not require to be set aside. That the suit which was instituted within three years of the plaintiff's attainment of majority was not barred by limitation. Per SADASIVA AYYAR, J When a judgment-debtor has to set aside a sale of his property for fraud of the decree holder or of both himself and the auction purchaser, he can only apply under Order XXI, rule 90 of the Civil Procedure Code, subject to the limitation prescribed in art. 166 of the Limitation Act; but he may be entitled to bring a suit for other appropriate reliefs on the ground of fraud against the decree holder and the auction purchaser, such as for damages or for injunction, subject to the limitation prescribed in art 95 of the Limitation Act. In 1914, the plaintiff brought another suit to recover possession of the other survey numbers which were covered by the certificate of sale and which were in the possession of defendant No. 1 as tenant of defendants Nos. 2 and 3 : Held, that the plaintiff, though a benamidar, could sue in his own name to recover possession of the property vested in him as a benamidar; and that the mortgagee decree-holder was not a necessary party to the suit. Gur Narayan v. *Sheo Lal Singh (1916) L. On the date fixed for the sale of the attached property, that is, on the 22nd September, 1909, the decrees of the two attaching judgment-creditors were satisfied by payment of the decretal amounts in Court and the effect was the withdrawal of the attachment under O. XXI, r. 55 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). On the next day after the payment into Court, an ex parte application was made to the Court and, according to the prayer in the application, the Court ordered rateable distribution of the money paid into Court and further sale of the properties which had been attached towards further satisfaction of the claim of the judgment-creditors. Held, reversing the order, that by virtue of the payment of the 22nd September 1909 the attachment of the property came to an end, and there being no attachment, there could be no order for further sale of the properties. The monies which were paid in to satisfy the attaching creditor's decrees and to raise the attachment could not be treated as assets by the Court and as such distributable among other judgment-creditors who had merely applied for execution. Vibudhapriya Tirthaswami v. Yusuf Sahib, I. L. R. 28 Mad. 380, referred to. Money paid into Court for a particular purpose, as for example, under O. XXI, r. 55 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), could not be treated as assets distributable under s. 73 of the Code. The "assets" referred to in the section were assets held in the process of execution. The question involved in the appeal was a question in execution between the parties to decrees. Therefore it fell under the provisions of s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) and the order passed by the lower Court was appealable. A bid lapses on the making of a subsequent higher bid or on the expiry of a reasonable time after the making of the bid without acceptance by the Court. Where a Court adjourned an auction sale after certain bids had been made but the highest bidder died before the adjourned date, and the Court took up the preceding bid and accepting it called upon such bidder to pay the price, and on his refusal proceeded to put up the property to resale, holding the bidder to be a defaulter liable for any deficiency that might be caused by the resale, and the latter preferred a Civil Revision Petition as well as a Miscellaneous Appeal to the High Court against the order directing the resale. Held, that the lower Court acted illegally and with material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction in accepting the preceding bid and making the order for resale, and that the High Court was competent to interfere in revision, but that no appeal lay against the order. Subsequently the ex parte decree was set aside, the suit was restored to file, and it was transferred to the Haveli Court for hearing. The defendant next applied to the Poona Court for restoration of the property to him; but the application was dismissed on the ground that it should be made to the Haveli Court. On appeal:—Held, that the defendant, who applied for restitution, was entitled to have the property restored to him when the decree under which the plaintiff got possession of it had been set aside; and that the Poona Court, which originally passed the decree had jurisdiction to entertain the application. The ex parte decree was subsequently set aside; but at the re-trial, a decree was again passed in plaintiff's favour in 1914. In the meanwhile, the defendant applied to have the sale of the house set aside: Held, that the order setting aside the sale could be passed either under s. 47 or ss. 144 or 151 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. Held, also, that the application was not governed by Art. 166, but that it was within time under the provisions of Art. 181 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, the cause of action having accrued upon setting aside the ex parte decree in 1914. Held, further, that the previous sale of the house in execution under the previous decree which had been set aside should itself be set aside as being no longer based on any solid foundation; but subject in all the circumstances to the condition that the defendant should pay up the amount due from her under the second decree within a specified time. In 1903, M sold her interest in the property to defendant No. 1. Defendant No. 2 was a purchaser from defendant No 1. In 1912 plaintiff sued to recover possession of the property or in the alternative to redeem subsequent mortgages executed by M. The defendants denied the claim alleging in their written statement that the Court-sale under the decree of 1899 was fraudulently obtained as the decree was satisfied prior to the sale. The plaintiff contended in reply that the question of fraud could not be investigated upon the vague plea of fraud in the written statement in a redemption suit and that the plea of satisfaction of the mortgage decree prior to the Court-sale could not be entertained, since the adjustment had not been certified in view of the provisions of O. XXI, r. 2; Held, (i) that under the provisions of s. 47 of the Civil Procedure Code a question relating to the satisfaction of a decree was a question arising in execution which must be tried by the executing Court under that section or at the discretion of that Court by suit, in either of which cases the Court would be a Court precluded from recognising the adjustment; (ii) that it was undesirable that the defendant should by a vague plea of fraud be permitted after the lapse of many years to call in question a title acquired at a Court-sale which was never challenged by the judgment-debtor though she was alive at the time of the trial of the suit; (iii) that the mortgages of 1899 and 1900 effected during the prosecution of the proceedings in the suit of 1899 were ineffectutal as against the plaintiff. The fact that it was open to the judgment-debtors to avail themselves of the provision of sub-r. 1 of r. 40 of O. XXI did not alter the nature of the order. The defendants made default in the payment of the cash allowance in 1893 with the result that the plaintiffs brought the mortgaged property to sale under an order of the Court in execution. A part of the land was sold, but as the proceeds of the sale were not sufficient to satisfy the full amount of the debt, he was about to bring to sale the rest of the mortgaged property in 1908 when the Collector intervened and had the impending sale stopped on the ground that it was watan property On the 19th December 1910, the plaintiffs filed the present darkhast to recover the balance by enforcing the personal remedy against

K. K. & Co. filed a suit and obtained a decree for a sum of money against Major D., an officer in the Indian Army. They ubsequently attached a moiety of that officer's pay under Order XXI, rule 48, of the Civil Procedure Code, and in pursuance of such attachment the Dep uty Controller of Military Accounts remitted such moiety to the Sheriff of Bombay who had paid out a portion of the moneys received by him under Messrs. K. K. & Co.'s attachment and had in his hands a further sum which in the ordinary course would have been paid out likewise, when Major D. took out a summons calling on the plaintiffs to show cause why their attachment should not be raised and the sums recovered thereunder refunded. Held, that Major D., under s. 190, sub-sec. 8, of the Army Act, 1881, was an officer of His Majesty's Regular Forces, and under s. 136 of the Army Act, 1881, and s. 60 of the Code of Civil Procedure he was entitled to receive his pay without any deduction and that the attachment must be raised and that the Sheriff must pay to Major D. the sum received by him under attachment and not yet paid away. Velchand v. *Bourchier, I. The Court cannot dismiss an application for rateable distribution merely on the ground that no leave had been obtained to proceed against a Receiver, who was one of the judgment-debtors, when such leave had in fact been obtained before the Court was called upon to make rateable distribution. Banku Behari v. Harendra Nath, 15 C. W. N. 54, applied. When the Court below has refused to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law, it is immaterial that such refusal is based upon a misapprehension of the true effect of the statutory provision on the subject, and the High Court will interfere in such a case in revision. Amir Hassan, v. *Sheo Baksh, L. 3. ——— Application for rateable distribution—Objection that decree obtained by applicant for rateable distribution was fraudulent —Jurisdiction of Court to hold summary inquiry—Evidence Act (1 of 1872), s. 165—Examination of judgment-debtor without notice to parties after the close of case and before delivery of judgment. The petitioner obtained a decree for money against one H and his brothers. Previous to the petitioner's decree the opposite party had obtained a decree against the same judgment-debtors. In the execution proceedings commenced by the petitioner, there was an application for rateable distribution by the opposite party and in the proceedings for execution commenced by the opposite party, there was an application for rateable distribution by the petitioner. The opposite party, however, objected to the application for rateable distribution by the petitioner, on the allegation that the decree obtained by the latter was fraudulent. The Subordinate Judge held a summary enquiry into the matter and allowed the opposite party's objection. It appeared that in the enquiry, after evidence on both sides was adduced and arguments addressed to the Court, judgment was reserved. Thereafter the Court examined the judgment-debtor H without notice to the pleaders for the parties and relied on his statements in passing the final order : Held, that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to hold a summary enquiry into the matter, but the examination of H should not have taken place without notice to the parties or their pleaders and without any opportunity afforded to them to cross-examine him or to rebut his statements. S. 165 of the Evidence Act does not justify the procedure adopted by the Judge. Peary Lal Das v. Peary Lal Dawn (1913)

4. ——— Surplus sale-proceeds, distribution amongst attaching creditors—Money standing to the credit of one suit, application for transfer to another suit, if to be made in former—Practice—Certificates of Accountant-General and Registrar, Original Side, required with application. Where money in Court stands to the credit of one suit and the plaintiff in another suit has, by reason of being an attaching creditor or mortgagee or otherwise, an interest in such money and desires the fund to be transferred to the credit of his suit in order to be dealt with therein, he should in all cases make the application in the suit to whose credit the money stands for the transfer. The suit was ultimately decreed and the decree-holder applied for execution, whereupon the sureties deposited the decretal amount in Court. On that very day just before the deposit was made, the petitioner who also held a money-decree against the same judgment-debtor, applied for execution of his decree and prayed for rateable distribution of the amount deposited. The application was refused by the Trial Court and the money paid out to the attaching creditor on the latter giving an undertaking to refund the amount in case the High Court reversed the order rejecting the Petitioner's application for rateable distribution: Held,—That the amount deposited was [illegible] Civ [illegible] of [illegible] an [illegible] the disposal of the Court for the purpose of satisfying a decree. The plaintiff firm brought the present suit in the Civil Court at Delhi in April 1915, while Great Britain was at war with Turkey. It was objected that they could not maintain suit in the Courts of British India, the partners in Mecca being alien enemies. Held, that a person who voluntarily resides in a hostile country for a substantital period of time acquires the disability attaching to an enemy during that period even if he is a British subject, unless such residence is with the consent of the Crown, and that consequently the 5 partners residing and carrying on business at Mecca must be treated as alien enemies. McConnell v. *Hector (6 R. The procedure to be followed in such cases is that laid down in Order XXIII, rule 3, and not that laid down in the Second Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code. The defendant in his written statement pleaded inter alia that the goods supplied by the plaintiff were not of the quality agreed upon by the parties. On the 21st of August, 1915, the parties without the intervention of the Court agreed to refer the matters in dispute between them concerning the contract referred to in the plaint in respect of which the suit had been filed in High Court, to the arbitration of M. D. and R. M. The arbitrators made their award on the 28th of October, 1915 whereby they awarded to the plaintiff a sum of Rs. 4,001-4-0 with interest at 6 per cent. till the date of payment. The award was filed by the arbitrators on the 10th of December 1915. On the 10th of January, 1916 the plaintiff took out a notice of motion, for an order that the adjustment of the suit arrived at between the plaintiff and the defendant as stated in the plaintiff's affidavit should be recorded under Order XXIII, rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code, and a decree in accordance therewith should be passed. The defendant disputed the legality of the award on two grounds, first, that the arbitrators exceeded their jurisdiction and decided something which was not within their power to decide and secondly, that they refused an opportunity to the defendant to call witnesses, or that after they had given him to understand they would adjourn the matter to enable him to call evidence they published the award without giving him any such opportunity. Held, (i) that the plaintiff had adopted a wrong procedure in applying for a decree on an award under Order XXIII, rule 3, (ii) That the defendant was entitled to be heard on the objections raised by him under paragraph 21 of the Second Schedule of the Civil Procedure Code. Pragdas v. *Girdhardas, I. S. 92, Civil Procedure Code, and s. 14 of Act XX of 1863, so far as the forms of relief to which they relate are the same, offer a choice to persons interested in the trust, who may proceed under either; they are not bound to proceed under both. The consent of the Collector given in November 1908, i.e., before the Civil Procedure Code came into force, is a valid consent for the institution of a suit for the removal of a trustee though at the time the consent was given a suit for removal could not be instituted under the law then in force. On appeal, held, that the question whether the agreement of compromise was a lawful one depended on the further question whether the endowment in suit was a public endowment or not, and until that question was decided, it could not be said to be proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the suit had been adjusted by lawful agreement. Gyananda v. *Kristo Chandra, 8 C. Before the institution of the suit one of the plaintiffs applied to the Collector of the District for permission to file the suit under s. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908. The Collector replied as follows:—"The Collector doubts whether s. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code applies to this case, but if the Court holds that it does, the Collector hereby declares his consent to the filing of a suit to claim any of the reliefs specified in s. 92 which the Court may deem fit to grant." The trying Court was of opinion that the above certificate was defective in form and therefore dismissed the suit. The plaintiffs having appealed. Held, dismissing the appeal, that the Collector had not acted in the manner provided by s. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908. He had not indicated on the proceedings that the suit was filed with his consent and that he had not even come to a conclusion that the suit was one which should have been filed. The Collector acting under s. 93 of the Civil Procedure Code had no right to consent to the institution of a suit by two persons claiming to have an interest in the trust unless it was such a suit as he would consider himself to be justified in filling at the relation of such two persons in his own name. C, no cause of action arises save in a case of alleged breach of a trust for a public purpose or where the directions of the Court are deemed necessary for the administration of such trust Where the plaintiffs after obtaining sanction from the Advocate-General instituted a suit against the defendant for his removal from the management of a trust which was alleged by the plaintiffs to be a public trust and the defence was that the trust was not a public trust and that there was no misfeasance, and the District Judge found that the trust was indeed a public trust but that the defendant had not been guilty of misfeasance and so dismissed the suit for want of cause of action with costs to be paid out of the trust estate to the plaintiffs because the defence was that the trust was not a public trust: Held, that when the Judge had come to the decision that there was no cause of action for the suit he could not record a decision binding on the parties that the trust was a public trust and he could not make an order for the payment of costs from the estate as a public trust. Held, further, that the order for costs out of the estate was without jurisdiction within the meaning of s 115, C P. Rs 70,000 was bequeathed to purely charitable and religious purposes. The Subordinate Judge held that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit as it fell within the purview of s 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. The joint Judge, in appeal, was of opinion that the suit as framed by the plaintiff was to obtain the assistance of the Court for the purpose of securing co-operation with the defendant in the due administration of the estate according to the provisions and direction in the will and in so far as it sought this relief it did not come under s. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908 He, therefore, reversed the decree and remanded the case The defendant having appealed: Held, affirming the order of remand made by the Joint Judge, that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the suit, for there was nothing in the plaint to suggest that the suit was framed in relation to any charitable or religious trusts and the plaint contained no prayer for relief of any of the kinds specified in s. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. Per CURIAM: If any questions relating to charitable bequests should arise in the present case before the Subordinate Judge, his proper course would be to give notice to the Advocate-General in order that that officer might decide whether any action should be taken under s. 92 of the Civil Procedure Code in order to get any of the specific reliefs referred to in that section. It would be quite possible for the Subordinate Judge to continue the administration of the estate up to the point of separating the funds appropriated for particular charities as to which schemes would have to be framed, and holding those funds in the possession of a Receiver until the Advocate General or the Collector had obtained the directions of the Court, if such were necessary with reference to the disposal of those funds under some suitable scheme. 1. ——— Preliminary decree—Appeal—Status of agriculturists—The question if not appealed from as preliminary decree cannot be agitated in appeal on merits—Party's duty to ask Court to draw up decree—Practice and procedure. The plaintiff brought a suit to redeem mortgage according to the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879. A preliminary issue was raised whether the plaintiffs were agriculturists and decided against the plaintiffs. The Court ordered the plaintiffs to pay the requisite court-fee within a week's time, which not having been done, the suit was dismissed. In the appeal which the plaintiffs preferred against the final decree they sought to question the finding on the preliminary issue: Held, that the preliminary decree having become extinct by reason of the final decree, and the plaintiffs not having exercised their right of presenting an appeal from that decree, it was not open to them in the present appeal to challenge finding on the preliminary issue. Held, further that though the statutory obligation lay on the Court to draw up a preliminary decree to entitle the plaintiffs to appeal, yet it was equally the duty of the plaintiffs to ask the Court to draw up that decree in order to enable them to present an appeal against it. the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879) and a redemption decree was passed. On appeal from the final decree, the question as to the status of the plaintiff was raised; and the Court of Appeal decided that the plaintiff was not an agriculturist; and varied the decree by increasing the amount of redemption. On second appeal, it was contended that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in going into the preliminary point at the stage it did: Held, that no appeal was necessary against the preliminary finding; and that unless there was a preliminary decree no appeal could lie under the provisions of s. 97 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). Bai Divali v. *Shah Vishnav Manordas, I. No preliminary decree was drawn up by the Court and none was asked for by the plaintiff's pleader. The accounts were next taken by a commissioner and a decree was passed in accordance with his report, dismissing the suit. The plaintiff appealed against the final decree and urged objections against finding on preliminary issues. Held, that the plaintiff was not barred of his right to urge objections against the findings on preliminary issues, for under the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 97, his right to appeal arose only when there was a decree based on those findings. That the practice in the mofussil Courts was in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and Civil Circulars, cl. 159, viz., that the Court was to draw up the decree, and that the pleaders, if any, in the case were to see that it was in accordance with the judgment. There is no provision requiring a party or his pleader to move the Court to draw up a decree, and mere omission to ask the Court to do that which it is the duty of the Court to do on its own motion cannot affect his right to appeal. 6. ———— Partnership accounts, suit for—Preliminary decree declaring partnership dissolved and directing inquiries and accounts—Part ordering inquiries if to be separated from decree and treated as order—Validity of order if may be questioned on appeal from final decree. In a suit to have partnership accounts taken, the Trial Judge by a formal adjudication, dated 30th June 1908, (i) declared that the partnership was dissolved as from 1st July 1907, and ordered and decreed, (ii) that inquiry be made by the referee as to who were the partners, and (iii) that the referee should take an account of the dealings of the parties with the assets of the partnership business. No appeal was preferred from this adjudication, and inquiry was made and accounts taken. The decision of the referee upon the inquiry which was adverse to the appellant was confirmed by the Judge. In an appeal against the final decree, preliminary decree, and not having been appealed against could not under s 97 of the Civil Procedure Code be questioned on the final appeal The adjudication did not cease to be a decree, because a subordinate part of it, if correctly made, might have been made separately as an order. The Code makes no provision for something which is neither a decree nor an order, nor anything which is both, neither does it provide that one adjudication by the Court can be resolved into diverse elements, some of which are decrees and some orders. ———— ss. 97 and 2—Preliminary decree—Preliminary issue, whether a party is an agriculturist—Finding on the issue not an adjudication which can be embodied in a decree—Practice—Procedure. A finding on a preliminary issue whether a party is an agriculturist is not by itself an adjudication which can be embodied in a preliminary decree within the meaning of s. 97 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1908. Per MACLEOD, C. J.—It is only when the finding on an issue is sufficient for the decision of a suit or a part of the suit that the Court may pronounce judgment. When the finding is not sufficient for the decision the suit must be postponed for further hearing. Accordingly the stage of the case at which judgment is pronounced will determine whether the decree is preliminary or final. Per FAWCETT J.—It is an abuse of the procedure intended by the Code for a Court to draw up a preliminary decree directing accounts to be taken under s. 13 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, before it had even decided whether the mortgage sued upon was proved. *Municipal Committee of Nasik City v. The first Court held that the suit was bad for misjoinder of parties and returned the plaint to the plaintiffs for amendment. The plaint was accordingly amended by striking out the mortgages and the suit was thereafter dismissed, it being found that necessity had been proved for the bulk of the sale price. On appeal the District Judge held that the suit was not bad for misjoinder of parties and remanded the case for a fresh decision after impleading the previous mortgagees. (IX of 1899), s. 10. In a suit filed for partition of joint family property, the parties agreed to refer the matter to arbitration, and a consent order of reference was taken. A similar agreement referred to the same arbitrators questions as to the partition of such immoveable property as was outside the jurisdiction of the Court in the suit. The arbitrators disagreed on certain points, but, instead of referring their differences (as the agreement of reference authorised them to do) to an umpire, they submitted their own opinions in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Court. In doing so they purported to act under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. II, r. 11, and of the Indian Arbitration Act (IX of 1899), s. 10 (b). The matter was decided by the Chamber Judge and an appeal was preferred against the decision. Held, that no appeal lay. Inasmuch as the special case was in no sense an award, it did not come within the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. The first court dismissed the whole claim as it considered that the plaintiff should have sued for possession. On appeal the Lower Appellate Court agreed with the first Court that an injunction could not legally be granted but accepted plaintiff's appeal regarding his right to sue for rent and remanded the case under O. XLI, r. 23 of the Code for a decision as to the amount due. Against this decision the plaintiff preferred an appeal to the High Court under O. XLIII, r. 1 (u). 1. ———— "Final order,"— "passed in appeal," order refusing application to sue in forma pauperis, if—Letters Patent, s. 39. An order passed by the High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction under s. 115, Civil Procedure Code, or its power of superintendence under s. 15 of the Charter Act is an order made or passed on appeal within the meaning of s. 109, Civil Procedure Code, or s. 39 of the Letters Patent. The term "final order" in s. 109 denotes an order which finally decides any matter which is directly at issue in the case in respect of the rights of the parties. If the order in effect finally decides the cardinal point in the suit, if it decides an issue which goes to the foundation of the suit and therefore is an order which could never, while the decision stood, be questioned again in the suit, it is final within the

The question has to be decided with reference to the precise relation in which the order stands to the proceeding before the Court. Whenever an application to sue in forma pauperis is refused, the decision is not necessarily a final order within s. 109, Civil Procedure Code. The order is "final" when leave is refused on the ground that the allegations of the petitioner in the plaint does not disclose a cause of action against the defendant. Defendant objected that he being in possession of the property a suit for declaration was not maintainable. The trial Court decided that this objection must prevail and dismissed the suit. On appeal to the Chief Court it was decided that as plaintiff was in possession of part of the property and was a co-sharer with one N in the portions of the property in N's possession, the suit as framed was competent. The case was accordingly remanded to the trial Court for decision on the merits. The defendant then applied for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council against this order of remand. Held, that an order of remand is not ordinarily capable of being the subject of an appeal to His Majesty in Council and as the order in the present case decided nothing which could be regarded as a cardinal point in the suit it was not a final order within the meaning of cl. 4. ——— Privy Council—Leave to appeal—Suit for declaration and injunction tried by the Second Class Subordinate Judge—Value of the subject-matter can be shown by evidence for the purposes of the leave A suit for declaration and injunction, in which the claim was valued at Rs. 135, was tried by a Subordinate Judge of the Second Class. The decree was confirmed by the District Judge, but reversed by the High Court on second appeal. The plaintiff having applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, the defendant contended that as the plaintiff himself had elected to value his suit at only Rs. 135 and conducted it in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, the limit of whose pecuniary jurisdiction was Rs. 5,000, he could not contend that the subject-matter of the suit was worth Rs. 10,000 Held, overruling the contention, that the suit being one for declaration and injunction, the plaintiff by suing in the Second Class Subordinate Judge's Court seemed to have made neither directly nor indirectly any sort of representation to the defendant as to the real or market value of the property to be affected, as distinguished from the fiscal value which, as the law allowed him to do, he placed upon the relief which he was seeking. Hirjibhai v. *Jamshedji, 15 Bom. 8. ——— Appeal to His Majesty in Council—valuation—Mesne profits. In calculating the value of a decree for the purposes of s. 110 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, it is not the gross income of the property in dispute but the net income after deducting Government revenue and other outgoings, which should be taken into consideration. The Patna High Court, following the practice of the Calcutta High Court, will permit an applicant for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council to add to the actual value of the property in suit the amount of mesne profits accrued up to the date of the Appellate Court's decree. 8 (a). ——— Petitioner if has to show that any substantial question of law is involved, where though the High Court's decree purported to dismiss the appeal, it yet substantially overruled the decision of the lower Court. In a certain suit the lower Court held amongst other things that in view of the frame of the suit it was not open to it to direct a conveyance to the plaintiffs of the mortgaged properties. On appeal, the High Court dismissed the plaintiffs' appeal with costs and affirmed the decree of the lower Court with one variation, namely—"that the decree as also the mortgaged properties will be included in the conveyance to the plaintiffs." Held—That though the decree of the High Court purported to dismiss the appeal with costs, it was impossible to hold that it affirmed the decision of the Court below. to His Majesty in Council from an order refusing to set aside the sale. Held, that the value of the subject-matter in dispute was Rs. 4,000 and not the value of the whole property sold, and hence the appeal fell short of the requirements of s. 110 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. In order to determine the value of the subject-matter of an appeal under s. 110 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, the decree has to be looked at as it affects the interests of the party prejudiced by it, and if the detriment of the party seeking relief is less than Rs. 10,000 then the value of the matter in dispute in appeal is not of the prescribed value and the decree itself does not involve any claim of question to, or respecting property of, that value and the case does not fulfil the requirements of the Code. The District Judge subsequently reviewed his judgment in appeal in plaintiff's suit for rent, relying on the judgments in the suits of the principal defendants and S and in the s. 149 case Held, that none of the judgments was admissible for the purpose of the review and the order made thereon must be vacated. The District Judge had no jurisdiction to review his original judgment in the light of a judgment turning on facts, subsequently delivered in another Court, in a suit which was not inter partes. That the judgment in the suit of S which was not in existence at the time when the case was tried in the Primary and Appellate Courts was not "new evidence" in the sense in which the expression is generally used, nor was the judgment in the suit of the principal defendants which came into existence at the original hearing of the appeal but was not tendered on that occasion. That they merely added a debateable item to the evidence on the record and the District Judge had no power to admit them as additional evidence under O XLI, r. 27, of the Code. That the objection that the lower Appellate Court admitted in review evidence which he had no authority so to admit may be taken on an appeal from the decree as made on review. The defendant No. 1 having applied to the High Court against the order, a preliminary objection was taken that the application was not competent under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, overruling the objection, that the application was competent under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code Act (V of 1908), as the order was a "case decided in which no appeal lies" within the meaning of the section. Held, further, that the order was open to consideration under the wider provisions of s. 5 of Regulation II of 1827, continued in force by virtue of s. 9 of the High Courts Act, 1861, and saved from repeal by the operative sections of the General Repealing Act (XII of 1873). Per BATCHELOR, J. "The word 'case' which occurs in s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), is a word of wide or comprehensive import and clearly covers a far larger area than would be covered by such a word as 'suit' or 'appeal.'" "Inasmuch as s. 115 is merely an empowering section granting certain jurisdiction to the High Court, and as the use of exercise of that jurisdiction will, within the prescribed limits, be regulated by the discretion of the High Court, the section ought to receive rather a liberal than a narrow interpretation." LXI, s. 107.* Plaintiff brought a suit in a Civil Court alleging that the defendant's father had been a lessee of certain property for 7 years, that after the expiry of the lease he became manager of the property and, after his death, the defendant also became manager. He pleaded that the defendant had been dismissed from his position as manager and asked for possession of the property which comprised shares in 26 villages, a market and some collection houses. The defendant pleaded that he was a "thekadar" within the meaning of the Tenancy Act, and filed an application praying the Court to exercise its jurisdiction under s. 202 of that Act. The Court acceded to this prayer and adjourned the suit to an indefinite period till the question was decided by the Revenue Court. The plaintiff applied in revision against the order. Held (Per PIGGOT, J.), that the revision was incompetent as it was directed against an interlocutory order and a remedy by way of appeal was open to the plaintiff wherein all matters could be decided; (Per WALSH, J.) that a revision lay to the High Court. 16. ———— Award—Decree framed upon award—Appeal—Application under revisional jurisdiction—Decree set aside—Grounds—Jurisdiction. The plaintiff, as Mutawali of a Musjid at Zanzibar, brought a suit against the defendant for the recovery of certain pots and pans. Three other persons, who alleged themselves to be Mutawalis, were joined as parties apparently without any amendment of the plaint. After some progress of the suit, the presiding Judge was asked by all concerned in the Jamat (community) to arbitrate upon all matters in difference between them. The Judge framed an award on the 30th June 1904 and the award was read out in Court after notice to the parties. In the year 1909 a pleader for the plaintiff applied to have a decree framed in the terms of the award and the Judge accordingly passed a decree on the 7th April 1909. One of the defendants having appealed against the decree which was not appealable, the appeal was allowed to be converted into an application under the revisional jurisdiction s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) and the decree was set aside as being passed by the Judge without any sort of jurisdiction whatever. The grounds being: (i) There was no written reference to arbitration as required by law. (ii) The reference was made by a great number of persons who were not parties to the suit. (iii) The matters in difference submitted to arbitration were matters not in suit at all. (iv) The result of the said irregular proceedings was to expand the claim for the possession of a few cooking utensils into a suit for framing a scheme for the administration of a large religious endowment and no suit of the kind could have been properly launched without the previous sanction of the Advocate-General or such officer as is clothed with his functions. (v) The award was made on the 30th June 1904 and the application to have it filed was not made till 1909. The application was, therefore, manifestly time-barred. (vi) The plaintiff died early in the year 1905, and no application was ever made to bring his heirs or legal representatives on record. The suit had therefore abated by July of that year. L. R. 11 Calc. 6*, distinguished. Where the Subordinate Judge in his view of the value of the suit returned the plaint for presentation to the Munsif and the District Judge set aside that decision and it was contended that the High Court should not interfere as there was no prejudice. Held, that as the law requires that suits of a particular value should be brought in particular Courts, where an order was against that law, no question of prejudice arises in setting aside that order. Where a land was taken for clearing and bringing under cultivation, under an agreement that after a certain number of years the defendant would grant a mokurari mourasi lease, and a suit was subsequently brought by the lessee for a declaration of his mourasi mokurari title and for the execution of the lease. Held, that the suit was in effect one to enforce the agreement to lease. The mourasi mokurari title would only accrue after the lease was granted and the suit could therefore be valued on the footing of that title. Semble.* A Court decreeing or allowing a time barred suit or application, without considering whether it is so or not, may be said to have failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in it by law so as to bring the matter within the scope of s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that a Court cannot be said to have failed to exercise jurisdiction merely because it omitted to consider ex proprio motu the question whether a person was entitled to proceed out of time by reason of some special provision of law, e.g., s. 7 of the Limitation Act, such question not having been raised by him or on his behalf. The mere fact that in the headings to certain applications made in the case the person was described as a minor represented by a guardian was not sufficient to entitle him to the benefit of s. 7 of the Limitation Act or to throw upon the Court the duty of raising the point on his behalf. Benod Behari Bhadra v. Ram Sarup Chamar, 16 C. II—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 69, 70. The plaintiffs purchased the interest of one of the defendants in a tenancy held by them all. Some out of the entire body of landlords who claimed a half share in the superior tenancy obtained a decree for rent and in execution thereof were about to bring the property to sale when the plaintiffs deposited in Court the necessary amount in satisfaction of the decree. The plaintiffs brought an action for declaration that the defendants were liable to pay the judgment-debt and they themselves had paid the money under circumstances which entitled them in equity to recover the same from the defendants. The suit was described as one for contributions. The lower Courts dismissed the plaintiffs' claim on the ground that as the decree had been obtained by co-sharer landlords, the interest of the plaintiffs in the tenancy was not in jeopardy and the payment made by them must consequently be deemed voluntary. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court. Held, that contribution signifies payment by each of the parties interested of his share in any common liability. Consequently an action for contribution is a suit brought by one of such parties who has discharged the liability common to them all to compel the others to make good their shares. That the suit as framed could not be deemed a suit for contribution: it was really a suit by the plaintiffs for recovery of money paid by them for the benefit of the defendants. That Art. 41 of the Second Schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act does not cover the present case. The suit was clearly one of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes and as the sum claimed was less than Rs 500, the appeal was incompetent under s. 102, Civil Procedure Code, and must be dismissed. That the view taken by the lower Courts that the payment made by the plaintiffs was voluntary, as the decree for rent was obtained by co-sharer landlords who could not have executed it so as to prejudice the interest of the plaintiffs, was erroneous. The question of the precise effect of a sale in these circumstances would at any rate be a matter for controversy and the party liable to be affected would consequently be entitled to satisfy the decree to protect himself from the apprehended injury to his right; he would also be entitled if he made the payment to be reimbursed under s. 69 or s. 70 of the Indian Contract Act. Held, however, as to the application of the plaintiffs for the memorandum of appeal being treated as an application for revision, that the error committed by the lower Court being one of law and not affecting the jurisdiction of the Court, the High Court could not interfere in the exercise of its revisional powers. In a suit for rent instituted in a Revenue Court the plaintiff died; the widow of the deceased plaintiff claimed to be his legal representative to continue the suit, as against the father who claimed to be such representative as the legatee under an alleged will of the deceased plaintiff. Subsequent to the institution of the suit, the District Collector had passed an order, under s. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act, recognizing the widow as 'land-holder' in succession to the deceased plaintiff. The Revenue Court held that the widow should be held to be the legal representative to continue the suit, and dismissed the claim of the father without inquiring into the genuineness and validity of the will. The latter preferred a Civil Revision Petition to the High Court under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. The respondent raised a preliminary objection that no revision petition lay to the High Court and also contended that the point was concluded by the order of the District Collector. Held, (i) that the High Court was competent to revise the order of the Revenue Court under s. 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, which is made applicable to proceedings in Revenue Courts by s. 192 of the Madras Estates Land Act, and s. 205 of the Act does not relate to interlocutory orders in rent suits, the final decrees in which are appealable under Part A of the schedule; (ii) that the Revenue Court is bound under O. XXII, r. 5 of the Civil Procedure Code, to hold an inquiry into the claims of the several claimants and determine who was entitled to be brought on the record as legal representative in the place of the deceased plaintiff; and (iii) that the order of the District Collector recognizing the widow as 'land-holder' under s. 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act, was not only not conclusive on the point but has no bearing on it and could not be the basis of an order of the Court under O. Subsequently on appeal, the High Court reduced the amount of compensation payable to him, but made no order as to interest. He had been in possession of the property for more than three years. The respondent purchased the property from the judgment-debtor together with the right to sue the decree holder for mesne profits in respect of the period during which he was in possession. The respondent applied to the Court for and obtained such mesne profits. Held, that the Court below had no jurisdiction under s. 144, Civil Procedure Code, to entertain the application but inasmuch as the respondent obtained an order in his favour in the Court below purporting to be made under s. 144 Civil Procedure Code, and inasmuch as a determination of a question arising under s. 144, is a decree by force of the definition clause in s. 2, the respondent could not be heard to say that the appeal was incompetent. That even assuming that the Court had inherent jurisdiction to award mesne profits upon the application presented by the respondent it either had no power or it was an improper and unsound exercise of judicial discretion to award mesne profits for any period beyond three years before the application for which only mesne profits could have been obtained by suit under Art. 109 of the Limitation Act. was due to him on the decree at the time of the sale," without offering any specific bid. In subsequent proceedings by the judgment-debtor to set aside the sale, the mortgagee auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor came to a settlement to the effect that if a specific sum was paid off before a certain date, the sale would stand cancelled, but on default the sale would stand confirmed. The judgment-debtor, however, did not pay the entire sum but made part payments on two occasions and the auction-purchaser, with the sanction of the Court from time to time extended the time on the above conditions. Finally, default having been made, the sale was confirmed under s. 65, Civil Procedure Code, and the judgment-debtor was satisfied in full by the purchase of the mortgaged property The judgment-debtor subsequently made an application, in the execution proceedings, for restitution of the sums paid by him to the decree-holder purchaser. The lower Appellate Court held that the remedy of the judgment-debtor was by way of a regular suit: Held—That it is competent to the execution Court, in the exercise of its inherent power, to make an order for restitution with a view to secure complete justice between the parties concerned, even in cases not comprised within the terms of s. 144, Civil Procedure Code. ingly—Proceedings in the Small Cause Court and order for refund by that Court—Order not sustainable. The plaintiff brought a suit in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge and finally obtained a decree declaring that an attachment on certain money, already lying in deposit in that Court, levied by the defendant in execution of his Small Cause Court decree was invalid and decreeing that the defendant should repay the same to the plaintiff. In execution of the said decree in the suit of the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge, the plaintiff applied to the Small Cause for the refund of the money and that Court passed an order for the refund. The defendant, thereupon, preferred an application to the High Court under the extraordinary jurisdiction. Held, setting aside the order, that such an order could only be made if it was necessary for two purposes, namely, for the ends of justice or to prevent the abuse of the process of the Court. XLVII, r. 2—Court inherent power, if to be exercised in contravention of prohibition of statute, and if to be exercised when not tending towards substantial justice—statute, application of. In exercise of its inherent powers under s. 151 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court cannot assume jurisdiction to grant a review where it has been expressly forbidden by the Legislature to entertain such application. On any point specifically dealt with by the Code, the Court cannot disregard the letter of the enactment according to its true construction, though, as the Legislature cannot anticipate and make express provisions to cover all possible contingencies, it is the duty of a Judge to apply the provisions of the law not only to what appears to be regulated expressly thereby, but also to all cases to which just application of them may be made and which appears to be comprehended either within the express sense of the law or within the consequences that may be gathered from it. The inherent power of a Court can be invoked only for the attainment of the ends of substantial justice for the administration of which alone Courts exist. A sale certificate is merely evidence of title and does not create title, so that if the Court should refuse to grant such a certificate to the auction-purchaser, possession should not be delivered to him as required by the Code. This will not preclude him from suing for a declaration of title and for recovery of possession within 12 years of the date when the sale was confirmed. Where purporting to act under s. 151, Civil Procedure Code, a Munsif cancelled an order for delivery of possession passed by his predecessor on the ground that the application for delivery of possession having been made more than 3 years after the date of confirmation of the sale was manifestly barred by limitation. Held, that as the Munsif was expressly forbidden by statute to entertain an application for review, he could not entertain the application in exercise of his inherent powers. That the order should not have been made, as its only effect would be to drive the auction-purchaser to institute a suit. SASI BHUSAN MOOKERJEE v. RADHA NATH BOSE (1914) . . . . 19 C. W. In a suit for partition of joint family property by a Hindu, all the properties must be included in the action, and the reason for this proposition is to save the parties from multiplicity of proceedings. If by inadvertence, mistake, or fraud of any of the parties, some of the joint properties are not partitioned in the original suit, there will be no bar after the partition to have the properties, excluded at the first partition, divided when the mistake or fraud is discovered. Jogendra Nath Mukherji v. *Jugobundhu Mukherji, I. VI, r. 17, enables the Court to allow either party to alter or amend his pleadings at any stage on such terms as may be just. S. 153, C. P. C., empowers the Court to make itself all necessary amendments for the purpose of determining the real questions or issues raised in the action. This power is vested both in the original as well as in the Appellate Court. Srimohan Thakur v. *MacGregor, I. L. ——— O. I, r. 3, O. II, r. 3—Grades of several defendants in one suit—" Same act or transaction "—" Series of acts or transactions "—Practice. In reading O. I, r. 3, of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) it seems quite obvious that the word "same" which precedes the words "acts or transaction" governs also the words "series of acts or transactions" and must be read before those words also. The first condition to be fulfilled before joining several persons as co-defendants in the same suit is that the right to relief sought in the suit must arise against all the defendants from the same act or transaction or from the same series of acts or transactions. The second condition to be fulfilled under the rule is that some common question either of fact or law should arise against the defendants if separate suits were brought against such persons. Before a plaintiff can join several defendants in the same suit both the conditions laid down in the rule must be fulfilled, first, the relief sought against the defendants whether jointly, severally or in the alternative must arise from the same act or transaction or the same series of acts or transactions. And, secondly, there must rise between the plaintiff and all the defendants some common question of law or fact. The plaintiff may in one action unite several causes of action against several defendants provided that all such defendants are "jointly liable in respect of each and all of such causes of action" and that the condition precedent to the plaintiff being allowed to join several causes of action against several defendants, is that such defendants must all "have a joint interest in the main question raised by the litigation" and that causes of action joined in one suit against several defendants must be causes of action in which "the defendants are all jointly interested." It is not necessary, that every defendant should be interested as to all the reliefs claimed in the suit but it is necessary that there must be a cause of action in which all the defendants are more or less interested although the relief asked against them may vary. In an administration suit it is extremely undesirable that individual creditors should be added as parties unless they show some very strong reason. The willingness of the applicants to bear their own costs does not counterbalance the delay caused by the addition of a party and the consequent increase in the cost of other parties.

———— Death of some of the persons on whose behalf a suit was brought—impleaded as respondents in the Appellate Court—abatement of appeal—order that appeal has abated—whether a decree and open to appeal. The Jat proprietors, 393 in number, claimed to be alone entitled to the income of the shamilat land of the village as against the Brahman proprietors, 53 in number. The plaint was signed by 6 persons and was accompanied by a petition by the same persons under O. I, r. 8, Civil Procedure Code, praying that they be allowed to sue on behalf of all the Jat proprietors and that two of the defendants be permitted to defend the suit on behalf of all the Brahman proprietors. This was sanctioned by the Court and a decree was eventually passed in favour of the plaintiffs for a declaration of their rights as prayed. The defendants appealed and in the list of parties in their memorandum of appeal set out the names of 52 defendants as appellants and the 393 plaintiffs as respondents. On the date of hearing it was discovered that three of those respondents had died and applications to bring their legal representatives on the record had not been presented within the period of limitation. Thereupon the Lower Appellate Court decided that the appeal had abated in toto relying on Hadu v. Lala (41 P. R. 1915). On appeal to this Court, it was contended that no appeal was competent as the order of the Lower Appellate Court was not a decree. Held, that the order of the Lower Appellate Court was in effect that inasmuch as the interest of all the plaintiffs was common and the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiffs had not been brought on the record within time the whole appeal had abated and that such an order falls within the definition of the term "decree" and is appealable as such. Niranjan Nath v. Afzal Hussain (128 P. R. 1916 F. B.), followed. Held also, as the plaintiff's respondents who died were not among the six plaintiffs who had instituted the suit in accordance with the order of the Court under O. I, r. 8 of the Code Civil of Procedure but among the persons on behalf of whom the 6 plaintiffs had sued, they were not parties to the suit and were unnecessarily made respondents in the appeal. It was therefore not necessary to bring their legal representatives on the record and the appeal had not abated. Ram Diyal v. Mohammad Raju Shah (46 P. R. 1919), followed.

———— Parties, non-joinder, dismissal of suit for if proper—Amendment—O. II, r. 5, joining claims against executors personally and as executors—O. I, r. 1—Joinder of claim in the alternative as shebait and as owner—Inconsistent positions. Plaintiff alleged that one J was in possession of shares of coparcenary properties belonging to himself and others, including one N, from whose widow (it was averred) J had improperly obtained an ekrar under which he retained possession of N's share till his death. After his death defendants Nos. 2 to 6 (who, it transpired, were executors to the will of J) remained in possession of that share. After J's death N's widow adopted plaintiff as N's son, and plaintiff brought this suit to recover possession of N's share, with mesne profits as from the date of adoption, making defendant No. 1, who was heir and residuary legatee of J, and defendants Nos. 2 to 6 in their personal capacity, defendants, the allegation being that these defendants were keeping the plaintiff out of possession. The plaintiff stated that, so far as he had come to know on inquiry, the properties in suit were debutter properties and that he and others of the family had shebaits interest therein, but that, in case the properties were found not to be debutter, he might be allowed to recover as owner. The defendants, inter alia, objected that defendants Nos. 2 to 6 having been in possession as executors the suit could not proceed against them in their personal capacity, and that the plaintiff could not maintain the suit as a shebait and at the same time in his own right as owner. The first Court dismissed the suit on the first of these grounds, and was also of opinion that the suit was not maintainable by plaintiff alternatively as shebait and owner, his interest as shebait being in conflict with his interest as owner. Held, that though, under O. I, r. 9, the Court could not dismiss the suit on the ground that defendants Nos. 2 to 6 were not sued as executors, in order effectually and completely to adjudicate all the questions involved in the case, defendants Nos. 2 to 6 should be sued personally, as well as executors and defendant No. 1 (who was found not to be in possession) should be sued as residuary legatee and heir of J and the plaint should be amended accordingly. That O. II, r. 5, was no bar to the amendment as defendants Nos. 2 to 6 claimed to be in possession of the properties as part of J's estate and prevented the plaintiff from taking possession professedly in their character as executors. The word "estate" as used in O. II, r. 5, means both the "estate" rightly and properly held as executors and the "estate" in its physical sense. That the claim of the plaintiff in the alternative as shebait and as owner was not open to objection, having arisen out of the same transaction and there being really no conflict, the plaintiff claiming as owner only in the event of the properties being found to be not debutter. NIRPENDRO NATH RAY v. BIRENDRO NATH RAY (1917) . . 21 C. To meet an objection raised for non-joinder of parties, the plaintiffs subsequently applied to make the remaining heirs party-defendants to the suit. The lower Courts declined to make them parties on the ground that the claim as regards them was barred by s. 22 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908. The plaintiffs having appealed: Held, that the plaintiffs' right to redeem which they had when they filed the suit was not lost by their omission to make the remaining heirs parties. They were only necessary parties to save multiplicity of suits and to prevent the mortgagee being subjected to suits being filed against him in succession by various parties entitled to the equity of redemption. Held, also, that it was within the discretion of the Court under O. recover possession on tenants' failure to pay rent within three months—Defendants' failure and recovery of possessions by plaintiff—Prayer in the plaint for reservation of leave to bring a suit for rent not granted—Subsequent suit by the plaintiff to recover rent—Subsequent suit barred. A lease provided that on the tenants' failure to pay rent, the landlord should be entitled to take possession of the lands. The tenants having failed to pay the rent of two years, the landlord sued them and obtained a decree which directed that on the defendants' default to pay all the arrears of rent and costs within three months, the plaintiff should take possession of the lands. In the said suit the plaintiff had asked for permission to bring a separate suit for the rent in arrears for two years, but none was given. Subsequently the plaintiff having brought a suit for the said rent of two years: Held, that the suit was barred under O. II, r. 2, of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) as the claim in the suit for rent up to the date of forfeiture arose upon the same contract as did the landlord's right of forfeiture for non-payment of rent; that no necessity or reason existed for a separate suit for rent where there had been a forfeiture or non-payment and that the claim for possession and the claim for rent ought to be enforced in one suit, provided the cause of action was the same, unless the Court should give leave for the reservation of one of the remedies. thereby admitted to be due from B to A, amounting in all to Rs. 28,224 odd and prescribed the mode in which it was to be paid, namely, by a cash payment of Rs 224 odd (which was immediately paid) and by passing two promissory notes for Rs. 14,000 each "payable with interest" on two dates. The amount of interest was (probably by oversight) not specified, but there was no doubt that the parties intended that it would be at a certain customary rate which worked out to between 6 and 7 per cent. per annum. A, however, subsequently, and without communication with B, went to one of the arbitrators and (without bad faith either on his part or the arbitrator's persuaded him to alter both promissory notes by inserting therein 9 per cent as the rate of interest. A's action on the two promissory notes having been dismissed on the ground of material alteration, he sued B for two items of moneys amounting to Rs. 12,297 odd which he had claimed before the arbitrators and which were included in their award: Held, that the "receipt" constituted the award of the arbitrators. That whether it did or did not amount to an award it was clearly an "accord and satisfaction by a substituted agreement" whereby the respective rights of the parties inter se were abandoned in consideration of the acceptance by all of a new agreement. That the arrangement for the discharge of the unpaid balance of the amount found due by means of the promissory notes only expressed the mode of payment, which was essentially a matter of form only, the substance of the award being that the specified amount was actually due; the plaintiff could, therefore, sue for the balance due upon the agreement when his action on the promissory notes failed That the form of the plaintiff's action which was based on rights already extinguished by the agreement was faulty But the present action should be treated as one based on the new agreement, the defendant not having taken exception to plaintiff's statement of the grounds of his claim, so as to give him an opportunity to amend them at an earlier stage. That a claim on the promissory notes and a claim for the amount found due under the award were not the same cause of action, but were really inconsistent and mutually exclusive causes of action, and the plaintiff was not required in his suit on the promissory notes to ask for relief on the cause of action arising out of the agreement, by s. 34 of the Ceylon Civil Procedure Act. That the plaintiff's suit which was for a part only of the unpaid balance should be decreed. The plaintiffs had already brought a suit in the same Court against the present defendants to recover possession of some other properties as the reversionary heirs of N, but did not include therein the properties claimed in the present suit, though the defendants were in possession of them at the time of their previous suit. The plaintiffs alleged that they came into possession of the properties subsequently to the previous suit. The defendants contended that the suit was barred under O. II, r. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the suit for a declaration that the decree passed in the suit between the first and the second defendants was collusive and not binding in the plaintiffs, was not maintainable: Held, that the present suit was not barred under O. After the widow's death, B, a daughter of T, sued D and T (another daughter of T) to recover possession of survey No. 324; but the suit was at her request dismissed. B then having sold the three survey numbers to the plaintiff, the present suit was brought against the two daughters, and D and Z, to recover possession of the three survey numbers. The lower Courts dismissed the suit on the preliminary ground that since B omitted to sue in respect of survey numbers 403 and 404 in the first suit, the plaintiff was debarred from preferring his claim to those numbers in the present suit. The plaintiff having appealed: Held, that the suit was not barred by the provisions of O. He admitted that he was not in possession of this property, and paid an ad valorem court-fee on his plaint. This suit was settled by a compromise. Subsequently the plaintiff brought a separate suit in Allahabad for partition of some of the joint-family property situated in that district; but in this suit he alleged that he was in joint and undivided posssion and paid a court-fee of Rs. 10 as on ordinary partition suit: Held, that the omission of the Allahabad property from his suit in Sultanpur was not a bar to the plaintiff's second suit and that the case did not fall within O. Under the terms of the mortgage-deed in the present case the mortgagee could, when he brought the earlier suit, have sued either for interest or for possession, he could not have claimed both the reliefs at one and the same time. Consequently in suing for interest only he did not omit to sue in respect of, or intentionally relinquish, any portion of the claim which he was then entitled to make. More than three years after, no interest having been paid, the creditor brought a suit for interest alone and obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property. The decreted amount was deposited in Court and satisfaction entered. On a subsequent suit by the creditor for the principal sum and arrears of interest: Held, that the provisions of O. It also provided that, if interest remained unpaid for more than a specified time, the mortgagee might, without waiting for the expiry of the term of the mortgage, sue for either the unpaid interest or the whole amount of principal and interest then due. It further provided that, if the mortgage debt was not paid at due date, the whole amount, principal and interest, might be recovered by suit. After the expiry of the term of the bond, the mortgagee sued to recover arrears of interest only and obtained a decree, the defendant not entering an appearance. In that suit the plaintiff did not allege that he had a right to sue for the principal separately at a subsequent date: Held, on a construction of the bond in suit, and with reference to the former pleadings, that the subsequent suit was barred by O. Such co-parceners are not the heirs of the deceased but inherit by survivorship and become the owners of the interest of the deceased in the family estate as co-owners in their own right and by the legal extinction of the interest of the deceased co-parcener by reason of his death. The claim of the widow of such a deceased co-parcener for maintenance is clearly not against "the estate of the deceased" husband, but is against the property of which he was a co-parcener at the time of his death. Accordingly there is no misjoinder of causes of action if the widow in one suit sues the co-parceners of her deceased husband to recover her stridhan property improperly or illegally detained by them and also to enforce her right of maintenance of the estate of the joint family of which during his lifetime her husband was a member. The suit was decreed ex parte. Two of the defendants, the appellants, who were purdanashin ladies and the widows of an alleged member of the firm, made an application to set aside the decree on the ground that the summons had not been duly served on them and they had no knowledge of the suit and they were at any rate prevented by sufficient cause from appearing, when the suit was called on for hearing. It appeared that the peon could not obtain access to the appellants and there was no authorised agent to receive summonses on their behalf and that there were no adult members of the family of the ladies upon whom the service could be made. The copies of the summons and plaint were in consequence affixed by the serving peon on the main gate of the dwelling house. It further appeared that there was on the record a vakalatnama purporting to be signed by one of the appellants and an officer of the other appellant on her behalf which authorised a pleader to oppose the plaintiff's application for attachment before judgment. The appellants on being examined stated on oath that they had no knowledge of the suit and the vakalatnama was not put to them and the plaintiff did not take any steps to prove what purported to be the signature of one of the appellants on the vakalatnama nor did he establish that the other appellant had authorised her officer to sign the vakalatnama on her behalf: Held, that r. 17, O. V of the Civil Procedure Code is applicable to a case of the present description where the serving officer is not able to obtain access to a purdanashin lady who has to be served and cannot deliver or tender a copy of the summons to her. Where it is impossible for the serving officer to obtain access to the person to be served either by reason of the custom of the country or for any other reason the case may be held to be covered by the description in r. 17 "where the defendant cannot be found by the serving officer" and the requirements of that Rule having been fulfilled the appellants could not succeed on the ground that the summonses were not duly served on them within the meaning of r. 13 of O. IX of the Code. R. 19 of O. V imposes upon the Court the duty to satisfy itself that service has been properly effected and it is open to the Court even when there has been a technical compliance with the provisions of r. 17 to order service in another mode if the Court thinks fit to do so in the interest of justice. The Court may in a case of this description direct the issue of summons to purdanashin ladies by means of notice sent by registered post so that the cover may in due course reach the lady herself. In the present case the plaintiff-respondent having failed to rebut the allegation on oath made by the appellants, the High Court held on a consideration of the circumstances of this case that it was established that the appellants had no knowledge of the suit and they were prevented by sufficient cause from appearing when it was called on for hearing and the ex parte decree was set aside as against them. Suit by mortgagee for possession—Limitation—plaint setting out one ground for extension of period of—whether plaintiff can rely upon another ground as well—acknowledgment—Indian Limitation Act, IX of 1908, s. 19 and Art. 135. On 17th December 1898 a mortgage for Rs. 600 was executed by defendant's father in favour of the father of plaintiffs. Under its terms the mortgagor had to pay Rs. 40 per annum as interest and in case of default the mortgagee was to be entitled to realise interest by a separate suit or to claim possession of the mortgaged land in lieu of principal and interest. In 1906 the mortgagee brought a suit for arrears of interest for 3 years and obtained a decree on 18th August 1906. Since then further default in payment of interest was made, and on 6th June 1918 the plaintiffs instituted the present suit for possession of the mortgaged land. The suit was resisted on two grounds, viz.—(1) that it was barred under O. II, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, and (2) that it was barred by limitation under Art. 135, Indian Limitation Act. The Lower Courts dismissed the suit on both these grounds, and on appeal to the High Court, ABDUL RAOOF, J., upheld the decree on the first plea.

The plaintiffs appealed against this decision under s. 10 of the Letters Patent, and a Full Bench of the Court decided that the suit was not barred under O. II, r. 2. The case then went to a Division Bench for decision of the point of limitation. The plaintiffs in their plaint stated that their suit was in time on account of certain payments alleged to have been made by defendants. The Lower Courts held that these payments were not proved and that the plaintiffs could not be allowed to rely on an acknowledgment as they had not specified this in their plaint. In their written statement in the previous case, dated 25th June 1906, defendants admitted their liability under the mortgage: Held that the plaintiffs having mentioned one ground of exemption in their plaint was not debarred by the provisions of O. VII, r. 6, of the Code of Civil Procedure from taking another and an inconsistent ground to get over the bar of limitation and could consequently rely upon the acknowledgment made in the pleas of the previous case Hingu Mian v. *Heramba Chandra (13 Calc. Suit by mortgagee for possession—Limitation—plaint setting out one ground for extension of period of—whether plaintiff can rely upon another ground as well—acknowledgment—Indian Limitation Act, IX of 1908, s. 19 and Art. 135. On 17th December 1898 a mortgage for Rs. 600 was executed by defendant's father in favour of the father of plaintiffs. Under its terms the mortgagor had to pay Rs. 40 per annum as interest and in case of default the mortgagee was to be entitled to realise interest by a separate suit or to claim possession of the mortgaged land in lieu of principal and interest. In 1906 the mortgagee brought a suit for arrears of interest for 3 years and obtained a decree on 18th August 1906. Since then further default in payment of interest was made, and on 6th June 1918 the plaintiffs instituted the present suit for possession of the mortgaged land. The suit was resisted on two grounds, viz.—(1) that it was barred under O. II, r. 2, Civil Procedure Code, and (2) that it was barred by limitation under Art. 135, Indian Limitation Act. The Lower Courts dismissed the suit on both these grounds, and on appeal to the High Court, ABDUL RAOOF, J., upheld the decree on the first plea.

The plaintiffs appealed against this decision under s. 10 of the Letters Patent, and a Full Bench of the Court decided that the suit was not barred under O. II, r. 2. The case then went to a Division Bench for decision of the point of limitation. The plaintiffs in their plaint stated that their suit was in time on account of certain payments alleged to have been made by defendants. The Lower Courts held that these payments were not proved and that the plaintiffs could not be allowed to rely on an acknowledgment as they had not specified this in their plaint. In their written statement in the previous case, dated 25th June 1903, defendants admitted their liability under the mortgage: Held that the plaintiffs having mentioned one ground of exemption in their plaint was not debarred by the provisions of O. VII, r. 6, of the Code of Civil Procedure from taking another and an inconsistent ground to get over the bar of limitation and could consequently rely upon the acknowledgment made in the pleas of the previous case Hinga Mian v. *Heramba Chandra (13 Calc. ——— Dismissal of suit for plaintiff's non-appearance—Inherent jurisdiction of Court to restore a suit for ends of justice—Defendant protected in the matter of costs on restoration of plaintiff's suit. On the 7th January 1919, a suit was called on for hearing when counsel for the plaintiff finding that his client was not in Court to give evidence asked for an adjournment. The defendants appeared and opposed the application which was refused and the suit was dismissed under O. IX, r. 8. Subsequently the plaintiff applied for the restoration of the suit, stating in his affidavit that at about 11 A.M. of the day of hearing he had gone to the premises of his principal witness to bring him to the Court, that as the latter was away from the premises he waited for his return till about 12-30 noon, and that soon after he came to the Court with the witness and found that the suit was called on and dismissed. The plaintiff submitted that as the suit was fourteenth on the Board List for the day he did not expect it to be called before 1 P.M., but that he was ready and willing to pay the defendant's costs of the day on which the suit appeared on board for hearing. The trial Judge dismissed the application on 23rd January 1919, holding that no "sufficient cause" under O. IX, r. 9 of the Civil Procedure Code was shown by the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed: Held, (reversing the order of the trial Judge), that the case was one in which, whether there was sufficient cause or not, the Court should exercise its inherent jurisdiction to restore the suit for the ends of justice, provided the defendant was amply protected in the matter of costs Lalta Prasad v. Ram Karan (1912), 34 All. 426, followed. XXII, rr. 3 and 9—Non-appearance of plaintiff—Dismissal of suit—Order setting aside dismissal when plaintiff was found to have been dead at the time suit was dismissed—Orders and rules applicable only to defaulters wrongly applied in case of dead party. On the non-appearance of the plaintiff in a suit against the respondent, an order was made on the 4th of July, 1911, dismissing the suit for default. The plaintiff was in fact dead at the time order was made, and his son the appellant was engaged in performing his father's funeral ceremonies and was unable to attend Court. These facts were brought to the notice of the Deputy Commissioner in an pplication made under O. XXII, rr. 3 and 9, of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) by the appellant as the heir and legal representative of the plaintiff, which was filed and accepted by the Deputy Commissioner within the time allowed by law and an order was made on the 11th of September setting aside the dismissal of the suit, and substituting the name of the appellant on the record in place of the deceased plaintiff. On an application for revision of the Deputy Commissioner's order of the 11th of September made by the respondent under s. 115 of the Code to the Court of the Judicial Commissioner, that Court reversed the order and confirmed that decision on review, mainly on the grounds that the order of the 4th of July dismissing the suit was a proper order under O. IX, r. 8, of the Code; that the appellant's application to set aside that order was not within time, and was therefore barred, and that O. XXII, r. 3, of the Code applied only to a still pending suit, and not to one that had been dismissed: Held (reversing the decisions of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner), that these decisions were vitiated by applying to a dead man orders and rules applicable only to mere defaulter. An "abuse of the process of the Court" within the meaning of s. 151 of the Code had occurred by the course adopted in the Judicial Commissioner's Court. Quite apart from that section any Court might rightly have considered itself to possess inherent power to rectify the mistake inadvertently made in dismissing the suit. The order of the Deputy Commissioner setting aside the dismissal was manifestly sensible and correct, and their Lordships restored it, and remitted the case to India to be disposed of on the merits. ——— Ex-parte decree—applications for re-hearing, terms on which may be granted. In restoring a case for re-hearing under O. IX, r. 13, of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, the court may make it a condition that the decretal amount or some portion thereof be paid into court. In cases where there has been no default on the part of the party asking for re-hearing, e. g., where he has not been duly served, it is inequitable for the court to impose conditions. SHAM LAL SAHAI v. RAM NARAYIN LAL SETH 5 Pat. L. J. 420

——— Compromise decree application to set aside by one not a party to it—Appeal. Held, per CURIAM (RICHARDSON, J. dubitante). An application by a party to a suit to set aside a compromise decree on the ground that as against him the decree was ex parte, comes under O. 9, r. 13, of the Civil Procedure Code, and an appeal lies against the order refusing the application. BASIRDUDDIN v. SHEIKH SADHU (1918) 22 C. W. N. 571

——— O. XVII, rr. 2 and 3, scope of—Decree ex parte—Defendant absent at adjourned hearing after taking adjournment for letting evidence. Where, at the close of the plaintiff's case, an adjournment was granted to the defendant to enable him to produce his evidence and he failed to appear at the adjourned hearing, and the Court proceeded to pass a decree against him: Held, by the Full Bench, that the case came within O. XVII, r. 2, and the decree could be set aside under O. IX, r. 13. Per SADASIVA AYYAR and KUMARASWAMI SASTRIYAR, JJ. Rr. 2 and 3 of O. XVII, Civil Procedure Code, are mutually exclusive: r. 2 applies to all cases of absence of parties whether time was granted or not to do any of the acts mentioned in r. 3 of the Order, while r. 3 applies only to cases where parties are present and commit default of the kind mentioned in the rule. Per WALLIS, C. J. Rr. 2 and 3 of O. XVII are not mutually exclusive. R. 3 may be applied even in the absence of the defendant, but the decree will, none the less, be ex parte and liable to be set aside. Chandramathi Ammal v. *Narayanasami Aiyar, I. L. ——— Decree ex parte—Application to set aside decree—Appeal—Decree confirmed in appeal before hearing of application to set it aside. When the High Court has once confirmed a decree on appeal, it is not open to the Court which passed the decree to entertain an application to set the decree aside, and it makes no difference that the application to set the decree aside was filed before the appeal was disposed of. MATHURA PRASAD v. RAM CHARAN LAL (1915) I. L. R. 37 All. 208

——— Compromise petition purporting to be by all the defendants filed by those actually present in Court—Decree passed on such compromise petition—Subsequent repudiation by defendants not present at filing of petition—Jurisdiction of Court to set aside decree as ex parte decree under O. IX, r. 13. The petitioners instituted a suit for declaration of their title to, and for possession of, certain lands. Two of the defendants (Nos. 4 and 5) filed a petition of compromise and asked for a decree, so far as they were concerned, on that compromise and an ex parte decree against the other defendants. The Court however, ordered fresh service on the other defendants, and subsequent thereto defendants Nos. 4 and 5 appeared in Court with a petition of compromise purporting to be executed by defendants Nos. 1 to 3 as well as by themselves. On this petition a decree was made in terms of the compromise. Afterwards defendants Nos. 1 to 3 put in a petition to the Court stating that defendants Nos. 4 and 5 had no authority to present the petition of compromise on their behalf, that no summons had been served on them, and that the petition was fraudulently represented as being made by them. The Court acting under O. IX, r. 13, Civil Procedure Code, set aside the decree and ordered a re-trial of the case: Held, that the Judge when he made his order was under the impression that all the parties in the case were before him and that the petition was the petition of all the parties; consequently in granting the petition he did not intend to make it ex parte and the decree could not be treated as an ex parte one, and consequently O. IX, r. 13, Civil Procedure Code, did not apply. DAMODAR MISRA v. HRISHI NAIK (1914) 19 C. W. N. 118

——— Ex parte decree, application to set aside, to Original Court, after appeal determined by Appellate Court, if and when lies. Where the plaintiff sued D, his four sons and two nephews on a mortgage executed by D and D's father (now dead) and the suit having been contested by D's nephews only, a decree was made in plaintiff's favour in the presence of D's nephews but ex parte against D and his sons directing the sale of a two-thirds of the mortgaged property (being the share of D and his father) and making all the 7 defendants personally liable for the unsatisfied balance, if any, of the mortgage-debt; and against the decree an appeal was preferred by plaintiff wherein he sought to have a decree for the sale of the share of D's nephews as well, and the latter also preferred cross-objection against the portion of the decree which made them personally liable; and both appeal and cross-objections were allowed by the High Court: Held, that though D and his sons had been joined as respondents in the appeal and a self-contained decree was made therein, as no relief was claimed in the appeal against them, there was still as against D and his sons a subsisting ex parte decree over which the Subordinate Judge had control, and he had jurisdiction to entertain an application by D and his sons to set aside the decree. The Munsif heard the plaintiff's witnesses and decreed his claim. The defendants filed an application for a rehearing before the Munsif who, however, rejected it. They then appealed against the decree to the District Judge, who dismissed the appeal: Held, on second appeal by the defendants against the District Judge's decree, that the defendants might and should have appealed against the rejection by the Munsif of their application for a rehearing; but they had no right in their appeal from the decree to raise any question as to their non-appearance in the Court of first instance. ———— O. IX, r. 13; O. XXXII, r. 3—Guardian ad litem—Illusory appointment of guardian—Competence minors to have a decree passed without their being represented, set aside. A suit was brought against certain minor defendants naming as guardian ad litem their uncle, who was also a defendant. The uncle refused to act as guardian ad litem and stated that the minors lived with their mother. No notice was served upon the mother, but upon the application of the plaintiffs the Court Amin was appointed guardian ad litem of the minors. The plaintiffs did not deposit any amount for the expenses of the guardian, who did not take any steps to defend the suit or to inquire whether there was a defence. A decree was passed ex parte against the minors, and an application on their behalf, through their mother, to have the case restored was rejected. The Courts below found that the decree was not void and dismissed the suit. Held, that in the circumstances above set forth the minors were entitled to a declaration that the decree was null and void as against them. Walian v. *Banke Behari Pershad Singh, I. ——— O. XI, r. 14 (1882 Code, s. 130)—Discovery—High Court—Power to interfere with interlocutory order under the Charter Act (24 and 25 Vict., c. 104), s. 15—Order for discovery—Power of Court how to be exercised—Order before issues framed or written statement filed—Right of inspecting party to take copies and notes. Order for production of documents can be made under r. 14 of O. XI before the issues have been framed. The order must no doubt be limited to such documents alone as relate to matters in question in the suit and the Court must consequently, before it makes the order determine for the purpose thereof what are the matters in question in the suit, and this may well be done even before the issues have been framed. Provided this is done, an order for production of the defendant's documents may be made at the instance of the plaintiff even before the written statements have been filed. Union Bank of London v. Manby, 13 Ch. D. 239, Augustinus v. Nernicks, 16 Ch. D. 13, referred to. A party cannot obtain a commission for the inspection or production of books or papers in order that he may ransack them for evidence to make out his case. A party cannot ask for discovery with a view to ascertain the evidence on which his opponent's action or defence rests. But if the documents are material to the applicant's case, it is no objection to their production or inspection that they relate to the case of his adversary. The Court in ordering production should by its order specify the time and place of inspection and give direction as to the manner of inspection. The Court cannot delegate the exercise of its power of requiring the production of any document under the rule to a Commissioner. The party who has obtained an order to inspect documents may take notes of their content. He has also the right to take copies, but on application to the Court. "There is no possible ground for controversy that if the High Court is satisfied that an interlocutory order of the description now before us has been made without jurisdiction or under such circumstances as are likely to cause irreparable injury to one of the litigants, the High Court has ample power to set matters right under s. 15 of the Charter Act." Dhape v. Ram Pershad, I. VII—Suit by plaint in representative capacity, character of plaintiff if should be stated in cause title—Amendment of plaintiff by leave of Court, effect of. On the 30th July 1886, the plaintiff was declared to be a disqualified proprietor and the Court of Wards took charge of her estate. On the 7th June 1890, by a kobala the Court of Wards sold to the father of the defendant all the properties in suit except two mauzas. By a further kobala, dated 11th February 1901, the two mauzas were similarly conveyed. On the 1st August 1911, the Court of Wards released the property of the plaintiff from its charge. The plaintiff on 31st May 1912 sued for a declaration that the two kobalas were invalid and for restoration of possession of the properties concerned. As regards the two mauzas sold in 1901, the plaint originally did not show in the cause title the character in which the plaintiff sued, although the body of the plaint and the prayers made it clear that she sued as the shebait of certain idols. Subsequently with the leave of the Court the cause title was amended so as to show that the plaintiff sued on behalf of herself and as shebait and the necessary amendments in the body of the plaint were made. On the application of the defendant the Trial Judge tried the issues of law first and dismissed the suit. Held, that the application of r. 2, O. XIV, Civil Procedure Code, is not confined only to cases in which the issues of fact had not been settled. The rule also applies to cases where the Court has not postponed the settlement of the issues of fact, and the course adopted by the Trial Judge in disposing of the issues of law was not illegal. That O. VII, r 4, does not require that when the plaintiff sues in a representative capacity that fact should be stated in the cause title of the plaint although that is a convenient place to state it The amendments made in the plaint by the leave of the Court could not in any view amount to an addition or substitution of a new plaintiff within the meaning of s. 22 of the Limitation Act. That Art. 91 of the Limitation Act had no application to the suit in so far as it was instituted by the plaintiff as shebait of the idols. KUARMONI SINGH v. WASIF ALI MEERZA (1915) 19 C. W.
